VOL. 82. No. 282. PART ONE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 15, 1930. PAGES 1—14A  PRICE 10 CENTS

COMMERCE BODY CHECKING CENSUS IN PART OF CITY

College Students Making House-to-House Canvass of Strip From River to Western Limits.

FIRST WARD, 34,195, SIXTEENTH, 24,940

H. A. Kersting, Who Quit as Supervisor, Denies There Was Anything Wrong in Office.

A house-to-house canvass of a typical cross-section of St. Louis has been undertaken by the Chamber of Commerce in its endeavor to have all residents of the city counted in the census.

The inquiry is being made by a corps of college students. They are covering a strip of territory extending from the ricer to the western city limits, taking the names and addresses of all residents of each block. The data they get will be compared with the official census books and any names obtained in this way by the chamber and not found on the books will be submitted to census officials, with the request that they be added to the enumeration.

Executives of the chamber, disappointed with the preliminary figure of 817,334, announced last Tuesday as the city's population, said yesterday that they felt sure the city was much larger.

Expects Additions to Be Made.

The chamber for several weeks has campaigned with the aid of the newspapers, the radio and other mediums to see that all residents are counted. So far, names of 31,000 persons believed to have been missed in the enumeration have been reported to it. While it is recognized that some of these persons have been counted, the chamber is convinced that the inquiry produced several thousand names to be added. The preliminary official announcement did not include these.

It was felt by the chamber that additional names could be obtained only through a personal canvass such as that under way now. A chamber statement said: "The Chamber of Commerce feels that it is damaging to the city's business and civic progress to be known as a city which is slipping, and we are determined to do all in our power to present a true picture of St. Louis."

Population of Two Wards.

Population of two city wards was announced yesterday as follows: First Ward, the extreme northern part of the city, 34,195; Sixteenth, in a South Side and midtown area between Laclede and Lafayette avenues, 24,940. Direct comparisons are impossible because ward boundaries were changed in 1921, but the old First had 24,931 in 1920 and the old Sixteenth had 21,596.

Figures for seven of the 28 wards had not been issued when the city population was announced. Those for five wards remain to be published. The First Ward is the only one so far reported containing farms. It has 10 small ones.

Kersting Resigns.

E. K. Ellsworth, chief of the field division of the Census Bureau, has taken charge of the office of the Ninth Census District of Missouri, following the unexplained resignation of Supervisor Henry A. Kersting on Friday. As far as is known, the resignation followed quibbling in Kersting's office with census enumerators, some of whom had questions over their pay allowances and other matters.

Ellsworth recently investigated census work here, clothed with wide discretionary power to take "appropriate action" if he found conditions unsatisfactory. The resignation followed Ellsworth's inquiry. Ellsworth declined to comment and Director Stuart of the Census Bureau said at Washington that he had no details. It was Ellsworth who announced the St. Louis population last Tuesday before the reason for his presence here had become known generally.

Wife Also Quit Job.

Kersting's wife, who was his assistant, resigned also. Her pay was $6 a day. Kersting's compensation was to have been about $2200. The district embraced the 15 eastern wards of the city and Carondelet, Bonhomme and Meramec townships, comprising the southern and western parts of St. Louis County. Kersting had made preliminary population announcements for the city wards, Meramec township, his portion of Kirkwood and Eureka. Announcements re-

OWNER TOO POOR TO BET ON WINNER OF $50,000 DERBY

"Old Johnny" Best Had Only One Horse but It Won at 55 to 1.

CHICAGO, June 14.—Pride was in the step of "Old Johnny" Best, former owner of a corner grocery in Memphis, Tenn., as he pushed through the startled crowd at Washington Park race track toward the judges' stand this afternoon at the conclusion of the American Derby. Reveille Boy, a rank outsider, had galloped past Gallant Knight, to win the $50,000 purse by four lengths. Reveille Boy is Best's horse. His only horse.

As he reached the stand, the mutuel price, $113.08 for a $2 ticket, was flashed on the board across the track. Best, wrinkled as to suit, vestless, his collar wilted and one suspender threatening to snap, looked at the figures and shook his head.

"Look at that price," he said. "Me with $300 in my pockets and not a nickel on him."

Best came to Chicago less than a week ago, with just $800. He used $500 for a starting fee, and was left so nearly broke he did not dare risk even a $2 bet on Reveille Boy.

Gov. Emmerson of Illinois was in the stand to present a cup to the owner of the winner. "Old Johnny" received the trophy, someone thrust a great bunch of roses into his arms, and he started away with Johnny Paul, trainer of Reveille Boy, to visit the stall of the horse that Best bred from Last Reveille and Little Ann, and to get Bill Fronk, the jockey who rode Reveille Boy from a bad start to victory. It was Fronk's fourth wedding anniversary. Fronk, Paul and their wives helped "Old Johnny" celebrate.

GIVES BUTTERMILK TO JUROR AND LOSES $11,000 VERDICT

Woman Guilty of "Gross Misconduct," Judge Holds in Setting Aside Award.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., June 14.—A quart of buttermilk cost its donor $11,000 in Common Pleas Court today, when Judge L. S. Pardee set aside the verdict of a jury which awarded Mrs. J. Miksch of Copley, O., this amount from the city of Barberton, O., for alleged damages to her farm lands.

Mrs. Miksch charged that water in the Barberton reservoir seeped onto her farm and destroyed its value. The trial of the suit lasted six weeks.

During the trial Mrs. Miksch brought a quart of buttermilk to court and gave it to one of the jurors. Judge Pardee held this was "gross misconduct on the part of the plaintiff" and voided the $11,000 verdict.

PRESIDENT PAYS TRIBUTE TO HARRIET BEECHER STOWE

His Message Read at Memorial Service in Honor of Author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—A message from President Hoover was read today at service at New York University in honor of the one hundred and nineteenth anniversary of the birth of Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Several hundred Negroes attended the ceremonies.

The President's message said: "I send my cordial greetings to the colored citizens at their services in the Hall of Fame in honor of the one hundred and nineteenth birthday of Harriet Beecher Stowe. Her name will be ever memorable as humanitarian, ardent advocate of every cause of liberation of the spirit of man, and the friend of the colored race."

BANKER USES TEAR GAS PISTOL IN FIGHT OVER PARKING SPACE

R. A. Cissell of Washington Is Charged With Assault Following Altercation.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Robert Ashton Cissell, Controller of the Commercial National Bank, is charged with shooting Lewiston V. Howell with a tear gas pistol in a fight over a parking space. According to Washington police officers who investigated the trouble, Cissell fired the contents of the chemical weapon into Howell's face, burning his face and injuring his eyes. Cissell was arrested on a charge of assault.

24,000 BAGS OF CUBAN SUGAR BEING RUSHED TO GALVESTON

GALVESTON, Tex., June 14.—A steamer carrying 24,000 bags of Cuban raw sugar is racing to port here today in an effort to arrive before the new tariff law becomes effective.

Under the bill as sent to the White House, the duty on Cuban raw sugar is increased from 1.76 cents a pound to 2 cents. Taking advantage of the lower rate, the Imperial Sugar Co. of Sugarland, Tex., today paid $870,328 on 14,132 bags of Cuban raw in storage. The payment set a new record here for customs collections in a single day.

ANOTHER MARKET LOSER HELD FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

HIS SUCCESSOR PUTS SHORTAGE AT $60,000.

Speculator Arraigned in Justice Court and Sent to Jail in Default of $5000 Bond.

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ill., June 14.—Fred R. Bell, former cashier of the Illiana State Bank at State Line, Ind., is in jail here charged with embezzling $25,000 of the bank's funds.

The bank was closed by the State immediately after his arrest.

Bell, who is alleged to have confessed to the shortage, waived examination when arraigned in justice court today and was committed to jail in default of $5000 bond. Bell was discharged by the bank directors recently when discovery of a shortage was made. He is alleged to have admitted a defalcation of $12,000 at the time.

Samuel Adams, who succeeded him, discovered a further shortage in his accounts, authorities say, and the warrant charging embezzlement was issued. Bell had been speculating in stock, authorities said.

LONGWORTH-GANN FEUD FLARES UP ANEW IN CAPITAL

Wife of Speaker of House Declines to Attend Ambassador's Dinner for Dr. Prestes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Longworth-Gann feud, as the controversy over social pre-eminence between Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of Speaker Longworth, and Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister and offcial hostess of Vice President Curtis, is called, broke out again tonight when Mrs. Longworth declined to attend the dinner given by the Brazilian Ambassador to President Hoover and Dr. Julio Prestes, President-elect of Brazil, and the nation's guest.

Perhaps the reason was—and Washington society seemed unanimous on that—that President Hoover had agreed to escort Mrs. Gann on his arm to the banquet table in the brilliantly decorated hall of the Americas of the Pan-American Union. This the President did. President-elect Prestes escorted Senora de Telles, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, who is the dean of the Washington diplomatic corps.

Ever since the time early in the Hoover administration that Vice President Curtis demanded for his sister as hostess a social rank second only to that held by Mrs. Hoover, "Princess Alice" has been on the warpath. She contends, and has not back-tracked once, that the Speaker's wife takes precedence over the Vice President's official hostess, Mrs. Gann.

AIMEE M'PHERSON FINED $138 FOR CUSTOMS ACT VIOLATION

Improperly Declares Foreign Purchases on Arrival From Europe— Goods Held.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—United States customs officials ordered Aimee McPherson, evangelist, to pay $276 for improperly declaring certain of her foreign purchases on her arrival from Europe today.

Her declaration slip showed only $46 of European merchandise, but customs appraisers held the goods were worth $138. Under the rules, the evangelist must pay the American valuation of her purchases, of $138, plus a 100 per cent fine, or another $138.

Customs officials said she agreed to pay the $276 without dispute on Tuesday, after which she may take her purchases now held at the customs house.

EDISONS SPLIT ON POLITICS

Inventor for Fort, a Dry; Wife Against Him.

By the Associated Press.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., June 14.—Thomas A. Edison, arriving home from Florida yesterday, said he would vote for Representative Franklin W. Fort in the Republican primary because "Fort is a dry."

Mrs. Edison is a member of the women's committee supporting Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, a rival of Fort and an advocate of prohibition repeal.

MORROW VS. DRY LAW REAL ISSUE IN NEW JERSEY

FRANKLIN W. FORT PROHIBITION HOPE

Anti-Saloon League Backs Him, Fearing Election of Wet Republican of Presidential Caliber.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

TRENTON, N. J., June 14.—Once more New Jersey is holding the spotlight. Not since the spectacular rise of Woodrow Wilson to political eminence 20 years ago has an election in this State attracted such nation-wide attention as will center upon the result of the Republican senatorial primary next Tuesday.

The reason is ample. If Dwight W. Morrow is nominated and elected, as now seems probable, he will immediately and inevitably become the main hope of the millions of American citizens who desire the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. At once and automatically he will become the outstanding wet prospect for President of the United States.

The significance of the event is recognized by prohibitionists and antiprohibitionists alike. It explains the desperate campaign being waged by the national dry organization to defeat Morrow. It explains the anxiety in which Washington officialdom awaits the outcome. It is expected to bring out the heaviest vote ever cast in a New Jersey primary election.

Prohibition the Real Issue.

Other candidates are in the race, and efforts have been made to introduce other issues, but the real contest is that of Morrow versus the eighteenth amendment. Thus he defined it more than a month ago in his Newark speech advocating a return to state control over the liquor traffic, and thus it remains.

Until he made that speech, his only serious opponent was ex-Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, a retired millionaire vastly more concerned about getting back to Washington society than with the fate of great issues. "Curly Joe," he was called, back in the days when he was accustomed to play golf with President Harding and Senators Hale and Kellogg at the fashionable Chevy Chase Club. In those days he voted dry, but has since become converted to "modification" in some undefined form.

Morrow had been warned not to make the Newark speech. Regardless of his known conviction against the principle of national prohibition, he had been told the drys would accept him if he would avoid an open declaration. 'It was characteristic of him that he proceeded at once to make it.

Drys Put Fort Into Race.

The drys' answer was the announcement of the candidacy of Congressman Franklin W. Fort, ardently dry, and friendly with President Hoover. There is no doubt that Fort entered the race with a promise of the full support of the Anti-Saloon League and other prohibition organizations.

Officers of the dry organizations have kept faith with Fort. They have deluged the state with literature stating that Morrow's candidacy is the most dangerous attack ever made on prohibition, excepting the presidential candidacy of Gov. Alfred E. Smith. They have imported speakers to campaign for Fort. They have purchased advertising space in the newspapers. Aside from them, Fort has virtually no organization. The actual directing mind behind his campaign is that of the Rev. James K. Shields, superintendent of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League. The League office is the real Fort headquarters.

The New Jersey drys have staked their hopes on Fort. If he is defeated for the nomination, they will not have a candidate in the race, unless they should decide to get behind Miss Esther Elfreth, who is running on the old Prohibition party ticket.

Democratic Nominee Is Wet.

Alexander Simpson, who will be the Democratic nominee, is wetter than either Morrow or Frelinghuysen, and the date has passed when an independent dry could be entered in the race.

One of the most amazing things about this campaign is the almost universal admission that Fort cannot be elected if he is nominated. Few concede him more than an

DIES OF WOUNDS IN FIGHT OVER ESTRANGED WIFE

Ray Hughes, Shot in Venice by Clarence Scruggs Whom He Also Wounded, Succumbs.

Ray Hughes, 25-year-old steelworker, died last night at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Granite City, of bullet wounds suffered early yesterday in a sidewalk fight in Venice, with Clarence Scruggs, an admirer of Hughes' estranged wife.

The two men, both employed in Granite City steel mills, shot each other with revolvers while standing a few feet apart in the presence of Mrs. Hughes. Scruggs is in a serious condition with a wound in the abdomen. Hughes was shot in the right lung, left thigh, right hand and both arms.

Mrs. Hughes, who has resided for the last year at her parents' home, 1317 Robin street, Venice, under her maiden name, Miss Sunshine McKinney, was at Hughes' bedside with his family when he died. Earlier in the day she had refused to visit him and had said Scruggs fired in self-defense, and Hughes "got what he was looking for."

Mrs. Hughes, who is 23 years old, and Scruggs, 24, were sitting in an automobile in front of her home shortly after midnight, when an automobile circled the block three times passing their machine. They thought nothing of it until her husband alighted from the machine half a block away and walked toward them.

When her husband reached the parked car, Mrs. Hughes said, he turned a flashlight into the window and Scruggs stepped out holding a revolver behind his back. According to Mrs. Hughes, her husband raised a revolver and fired two shots at Scruggs, who replied with five shots. Both men collapsed.

At the hospital both men became delirious after refusing to answer questions about their fight. Hughes lived at 1031 Third street, Venice; Scruggs at 2205 East Nineteenth street, Granite City. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were married two years ago and had one child, which died.

TAX RECEIPTS EXPECTED TO WIPE OUT U. S. DEFICIT

Surplus of $100,000,000 Likely at End of Hoover's First Fiscal Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—With a deficit of $240,652,630 in the United States Treasury on June 12, officials look to receiuts from the second installment of the tax on 1929 incomes to be received Monday to bring in enough money to enable the Treasury to complete the first full fiscal year of President Hoover's administration with a surplus.

Secretary Mellon and his subordinates express confidence the Government will end the year with a surplus, possibly not as large as the $186,000,000 balance of last year. From present indications it will be more than $100,000,000

For the fiscal year which ends June 30 the Government has collected $3,457,920,019, while it has spent in the eleven months and twelve days $3,698,572,649. Receipts for the same period of the previous year were $3,352,145,093, while the expenditures were $3,521,011,774.

The second installment of the 1929 tax is expected to amount to $500,000,000 or more, which will assure that the total income of the Government for the year will amount to approximately $4,000,000,000.

PRESIDENT SAID TO HAVE BEGUN MESSAGE GIVING IT HIS APPROVAL

Expected to Say That While Measure Is Unsatisfactory to Him in Some Respects, He Hopes Flexible Plan Will Remedy Defects.

FINAL BALLOT IS 222 TO 153

27 Republicans Vote Against Hawley-Smoot Legislation and 14 Democrats Give Revenue Proposal Their Sanction.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Now it rests with President Hoover to say whether the Hawley-Smoot high tariff bill of 1930, passed by a majority of two votes in the Senate and of 69 in the House, shall supersede the existing Fordney-McCumber act. The bill will reach the White House for the President's approval or rejection early next week.

Acting under a special rule, which required a single vote on two pending conference reports, and forbade any motion to recommit, the House this afternoon put the final touch of Congressional approval on the bill by a vote of 222 to 153. There never had been any doubt as to what the House, with its substantial regular Republican majority, would do.

President Hoover has not publicly said whether he will sign or veto the bill. The general belief is that he will sign. He is understood to have begun already the preparation of a message to Congress, in the nature of a message to the people, setting forth the reasons for his action.

Relies on Flexible Provisions.

The President is expected by Republican leaders to say that, while the bill is unsatisfactory to him in some, perhaps many, respects, he feels that he will be able to cure its inequalities through the use of his powers under the flexible provisions. That it contains inequalities has not been disputed by even its most ardent champions.

The end of the 18-month tariff struggle in Congress was greeted with a shout of mingled relief and triumph from the Republican side of the House chamber.

Twenty-seven Republicans, among them Mrs. Ruth Pratt of New York, stepped across party lines to oppose the bill through direct ballots or pairs, while 14 Democrats voted for it and Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen of Florida, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, recorded her protectionist views through a pair.

Mrs. Pratt voted against the bill because of its new high rates on sugar. Mrs. Owen, like the Senators from her State, voted for it because of the protection given Florida fruits and vegetables. The House entered the last phase of the contest so weary that it used only part of the three hours allowed for debate in the special rule of procedure.

Most of the members who desired to get their views in the record contented themselves with the time-honored privilege of "extending" their remarks.

Cochran Would Kill Bill.

Several of the Democrats, including Cochran of St. Louis, voiced the hope that President Hoover would kill the bill.

Crisp (Dem.), Georgia, said that if the President should sign the bill, pressure should at once be brought to bear to induce him to remedy "some of the most outrageous wrongs" through use of his power of revision.

"The duties on sugar, shoes, lumber, cement, clothes, household and kitchen furniture and utensils and steel products can all be reduced 50 per cent by the President," said Crisp.

Will he exercise his powers? Time alone will tell. For the wel-

MME. LUPESCU REPORTED GOING TO BUCHAREST

King Carol of Rumania Said to Have Sent Escort for Woman He Left to Take Throne.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 14.—A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Berne, Switzerland, says Mme. Lupescu is on the way to Bucharest in the charge of two trustworthy Rumanian officers, both friends of King Carol.

Shortly before Carol started for Bucharest to claim the crown worn by his father and son, the dispatch says, he went to Mme. Lupescu and informed her the interests of the Rumanian state made it imperative that he return.

Mme. Lupescu approached him timidly and, then throwing her arms around his neck, sobbed her resignation and a wish to be remembered by him always.

"I know you must go, but when you are back in Bucharest you'll forget me as you have forgotten the others."

Carol answered with a vow that he would never forget her and promised an arrangement whereby she would return to Rumania and would be always provided for Mme. Lupescu expressed fear at traveling alone, so Carol promised her an escort of two officers and the private secretary who served him in his exile.

To Use Assumed Name.

The dispatch says Mme. Lupescu will take the Orient express tomorrow at Vienna and travel to Bucharest under an assumed name. The three with her were named as Maj. Paschavano, Col. Precup and Georges Dimitescu. She is said at present to be at Baden, near Vienna.

Details of the Rumanian situation at the time of Carol's coup d'etat were disclosed by Barbu Jonescu, wealthy Rumanian, who was a friend of Carol in exile, in an interview with the Associated Press. Jonescu declared that at the time of Carol's coup the Liberals in Rumania were offering the throne to Prince Charles of Belgium, second son of King Albert.

The offer Jonescu explained as deriving from the feeling of the Rumanian peasants that they must have a responsible King to whom they could take their troubles. Michael, the boy-king, failed to meet this need, and the Liberals planned accordingly to bring in an entire new dynasty. A delegation was sent to meet Prince Charles, but before a reply could be received at Bucharest Carol flew to Rumania and ascended the throne.

Secret Letters From Ileana.

Jonescu said Princess Ileana would write Carol of events in Rumania, sending the letters through an intermediary since she knew that if addressed directly to him in Paris, they would be censored. He said Carol's first break with Queen Helen occured in 1925 when he went to England at the time of the funeral of the Queen mother, Alexandra.

"Carol said that he had been insulted by the Bratianu Government over airplane purchases he had made in England. He demanded an apology, and said that if it was not forthcoming before time for him to return to Rumania he

GOSSIP ON WHY SECRET PAPERS ARE WITHHELD

Dawes Reported to Have Made Personal Allusions to Diplomats in Notes Preceding London Parley.

MOST OF THEM ARE MEMORANDA

Hoover Said to Feel That to Give Them to Senators Might Do Mischief and Could Do No Good.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Nothing has come to light regarding the papers which Secretary of State Stimson has refused to turn over to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, except that they relate to diplomatic conversations bearing upon the recent London naval conference.

The committee has never specified any particular papers. Obviously, since it is not acquainted with the documents, it could not single out any special ones to be asked for. Nor has the committee, as a committee, demanded the papers.

Just What Happened.

Here is what has happened: First, Senator Johnson of California, leader of the opposition to the treaty, wrote a letter to Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, calling for all the papers that had anything to do with the London treaty. Borah forwarded the letter to Secretary Stimson. The latter furnished paraphrases of some of the papers, but withheld others on the ground that to divulge the confidences contained in them might "endanger future delicate international negotiations." Stimson assured the committee that the delegation at London had entered into no secret commitments, and that two of its members, who also were members of the naval conference delegation, were fully informed regarding every step of the proceedings.

Committee "Asserts Right."

Pointing out that the Senate was a part of the treaty-making power of the Government, Johnson procured the adoption of a resolution by the committee "asserting its right" to have access to all papers and records touching the London negotiations. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 10 to 7, with three not voting. It did not make any further demand for the documents. It was adopted for the record, to guard against the establishment of a precedent.

After Stimson's letter of Saturday, in which he acknowledged receipt of the resolution but said nothing about sending the papers to the committee, Borah accepted the incident as closed and called a meeting of the committee for Monday, when he hopes to get the treaty reported by the Senate.

Won't Pledge Secrecy.

Through Senator Reed, the State Department and President Hoover have told the committee that they are quite willing for its members to look at the documents in question, on the understanding that they are to be held in confidence. Johnson and the other treaty opponents have rejected this offer. They are unwilling, they say, to give a pledge of secrecy in advance, but must reserve to themselves, after examining the papers, the right to say whether or not they should be kept secret.

It is learned by the correspondent that the papers in question consist mainly if not wholly of memoranda relating to the Hoover-MacDonald rapidan conversations and of memoranda that passed between the State Department and Ambassador Dawes during the preceding negotiations. The Dawes messages are said to contain a "hell and Maria" strain of language, seasoned with personal allusions to various diplomats. President Hoover takes the position that to publish material of this sort might do international mischief without throwing any light on the treaty.

ALLAN HOOVER CALLS ON SON OF BRAZIL'S NEW PRESIDENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Allan Hoover, younger son of the President, met and welcomed to this country today Fernando Prestes, son of the President-elect of Brazil.

Arriving in the capitol to spend the week-end at the White House the President's son called informally upon the Brazilian youth at the home of Eugene Meyer, where the Latin-American party is living.

Tonight he was a guest at the dinner given by the Brazilian Ambassador at the Pan-American Union in honor of President Hoover and tomorrow will go with his father to bid farewell to President-elect Prestes and Fernando.

Allan Hoover plans to go to the presidential camp in Virginia Monday to spend most of the week with his mother, who is convalescing there. He will work the remainder of the summer for the American Radiator Co. before returning to the Harvard School of Business Administration for his senior year. Allan has been employed by Clarence M. Woolley, an old friend of the President.

fare of the nation I hope he will."

Chairman Hawley of the Ways and Means Committee and Congressman Garner, the minority leader, fired the main broadsides of oratory for and against the bill.

Hawley said the protection given by the bill was nation-wide, non-sectional. Denouncing the "propaganda in the press against the bill by certain large interests," he charged that their motive was to open the American market to goods made with cheap foreign labor.

Hawley capped his argument with the prediction that the bill would increase prosperity and the Republican side gave him prolonged applause.

Assailed as "Titantic Larceny."

Answering him, Congressman Black (Dem.) New York, characterized the bill as "titantic larceny" and "super-extortion."

"Old King Caunte Grundy held up his hand and the flow of trade stopped," said Black. "He has passed away politically, but this tariff bill is his last will and testament to take care of all his blood relatives of protection."

Minority Leader Garner, in a fervent speech, declared that the Ways and Means chairman had "double-crossed" some of his own supporters on lumber. Garner said that in 90 per cent of the adjustments made by the conference committee, it selected the highest rate possible. He denounced the Tariff Commission, supposedly a nonpartisan group, for "issuing propaganda for this Republican tariff bill."

Cochran (Dem.), St. Louis, predicted that the verdict of Congress would bring "Gloom to the home of every citizen who understands the situation."

"But I say," he added, "there is still hope. That hope rests with the President. He can prevent further suffering among the unemployed and add to his prestige by returning the bill to Congress without his approval."

In the debate today the Democrats hurled "gag" charges at the majority leaders for bringing in a rule calling for a single vote on the two conference reports waiving all points of order to return it to conference.

The rule was adopted, however, by 220 to 139, a majority of 81, or 12 more than the margin given the bill on final passage.

The vote of the Missouri Congressional delegation follows:

COOLIDGE URGES DEEPER RESPECT FOR AUTHORITY

"Danger Is That Our Self-Government May Run Away With Us," He Tells Amherst Alumni.

By the Associated Press.

AMHERST, Mass., June 14.—Addressing 850 fellow alumni at luncheon this afternoon, former President Calvin Coolidge declared that Amherst College had given him, in common with the other members of his class, the respect for constituted authority and for their fellow men that he believed to be fundamental for human success.

"We were taught a respect for authority, a lesson that needs always to be kept in mind," Coolidge said. "There is little danger that our country may fossilize. The danger is that our self-government may run away with us, and that danger lies in lack of regard for constituted authority. I hear of the younger generation today that it is disturbing; the younger generation is always disturbing old fellows. Yet, the world has gone on and the flippant persons of today are the serious, character-building citizens of tomorrow. I do not propose to be disturbed about the younger generation.

"Society is organized as never before and we must observe the rules and regulations if we, ourselves, are to prosper and build character.

"Another principle instilled in our minds at Amherst was a wholesome regard for each other. The Amherst doctrine at that time was not to pull the angels down, but to raise man up to their standard—that doctrine has helped me in many situations.

"I want to commend the success that has marked the course of the college and express confidence in its teachings and its ability in maintaining the standards of its courses. It will always be an inspiration to seekers of truth."

MORROW SPENT $44,002 IN NEW JERSEY CAMPAIGN

Frelinghuysen Reports Expenses as $46,547 and Fort, $43,000 in Senatorial Race.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., June 14.—Expenditures in the Republican primaries for the United States senatorial nomination were filed today by Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, Franklin W. Fort, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and John A. Kelly.

Ambassador Morrow said he spent $44,002.34, of which $15,000 was contributed by himself. The total contributions to his fund were $63,603. An attached statement said the amount above the $50,000 allowed under New Jersey law for primary campaign expenses would be returned to the givers pro rata together with any other money not expended. Among the contributors are: T. W. Lamont, Englewood; Thomas Cochrane, New York; Cornelius N. Bliss, Seward Pooser, both of Englewood, $5000 each; United States Senator Hamilton F. Kean, $1000; Daniel Pomeroy, Republican National Committeeman, Englewood, $1000.

Kelly said he had spent nothing, although he had received contributions of $255.20.

Frelinghuysen reported spending $46,847.55, all of which he himself contributed.

Fort said he spent $43,000, of which he contributed $34,000 and his wife and his sister $1000.

outside chance to defeat Simpson, because the State as a whole is overwhelmingly wet. What, then, is the purpose of the Fort candidacy, and how does one explain the zeal of his supporters?

The answer and explanation are found in the reiterated warning of the dry leaders—that the nomination and election of Morrow comprise the gravest threat now confronting national prohibition. It is agreed that by nominating Fort they probably would insure the election of a dripping wet Democrat, Simpson. That matters little. Simpson is a Democrat, and his election would merely add one to the pitifully small wet minority in the Senate. The important thing from the dry standpoint is to kill off Morrow, and do it quick.

Why Drys Fear Morrow.

Why do they consider him so dangerous? First, because his high character, great ability, brilliant attainments and general popularity make him a formidable foe to anything he opposes. Second, because he has demonstrated that he is a natural leader. Third, and most important, because he is a Republican possessing an extraordinary number of qualifications which go to make up a presidential prospect.

The outcome of the presidential election in 1928 convinced the dry leaders they had nothing serious to fear from the candidacy of a wet Democrat, especially if he happened to be a Roman Catholic, or appeared to have a touch of the Bowery about him. But a wet Republican candidate, recognized as the outstanding Presbyterian layman in his State, possessing culture, already distinguished by his achievements in the fields of law, finance and diplomacy, and having for a son-in-law the nation's most popular hero—that would be something very, very different, and well the dry leaders know it.

Such men as the Rev. Mr. Shields, the Rev. F. Scott McBride, and Bishop Cannon are realists. No shrewder political leaders exist in the United States. When they say Morrow must be "killed off quick," they know exactly what they are about.

Whether it can be done is another matter.

Morrow's Chances Improve.

Every impartial observer to whom this correspondent talked expects Morrow to be nominated. Among 20 reporters who have covered every phase of the campaign for New Jersey papers, that opinion was unanimous. It is shared by the Democratic leaders who have watched the fight from the sidelines. As one observer expressed it, "Morrow has all the class, and he has had all the breaks."

Three weeks ago this feeling was not present. Fort had recently entered the race, and several influential leaders had declared for him, after previously declaring for Morrow.

The Anti-Saloon League machinery has been set in motion, and there was deep concern over its possible effectiveness. Finally, it was reasoned that with two wets and one dry running for a nomination in a party said to be almost equally divided between wets and drys, the dry had a much better chance to win.

Obviously, if Morrow and Frelinghuysen should divide the west vote between them, and Fort receive the solid dry vote, Fort was almost certain to be nominated.

It does not seem to have worked out that way. Numerous influential drys are working for Morrow despite his stand on prohibition, for the simple reason that they welcome the opportunity to have the State represented by a man of his eminence.

Lindbergh's Father-in-law.

The Republican State organization is functioning powerfully in Morrow's behalf and it is most effective in the rural counties where dry sentiment is normally strongest. One local reporter who made a thorough canvass of the "Pine Barrens"—as the southern backwoods counties are called—said he found the people apparently more interested in Morrow's status as Lindbergh's father-in-law than in his opinion of the eighteenth amendment.

As is known, the effectiveness of the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U. in political campaigns depends very largely on the co-operation of the Protestant churches, especially of the Methodist and Baptist denominations. In New Jersey, the most numerous Protestant sect is the Presbyterian. Not only is Morrow a member of it, but he is a trustee of Union Theological Seminary, the largest training school for Presbyterian ministers in the country, and has been a generous donor to its support.

To work up church sentiment against a man of that type is difficult, as dry leaders have discovered. Various instances are reported in which pastors, endeavoring to aid Fort's cause, have been promptly silenced by the protests of the leading members of their congregations. Morrow simply is too overwhelmingly "respectable" to be made the target of an effective moral crusade.

An impressive sign may be found in the attitude of Fort's Congressional colleagues. New Jersey has 10 Republican members in the House of Representatives. Six of them, including Fort, are drys. Excluding Fort himself, the entire delegation—wets and drys alike—are vigorously supporting Morrow for the nomination.

How G. O. P. Organization Stands.

Again, there are 21 counties in the State. In all but two or three the Republican vote is distinctly dry. Yet Fort is being supported by one county chairman, Frelinghuysen by one and Morrow by the other 19.

The hope of Fort leaders that the Republican vote will divide about evenly on the prohibition issue is not sustained by experience. In the last Republican senatorial primary, held two years ago, Kean who was moist received 167,000 votes; Stokes, a downright wet, got 142,000; Frelinghuysen, then running as a dry, was third, with 137,000; Mrs. Feickert, a dry, got 26,000, and Gray, a wet, 25,000. In other words, the total moist and wet vote was 334,000 and the total dry vote 163,000.

A defeatist spirit is discernible in the Fort and Frelinghuysen camps, and there appears to be a general belief that Frelinghuysen would have withdrawn had not so much money been spent in his behalf.

An outstanding dry leader in the Fort campaign complained to this correspondent that "the moral forces of the State" seemed unable to appreciate the "threat" implied in Morrow's candidacy. He commented bitterly that they had been "dazzled by Morrow's reputation" and had "failed to realize that a great moral principle (prohibition) is more important than the ambition of any individual, however worthy he may be."

Fort's Colleagues for Morrow.

The same leader, who was unwilling that his name be used, spoke scathingly of the five dry Republican Congressmen—Fort's colleagues—who are supporting Morrow. He pointed out that the Republican State convention will meet immediately after the primary to draft a platform, and that if Morrow is nominated it will be compelled to adopt a plank declaring for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Indeed, Morrow has served notice that he will not run on any other kind of platform.

"Thus we will be confronted with the spectacle of five dry Congressmen running for re-election on a wet State platform—and all of them pledging their support to the policies of President Hoover, who is committed to prohibition," the dry leader remarked. Then he hastily added: "That is, if Morrow is nominated. Personally, I think Fort had a good fighting chance."

A Trial to His Managers.

Morrow's method of campaigning has reduced most of the professional politicians to a state of unmasked bewilderment and none confess their bafflement more freely than those ostensibly engaged in managing his campaign. He will do none of the clever things they want him to do, and he insists on saying most of the things they want him to avoid. His decision to declare for repeal of the eighteenth amendment was made over their virtually unanimous protest. They pointed out—with unquestioned accuracy—that he had only to mumble something about "a popular referendum" and skim over the subject, to win in a walk.

He is notoriously absent-minded, and almost wholly oblivious to the condition of his clothing. Someone has to keep reminding him to tie his shoestrings, or pull his necktie around to the front of his collar. He always puts on the first suit he finds in the closet, and never remembers to have one pressed. He simply will not bother to look like the stateman he is advertised to be.

Not a Back-slapper.

If he submits to being towed around to factory meetings, it is only to talk about our relations with Mexico. If he lets himself be dragged to a midnight ball in a dance hall, he insists on discussing the naval treaty and international peace. To kiss babies and slap backs, in the manner of "Curly Joe" Frelinghuysen, is not within the range of Morrow's imagination. No more could he indulge in tub-thumping and bell-ringing for "God and the American home" after Fort's fashion. Such things are not in his makeup.

Often he entirely omits to mention political subjects, and contents himself with describing his observation of life among the Mexican peons. His opponents charge him with dodging issues. He never replies. Perhaps, being so absent-minded, he has forgotten that anyone is running against him.

To cap it all, when he was allowing himself to be rushed to the eighth or ninth meeting of the evening, and is scheduled to deliver only three more 10-minute speeches, he suddenly announces in his quiet, abstracted way that his feet hurt, and that he is going to the hotel and go to bed. Whereupon he goes to the hotel and goes to bed.

Keeps Son-in-Law Out of It.

During the present campaign it was inevitable that some bright manager would conceive the idea of having the candidate transported about over the State by his famous flying son-in-law. That trick was too obvious, and too obviously good to be overlooked. Nor would it have been a strange occupation for Lindbergh, who once did the same thing for his own father, then a candidate for Governor of Minnesota. Only Morrow wouldn't hear of it. He made one trip in his son-in-law's plane, when it was the only way he could keep an engagement with his family.

All this, of course, is the stuff of which legends are made, and legends very often are the stuff of which presidents are made. Another Amherst man—a classmate, incidentally—became president on the strength of a good story which was less than 40 per cent true. There are scores of good stories about Morrow that are 100 per cent true.

The legend of his "availability" is growing rapidly—rather too rapidly to suit some of Mr. Hoover's friends, and far too rapidly to suit the defenders of the eighteenth amendment. If Morrow is not "killed off" here next Tuesday, he will be hard to kill.

This is the real significance of the election.

LOCUST AT TWELFTH

SCENIC HIGHWAY FOR WEST PART OF COUNTY PLANNED

STATE APPROVAL OF ROUTE SOUGHT

Cost Estimated at $600,000 Will Be Paid Back by Highway Commission in Annual Installments.

Plans for a 13-mile paved scenic highway across the hills of the western part of St. Louis County from a point south of Eureka to a point northwest of Chesterfield, by way of Glencoe, Grover and Monarch, were announced yesterday by County Highway Engineer Jablonsky.

Cost is estimated at $600,000, of which the cost of the surfacing alone, about $300,000, will be paid back by the State Highway Commission in annual installments of $50,000 a year from the farm-to-market or supplementary road portion of the $75,000,000 State road bond issue of 1928.

The County Court has designated the route and asked the State for approval. The State has sought the recommendation, being prepared to devote funds toward the county's share of the supplementary system.

Negotiations are being made for the additional right-of-way needed for a three and one-half mile portion between Wild Horse Creek and Sheppard roads. Jablonsky said it was expected that concrete would be laid on this stretch this year and that the entire road would be paved by the end of next year's work season.

It has not been decided whether the right-of-way shall be 60 or 80 feet wide. The route will follow existing roads in part but will deviate for the sake of directness.

Route of New Road.

The northern end will be at the site of the highway bridge the State proposes to build over the Missouri River into St. Charles County for the new location of a superhighway carrying United States highway No. 40. From there the scenic route will cut south across country to Monarch, on the Rock Island Railroad. Between Monarch and Grove, which is on Manchester road, it will follow in general the course of Eatherton road. Between Grover and Glencoe, which is on the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Meramec River, it will follow generally the course of an existing road.

From Glencoe to Eureka, and south to Bald Hill Bridge, the route will be over Old State road. Bald Hill Bridge crosses the Meramec at the Jefferson County line. Jabonsky said that Jefferson County has taken similar steps to provide a concrete road from Bald Hill Bridge to House Springs, which is on Gravois road. It is possible that Jefferson County will arrange an extension over the old route between House Springs and Barnhart, which is on United States Highway No. 61, south.

This new route will form an outlying belt connection between No. 50, No. 50 (Manchester road), the new No. 66 (Antire road at Eureka), No. 30 (Gravois road at House Springs) and No. 21, which is to be extended by the State from De Soto to House Springs. It will furnish a needed traffic cut-off to avoid St. Louis in going between the northern and southern parts of the State.

20-Foot Pavement.

The county will obtain the right of way, subject to approval of the location by the State, and build the new road under State supervision. The concrete pavement will be 20 feet wide.

Two important paving contracts under the $10,000,000 1928 county road bond issue were awarded by the County Court on Friday. Each provides for 20-foot concrete. One is for North and South road throughout University City, from a point near Kingsbury avenue to Page avenue, a distance of 9482 feet. The price is $59,311, compared with Jablonsky's advance estimate of $74,548. The other is Sutter avenue, University City, and Wellston, for 3217 feet, between Bartmer and Page avenues. This price is $19,990, compared with the estimate of $21,60 . The contractor for both is the Webb-Boone Paving Co.

Bids were received by the court last week for a 20-foot concrete pavement for 10,032 feet, on Dorsett road between Link and Fee roads and on Fee Fee between Dorsett and the Creve Coeur trolley line at Midland avenue. The only bid not rejected was that of the William A. Riley Construction Co., for $88,110. The engineer's estimate was $88,398.

SCENIC HIGHWAY FOR WEST PART OF COUNTY PLANNED

STATE APPROVAL OF ROUTE SOUGHT

Cost Estimated at $600,000 Will Be Paid Back by Highway Commission in Annual Installments.

Plans for a 13-mile paved scenic highway across the hills of the western part of St. Louis County from a point south of Eureka to a point northwest of Chesterfield, by way of Glencoe, Grover and Monarch, were announced yesterday by County Highway Engineer Jablonsky.

Cost is estimated at $600,000, of which the cost of the surfacing alone, about $360,000, will be paid back by the State Highway Commission in annual installments of $50,000 a year from the farm-to-market or supplementary road portion of the $75,000,000 State road bond issue of 1928.

The County Court has designated the route and asked the State for approval. The State has sought the recommendation, being prepared to devote funds toward the county's share of the supplementary system.

Negotiations are being made for the additional right-of-way needed for a three and one-half mile portion between Wild Horse Creek and Sheppard roads. Jablonsky said it was expected that concrete would be laid on this stretch this year and that the entire road would be paved by the end of next year's work season.

It has not been decided whether the right-of-way shall be 60 of 40 feet wide. The route will follow existing roads in part but will deviate for the sake of directness.

Route of New Road.

The northern end will be at the site of the highway bridge the State proposes to build over the Missouri River into St. Charles County for the new location of a superhighway carrying United States highway No. 40. From there the scenic route will cut south across country to Monarch, on the Rock Island Railroad. Between Monarch and Grove, which is on Manchester road, it will follow in general the course of Eatherton road. Between Grover and Glencoe, which is on the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Meramec River, it will follow generally the course of an existing road.

From Glencoe to Eureka, and south to Bald Hill Bridge, the route will be over Old State road. Bald Hill Bridge crosses the Meramec at the Jefferson County line. Jabonsky said that Jefferson County has taken similar steps to provide a concrete road from Bald Hill Bridge to House Springs, which is on Gravois road. It is possible that Jefferson County will arrange an extension over the old route between House Springs and Barnhart, which is on United States Highway No. 61, south.

This new route will form an outlying belt connection between No. 9, No. 50 (Manchester road), the new No. 66 (Antire road at Eureka), No. 30 (Gravois road at House Springs) and No. 21, which is to be extended by the State from De Soto to House Springs. It will furnish a needed traffic cut-off to avoid St. Louis in going between the northern and southern parts of the State.

Furthermore, the route is one of exceptional scenic beauty, in the edge of the Ozark region.

20-Foot Pavement.

The county will obtain the right of way, subject to approval of the location by the State, and build the new road under State supervision. The concrete pavement will be 20 feet wide.

Two important paving contracts under the $10,000,000 1928 county road bond issue were awarded by the County Court on Friday. Each provides for 20-foot concrete. One is for North and South road throughout University City, from a point near Kingsbury avenue to Page avenue, a distance of 9482 feet. The price is $59,311, compared with Jablonsky's advance estimate of $74,548. The other is Sutter avenue, University City, and Wellston, for 3217 feet, between Bartmer and Page avenues. This price is $13,990, compared with the estimate of $21,60 . The contractor for both is the Webb-Boone Paving Co.

Bids were received by the court last week for a 20-foot concrete pavement for 10,932 feet, on Dorsett road between Link and Fee roads and on Fee Fee between Dorsett and the Creve Coeur trolley line at Midland avenue. The only bid not rejected was that of the William A. Riley Construction Co., for $88,110. The engineer's estimate was $88,398.

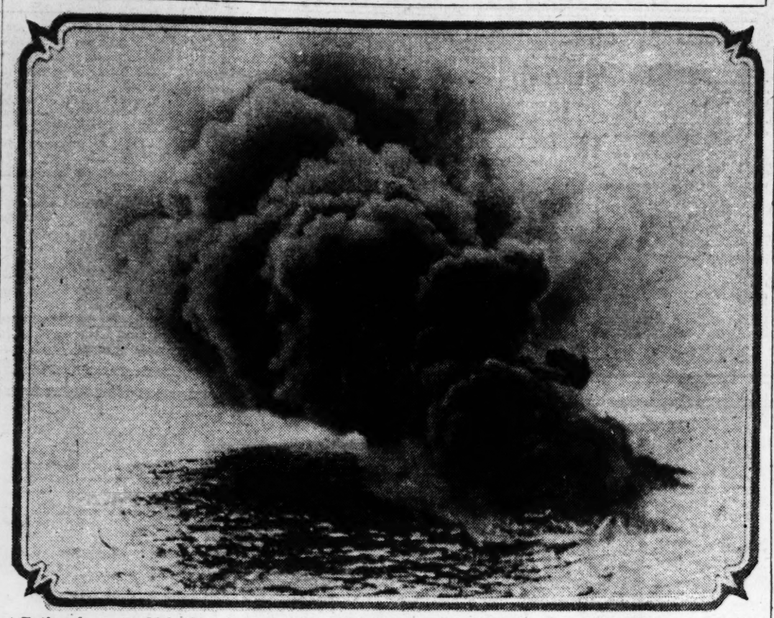
Smoke Cloud Marks Scene of Fatal Ship Wreck



AT the place at which this photograph was taken the tanker Pinthis was sunk in collision with the Fairfax last Tuesday night with the loss of 47 lives. The accident occurred in a heavy fog eight miles off Scituate, Mass. The photograph was taken 24 hours after the Pinthis had sunk in more than 100 feet of water. Burning oil from the tanker caused a cloud of smoke. Many of those who lost their lives were burned by the flaming oil.

MARINE AND WOMAN TO DIE FOR KILLING SAILOR-HUSBAND

Mrs. Hattie Evans First of Her Sex to Be Sent to Electric Chair in New Jersey.

TOM'S RIVER, N. J., June 14.—Mrs. Hattie Evans and Lester Underdown, a United States Marine, were convicted today and sentenced to die for the murder of Robert Evans, the woman's sailor husband, and Albert Duffy, a former shipmate of Evans.

Although one woman on the jury of four women and eight men had said she could not vote for a verdict of guilty if it meant capital punishment, the verdict was returned without a recommendation for mercy, which would have permitted a sentence of life imprisonment.

Two women have been hanged in the criminal history of New Jersey, one in 1868 and the other in 1878, but there have been no executions of women since the gallows was replaced by the electric chair 29 years ago.

The trial ended today will be followed by another, the defendants in the second being two other Marines from the Lakehurst Naval Air Station, where Underdown was also on duty. They are Claude Carmichael and Madison Chappel, whose trial was severed from that of the two convicted today so that they might serve as State witnesses.

They testified that Underdown, who they said had been intimate with Mrs. Evans while her husband was at sea, had offered them $100 to help him "bump a couple of guys off." They said they went with him to the Evans home, where Evans and Duffy were celebrating the former's discharge from the navy, and that he shot the men and then clubbed them with his rifle. After the crime was done they said Mrs. Evans kissed Underdown and told him it was a "good job."

For a time an Associate City Counselor under Mayor Kiel, Kersting was appointed an Assistant Counselor, effective July 1, by Counselor Muench several days ago. Kersting had campaigned for Kiel and against Mayor Miller in the last municipal contest. He resides at 3877 Utah place and has maintained a law office in the Wainwright Building.

Kersting last night gave out a written statement at his home, denying that there was anything wrong with the conduct of his office and declaring that the discharge of an office employe, for cause, had brought about his trouble with the bureau heads.

"With reference to some men who acted as enumerators and whose portfolios were taken from them," said Kersting, "I will say that this was done under the rules of the Census Department and only in cases where they failed or refused to complete the enumeration. Owing to the fact that we had no civil service examinations, I will say that some of the 337 enumerators were illiterate and incompetent."

"We have often heard that municipal politics in America are rotten," he wrote, "but I want to say that comparing city politics with national politics, as I have experienced in this case, is like comparing a bottle of cologne with an Augean stable."

Dog Waits 8 Months for Master.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 14. —For eight months a German shepard police dog, named Fox, has waited at the prison gate at the county jail in Goshen for his master, P. L. Cudney, who has been serving a sentence for connection with a theft. In four days more the master will be released, and he and Fox will go away.

FOUR CHARGES DRAWN AGAINST EMBEZZLER

Circuit Attorney Expects F. L. Berryhill to Surrender Tuesday and Plead Guilty.

Four informations charging Frank L. Berryhill, former salesmanager and director of the First National Co., investment subsidiary of the First National Bank, with embezzlement, have been prepared by Circuit Attorney Miller's office and will be filed when Berryhill surrenders on the charges as he has promised to do.

Berryhill, the Circuit Attorney expects, probably will surrender Tuesday and plead guilty. In case he does so, he will be arraigned in the Court of Criminal Correction and, if he waives a preliminary hearing, will be immediately taken to Circuit Court where his plea of guilty can be entered and sentence passed.

Officers of the First National Co., in announcing through their attorney that Berryhill embezzled $310,000 from three customers and an undetermined amount from a fourth, said they "would not be satisfied with a sentence of less than 10 years for their former employe.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS IN CITY ON THURSDAY

An intermediate registration of voters will be held in St. Louis next Thursday, in preparation for the primary election of Aug. 5. The 670 precinct polling places will be open from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Voters eligible to register will be: Those who have reached the age of 21 since the registration of 1928; those who have changed their residences within the city, and those who have moved to St. Louis and are otherwise qualified.

An intermediate registration of St. Louis County voters will be held on July 1 for those who have reached the age of 21, or moved into the county since 1928. However, in the county, voters who have moved from one precinct to another must call at the Election Board office at the Clayton Courthouse before June 24 to have their names transferred on the books.

would remain away and resign his succession to the throne. He asked Princess Helen to join him in England. She not only failed to do that but did not even write to him. That was Carol's first break with his wife," Jonescu said.

Rumanian Synod Annuls Helen's Divorce Decree.

VIENNA, June 14.—A News Agency dispatch from Bucharest says the Rumanian Holy Synod has annulled the divorce decree which Princess Helen, now Queen Helen, obtained from King Carol two years ago.

Six days ago Carol came out of four years of exile and was proclaimed King by the Rumanian Parliament, and since then has ordered things to his liking. He annulled all laws enacted after his banishment in 1926 and said he regarded his wife's divorce among them, thus enthroning her as his Queen.

There are indications the Queen will relent and accept the man who deserted her for a commoner, Mme. Lupescu. Queen Mother Marie has endeavored to reconcile the royal pair, and it is reported the reconciliation will be announced soon at a family party in Queen Marie's palace.

Although reports from London say Mme. Lepescu is on her way to Rumania and at present is staying with a friend at Baden, near Vienna, police said they could find no evidence of her.

CHARITY BENEFITS BY PROMOTERS PUT ON BLACKLIST

Chamber of Commerce to Refuse Indorsement of Work Done by Professionals for Agencies.

Charging that professional promoters employ unfair tactics in obtaining money for charities, the Charities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday that from now on it will refuse to indorse any charity agency which permits such a promoter to use the agency's name in soliciting funds from the public.

The committee annually issues a list of indorsed charities after investigation of their methods of solicitation. In adopting the policy of excluding those who deal with promoters, the committee's statement said, it is following a practice already adopted in most other large cities of the country.

The statement, which was sent to all charitity agencies in St. Louis, except members of the Community Fund, calls attention to the promoter's usual method of raising money through entertainments and other "benefits," and emphasizes that such "benefits" usually benefit nobody but the promoter, and are an imposition both upon the agency and the donor.

"The professional promoter ', always a good talker," says the statement. "He approaches the officers of the charity agency and asks for the use of the agency's name in arranging a large entertainment or benefit. The promoter promises to sell all the tickets, furnish the entertainment and, for the privilege of using the agency's name, pay the agency a flat sum of $300 or $400. The charity agency is allowed to sell tickets a day or two prior to the entertainment and at the door."

"The promoters' solicitors, who thoroughly canvass the city for two or three weeks prior to the entertainment, use the name of the charity and the buyer of the ticket believes he is contributing to the institution. He does not realize that most of the money goes into the pockets of the promoters. In most instances he is not interested in attending the entertainment, but buys the ticket merely because he believes he is helping the charity. This is unfair both to givers and charity."

Very often, the statement continues, the agency which has lent its name, finds later it is in need of money and must make a public appeal, but donors who have bought tickets feel that they have already contributed and refuse to give more. As for profits from the benefit, it is explained, all go to the promoter above the amount agreed on, and in many instances the promoter makes anywhere from $1000 to $2000, while the agency gets $300 or perhaps less.

"The Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has every confidence in the management and money-raising methods of the legitimate welfare agencies of St. Louis," the statement concludes. "Its chief aim is to foster and encourage deserving charities and philanthropies, but it fears that, if certain agencies continue to use the professional promoter, they will lose their present good standing."

The committee also issued a supplementary list of charities which it has indorsed after investigation. A similar list was issued several weeks ago.

24 FOUND GUILTY OF LIQUOR PLOT AT TERRE HAUTE

Fred Ketterer of St. Louis Among Those Convicted —One of 11 Sentenced at Once Gets Two Years.

By the Associated Press.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 14. —Twenty-four persons were convicted on charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law in connection with operations of a large liquor ring in Vigo (Terre Haute) and Vermillion Counties by a jury in Federal Court here tonight. Two other defendants were acquitted.

Eleven of those convicted were sentenced immediately by Judge Robert C. Baltzell, while those at liberty and under bond are to be sentenced next week. Fred Ketterer of St. Louis was sentenced to two years at Leavenworth penitentiary; Hardin Ordwick of Louisville to a year and a day at Atlanta penitentiary, and Homer Wright of Clinton, Ind., and St. Louis to two years at Atlanta.

The most severe penalty was two years' imprisonment and a fine of $2000, assessed against Jack Bell of Terre Haute. Sentences of other Indiana persons ranged from one day to 90 days in jail.

Those to be sentenced later are Indiana residents and include Roy Wright, former Federal prohibition agent; Ray Foncannon, former Vigo County Sheriff, and John Jensen, former Vigo County Republican chairman. These three were the alleged ringleaders and were accused of accepting "hush" money from bootleggers and still owners.

HELD IN $60,000 BOND

MAX H. GORDON.

FORMER convict, known as "One-Eye Maxie" since he was blinded in one eye when shot by members of the Egan gang in 1922, arrested yesterday by Federal agents in New York with $10,000 worth of narcotics in his possession. He was held in default of $60,000 bond.

GANGSTER SHOT HERE HELD AS DRUG PEDDLER

Max H. Gordon Seized by U. S. Agents—$10,000 in Narcotics in Possession.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Max H. Gordon, gangster and narcotics peddler, who lost the sight of one eye when he was shot by Egan gangsters in St. Louis in 1923, was arrested here today by Federal narcotic inspectors, with narcotics valued at $10,000 in his possession.

Gordon, known since his unfortunate experience in St. Louis as "One-Eye Maxie," is reputed to be one of a gang of peddlers who have been importing narcotics on a large scale and retailing the drugs to all classes of addicts.

When the narcotic agents, who had been on Gordon's trail for some weeks, came upon him he was engaged in parceling out the morphine and cocaine in his passession, wrapping the drugs in small packages preparatory to handing them out to the retail trade.

Unable to make bond of $60,000, he was committed to jail and the narcotic agents expect to question him in an effort to learn something of his connection in New York and other Eastern cities where the drug traffic has been flourishing in recent months.

Gordon was shot in St. Louis while he was riding in an automobile with Abe Goldfedder, who had been marked for assassination by Egan gangsters. Goldfedder was struck twice in the attack and Gordon once, the bullet penetrating his left eye. Goldfedder recovered.

Shortly before his visit to St. Louis Gordon had been arrested in New York with a trunkful of opium. He jumped his bond in that case but was apprehended in St. Louis following the shooting there and was returned to New York. The case later was dropped, however, because of insufficient evidence.

In Detroit in April, 1926, he was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary and fined $500 on a narcotic charge. He has been arrested numerous other times in various cities of the country on narcotic charges.

300 EUROPEAN PAINTINGS CHOSEN FOR DISPLAY IN U. S.

Homer Saint-Gaudens Returns From Trip in Interest of Pittsburg Exhibition.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts at Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, returned today from Europe, where he selected 300 pointings for the Carnegie International Exhibition in Pittsburg next autumn.

The pictures will represent 14 nations, and for the first time since 1914 pictures will be received direct from Russia.

After the exhibition, the European paintings will be shown at the Art Institute of Chicago and the Cleveland Museum of Art.

Saint-Gaudens said painting was slowly freeing itself from the revolutionary movements of the last 20 years, and assuming its true function as an expression of contemporary social life.

WELLSTON SEWER COST ESTIMATED AT $2,500,000

Proposed System of 47 Miles Will Tax Property Owners $3.25 for Every 100 Square Feet.

A report of the engineers of the Wellston Sewer District, St. Louis County, has been filed in Circuit Judge Nolte's court at Clayton, estimating total cost of the proposed system of 47 miles of sewers of varied size at $2,500,000.

Average cost to property owners in the district will be $3.25 for every 100 square feet of their land, it was estimated by George S. Russell, president of the firm of engineers, Russell & Axon. For business property the charge will be higher and for undeveloped acreage property less. The owner of a small home on a 40x100 lot would have to pay, at the average rate, $130, plus interest, over a period of 20 years.

The district is bounded on the east by St. Louis, on the south by University City, and on the west by Sutter, Ferguson and Normandy avenues and on the north by Ledore lane and Natural Bridge and Florissant roads. It covers 2532 acres, none in incorporated territory, and has five drainage basins. Excluding thoroughfares and cemeteries, which are nontaxable, there are 2022 acres of taxable property. The district contains St. Peter's, Zion and Salem cemeteries. Population of the district is estimated at 16,000.

Larger units of the sewer system would be built of concrete, smaller ones of vitrified clay pipe and middle-sized ones of a combination of concrete and vitrified pipe.

The largest unit would be a 16-foot horseshoe-shaped tube connecting with the River des Peres sewer inside the St. Louis limits, near Rosedale avenue, north of Delmar boulevard. The Wellston district would build 900 feet of this within St. Louis for a connection. Near the north end, 700 feet of 12-foot tube would be built by the district within the city to connect with the South Harlem sewer.

Credit for these two sewers built within the city would be given toward the payments which would be due to the city from the district for handling excess sewage from the district. The law requires the city to care for the normal run-off of surface water coming across the line from the county.

The entire Wellston district system would consist of inclosed tubes. Numerous small sewers in this populous region, which now drain into obnoxious open channels, would be utilized where possible.

The district supervisors filed a petition in Judge Nolte's court asking for appointment of commissioners to fix benefits and damages in connection with the proposed construction.

WISCONSIN U. PROFESSOR WINS $5000 CAPPER AWARD

Stephen M. Babcock Gets Honor for Most Distinguished Agricultural Service.

CHICAGO, June 14.—The Capper award of $5000 and a gold medal for the most distinguished service to American agriculture was awarded to Stephen Moulton Babcock, professor of agricultural chemistry at the University of Wisconsin, for his invention of the Babcock test for butter fat in milk.

The winner of the award was selected by a committee headed by F. D. Farrell, president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, whose choice was the 77-year-old Wisconsin professor, creator of the butter fat test which the committee said has meant millions of dollars to the world.

Dr. Babcock invented his butter fat test in 1890. Ten years later he received the grand prize of honor by the international jury in Paris in spite of the fact that he was not an exhibitor. Any American is eligible for the award and no time limitation is set on when the service was rendered. The annual award was created by United States Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas.

U. S. AND BRAZIL NEED NO TREATIES, HOOVER DECLARES

Friendship Would Endure Forever, He Says at Dinner for President-Elect From South America.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—President Hoover, speaking tonight at a dinner to Julio Prestes, President-elect of Brazil, described the latter's visit to this country as "another evidence of that sincere and uninterrupted friendship which has always linked our countries together."

Prestes replied that the cordiality between the United States and Brazil and their citizens needed no "solemn assurances, and by its irresistible affinity rises high above the conventional rules governing international agreement." The bonds of friendship, he continued, would endure forever independent of treaties.

The dinner, the concluding function in honor of Dr. Prestes, was given by the Brazilian Ambassador do Amaral, at the Pan-American Union. The exercises were broadcast in North and South America by the National Broadcasting Co. Three short wave stations sent them to Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, Brazil, whence they were rebroadcast.

Prestes will go to New York tomorrow after spending three days here repaying the visit President Hoover made to Brazil after his election.

Text of Hoover Speech.

President Hoover said:

"It gives me the greatest possible pleasure to welcome your excellency on this occasion and to express to you my profound appreciation of the signal honor which you, through your visit, are conferring upon the Government and people of the United States. Your presence is but another evidence of that sincere and uninterrupted friendship which has always linked our countries together so that it can truly be described as traditional. It is, therefore, an especial privilege for me to be able this evening to convey to you and the Brazilian nation a message of cordiality and esteem from the sister republic of the north.

"The friendly relations to which I have just alluded are the natural outgrowth of the traditions and ideals which our two nations hold in common. Firm believers in democracy, they are successfully upholding within their borders the principles of self-government. In their relations with the other nations of the world they are animated by a desire to maintain amity and, through loyal efforts, to further the cause of peace.

"In other respects also, sir, your nation is viewed with sympathetic admiration by my countrymen. Your people are conquering the wilderness and are bringing to the markets of the world the fruits of their labor. The inexhaustible riches of your great country, which are contributing so effectively to the comfort and progress of mankind, offer a marvelous field of activity to the industry of your people. One need not be a prophet to say that the future of Brazil is one of unlimited possibilities.

"Patriotic Endeavors."

"To the life of this great nation, sir, you have been for many years contributing your patriotic endeavors. Your field of activity has been broad and comprehensive, earning thereby the confidence and affection of the Brazilian nation, which has rewarded you with the supreme honor that a republic can bestow on one of its sons. In your long and honorable public career you have served in the legislatures of your native state and of the Federal Government, and you have discharged the duties of Chief Executive of the great State of Sao Paulo. The wide experience you have gained will contribute greatly to the welfare and prosperity of your country.

"I can not, Mr. President-elect, permit this opportunity to pass without referring to my delightful visit to your country. Particularly do I wish to mention the cordiality of the reception that was accorded to me in your beautiful capital. I was particularly impressed, sir, with the spontaneity of that reception and the evidences of sincere and unaffected friendship for the United States which greeted me on every side.

"It is no exaggeration to say that the impression of that friendship which I carried away with me will always remain in my memory as a living evidence of the sentiments which the people of Brazil cherish towards the people of the United States, and which I hardly need assure your excellency are sincerely and heartily reciprocated by them.

"As I have said, Mr. President-elect, it is a great pleasure for me to extend to you a most cordial and heartfelt welcome on the part of the Government and the people of the United States. It is my earnest hope that your visit here will be as pleasant as was my own visit to Brazil, and I should be most happy if you felt when you leave us some measure of the satisfaction with which I myself look back on my experience in your country.

"Nothing contributes so much to better understanding between peoples and a closer co-operation between nations which have common ideals and common purposes as personal contacts and friendships between individuals, and it is peculiarly gratifying to us that we have this opportunity to have you with us. Mrs. Hoover, who is greatly disappointed that she has not been able to have the pleasure of welcoming you here, joins me in extending to you our best wishes for your personal welfare and happiness and for the success of your administration. Permit me also to express the hope that Senora Prestes will soon be fully restored to health. It was a keen disappointment to us that she was unable to accompany your excellency here.

"I am personally very happy, Mr. Ambassador, to have been able to enjoy your hospitality this evening, and I appreciate deeply the courtesy which you have shown me."

PRESENTING
PHILCO TONE-CONTROL

PHILCO again steals a march on the radio industry and announces a remarkable improvement in radio reception—CONTROL OF STATION TONE—operated by YOU.

Here is the radio feature you have always wanted—personal, intimate control over the radio TONE QUALITY.

Now, sitting quietly in your own home listening perhaps to the music of the great Philco Symphony Orchestra—or entertaining your guests with the liveliest of dance bands, you can bring in the music the way YOU like it, by the turn of a knob on the front of the set.

Classical music, great singers, famous artists can be heard the way YOU have always longed to hear them; with rich, full sonority perhaps; or again you may like your tone as brilliant as a brass band. You can have either, or BOTH, with Philco Tone Control. Again, you may like your favorite dance orchestra bright, crisp, snappy or mellowed down to match the changing mood of a party. Both are yours now, with this wonder-working device.

Speaking voices, momentous messages from our public men, can be brought in with a realism only surpassed by their actual presence. And finally, for the radio stations which come in harshly or accompanied by crackles and buzzes from interfering electrical apparatus in your particular section, you can subdue the stridency and noise and enjoy many additional fine programs.

Philco Tone-Control

BRILLIANT • BRIGHT • MELLOW • DEEP

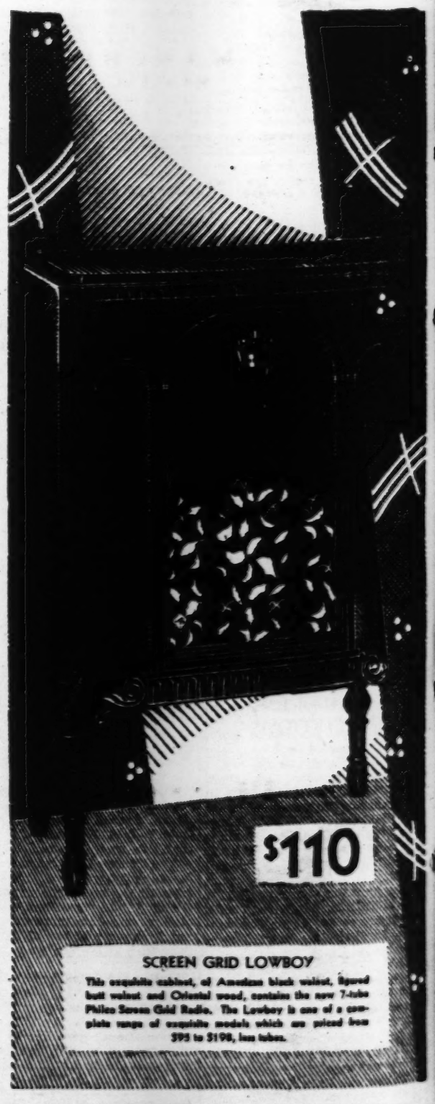
You can turn the Philco Tone Control to these four positions of TONE QUALITY. You can change speech or music to suit your taste. You have a PERSONAL CONTROL over the tone sent you by the station. You operate it yourself with this knob on the front of the set and vastly increase your sphere of radio entertainment. It is truly "radio's newest miracle."

It is the four positions of TONE CONTROL on the new Philco Radios which give you these marvels. At a mere turn of the knob you have reception which is "brilliant"—"bright"—"mellow"—"deep."

Each and every Philco has balanced units which produce the true, clear, UNDISTORTED Philco tone—new, exclusive circuits of great selectivity—wonderful distance range and power—reduction of static and background noises—new, improved electro-dynamic speaker, and a new Station Recording Dial on which you can permanently log your favorite stations.

The Philco Screen Grid Plus has, in addition, AUTOMATIC VOLUME CONTROL, which counteracts fading, so you can not only get, but HOLD and ENJOY, distant programs—enormous power; built-in aerial—a super-radio for those who want EXTRA performance.

These new instruments are housed in beautiful cabinets—furniture of which you can be proud, priced from $95 to 198 (Radio-Phonograph). Philco Radios are available for operation on AC or DC electric current, or by battery. Ask your nearest Philco dealer for a free demonstration of Philco Tone Control today. No obligation, of course, and easy terms when you decide to buy.



SCREEN GRID LOWBOY

House Group Favors More Judges.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Deneen bill providing for two additional Federal District Judges for Northern Illinois was recommended for passage by the House Judiciary Committee today. The bill has passed the Senate.

CINCINNATI POLOISTS DOWN ST. LOUIS, 9-4

Final Inter-City Series Here This Spring—Second Game at 3:30 Today.

The efficient Camargo Country Club of Cincinnati, O., defeated the sporadically brilliant St. Louis Country Club, nine goals to four, yesterday afternoon in the opening game of the final intercity polo match in St. Louis this spring.

An average gathering for a Saturday game drove to the country club grounds and watched from their automobiles, parked on the south and east sides of the field, and the largest attendance of the spring season is expected for the return game at 3:30 p. m. today, in which St. Louis will make an effort to even up the match.

Yesterday's summer weather was mitigated for the spectators by a fresh breeze and fleecy clouds which softened a little the sun's glare through much of the first half. None the less, shade was at a premium among the automobiles and, on the opposite side, under the maples, for the approximately 100 members and guests who watched from the terrace.

Handicap of One Goal.

Cincinnati began the game with one goal, under official handicaps of the American Polo Association. Atkins made it 2—0 in the first period and a fight was on.

In this period a St. Louis goal went uncounted because a referee had blown the whistle for a foul, although he later recognized that no foul had occurred and ordered play to proceed from a toss-in at midfield. Immediately thereafter Simmons, in perhaps the most spectacular play of the game, stopped the ball in midair with his mallet and carried it down the field for St. Louis' first goal to count in the 9-4 score.

The half ended at 5-3. Camargo thus had a one-goal earned lead. But early in the fourth chukker Cincinnati got away with three goals that effectually decided the outcome.

Before the end of the period St. Louis had tightened up to show some of the most exciting contests of the game. Cincinnati got free but once more, when Flack scored his fourth goal with a miraculously long shot.

No Scores in Last Period.

Neither side could score in the last period, although both goals were in peril every minute of the 7½. Defense plays were spectacular. Many times the ball was turned right at the goal line by Ficks of Camargo or Niedringhaus of St. Louis, and in one play Niedringhaus single-handed took out three of the Camargo men.

Non-members who wish to see today's game may enter the Country Club grounds at Price and Ladue roads west of Clayton or by turning north from Clayton road to the marked entrances on Price or Cella road. Trophies will be presented to the winning players.

Lack of Team Play by St. Louis Squad Is Noted.

Probably the deciding factor in the game was the lack of team play on the St. Louis team. The team's chief fault was crowding too much together. To this and to missing at critical points may be attributed the outcome.

The Camargo players were much steadier. They not merely got on the ball; they kept on it. And they showed consistently better teamwork.

St. Louis made some really brilliant plays, but these came in spurts. A particularly good example was the goal which Ned Simmons made after catching the ball in the air on his mallet and carrying it down the field.

APES AND COLLEGE GIRLS USED IN TESTS OF COMMON COLDS

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 14.—Three gibbons, members of the ape family, and four Goucher College girl graduates are being used in the experiments of the Abel Fund group of scientists at Johns Hopkins Medical School in their five-year research to find the cause and cure of the common cold.

Dr. J. A. F. Pfeiffer of the University of Maryland, who announced he had found a minute organism which he said caused the cold, and had worked out a preventive inoculation, was silent about the tests.

The gibbons were selected for the tests, it was said, because they closely resemble man in many respects. The Hopkins scientists have been concentrating on the effects of sunlight and various forms of transmission. Dr. Alphonse Raymong Dochez of Columbia University has succeeded, according to scientists, in transmitting the cold to members of the chimpanzee family.

1000 SOLDIERS IN BOMBAY GUARDING AGAINST OUTBREAK

Prepared to Deal Summarily With Violation of Viceroy Irwin's Order Against Picketing.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, India, June 14.—One thousand fully-armed troops tonight guarded this city as the Government's threat to deal summarily with violators of Viceroy Lord Irwin's ordinance against picketing by followers of Mahatma Gandhi.

Picketing is a criminal offense punishable by six months' imprisonment, and violence is certain to provoke immediate activity by the soldiery.

The climax of the civil resistance situation was expected to mark Sunday's activities of Congress volunteers, of whom several thousand already had been detailed to stations in front of cloth and liquor shops.

With the fourth and fifth Mahratta regiments from Poona already encamped here, the Manchester regiment from Secunderabad was held in readiness to entrain for Bombay at the moment the authorities should prove unable to cope with the situation. Other detachments of troops likewise were held in readiness.

Picketing of liquor shops by civil disobedience volunteers was intensified this evening, 160 foreign and native liquor shops being picketed in various parts of the city.

Forty volunteers called "National Militiamen," moved in batches of ten from place to place exhorting the population to give up drink. There were no police on the scenes and the liquor shops were deserted.

Gov. Sir Frederick Sykes, after conferring with prominent Bombay citizens, decided there was necessity for drastic action. The conference followed open defiance by 25,000 Congress volunteers, who earlier this week had assembled, shrieking their defiance of the police.

Sholapur was quiet today. The police yesterday prevented 100 volunteers bearing the Nationalist flag from entering the city. Eighteen were sent to prison for nine months and fined as leaders.

Rioting developed near Agra, a hitherto quiet city. Shops were looted when the demonstrators seized a suburban village.

ALDERMEN'S HEAD ANSWERS CRITICS OF BRIDGE BILLS

Neun Thinks Their Prompt Passage Would Hasten Not Delay the Removal of Tolls on Eads Span.

President Neun of the Board of Aldermen said yesterday that in his opinion the passage of the two bridge bills, agreed upon Thursday by the Bridge Committee of the board, would expedite the opening up of Eads bridge as a free highway crossing and not delay it, as was charged by representatives of downtown business interests.

Earlier in the day the business group had called on President Miller of the Terminal Railroad Association to seek a concession in the amount of rental the Terminal has been asking the city to pay in lieu of the tolls now collected from pedestrians and vehicles on Eads bridge. Spokesmen for this group say that if a definite arrangement for freeing Eads bridge of tolls is not made now in connection with the plan to make the Municipal bridge available to the Terminal, it may not be done for many years.

"The most important thing," Neun said, "is to get the bridge bills acted upon before the Board of Aldermen recesses for the summer, on June 27. If we do that we will help to relieve unemployment and avoid any further delay on the bridge question."

Aldermen Recess June 27.

The proposed bill as to the Municipal bridge, as has been told, will provide that the city borrow approximately $3,250,000 from the Terminal with which to build five approaches necessary for full use of the bridge by the Terminal, and repay the loan out of the tolls assessed against the Terminal. The other bill affecting the Eads bridge will authorize the Municipal Bridge Commission to negotiate a rental contract with the Terminal, the price being subject to approval by the Board of Aldermen. These two bills are to be introduced next Friday, Neun has said, and there will remain only a week for their enactment before the summer recess.

The indefiniteness of the Eads Bridge bill is due to the fact that the Bridge Committee was unwilling to agree to the Terminal's proposed rental of $208,500 a year, with the city assuming maintenance charges on the vehicular deck. The Terminal justified this price on the ground that it was the average annual revenue from that source for the last five years, the tolls for 1929 having exceeded $270,000. When Mayor Miller's bridge bill was before the Bridge Committee last winter several speakers at a public hearing including Sidney Salomon of the Downtown Improvement Association, said the Eads Bridge rental figure was too high.

Says It Won't Hamper "Trading Power."

Neun said he thought getting these bills before the Board of Aldermen and the Bridge Committee would place the city in better position to deal with the Terminal on the rental question, and would not hamper its "trading power" as the business men fear.

"This will give us, I think, a distinct advantage," Neun said, "in working out a satisfactory arrangement for the city to take over the upper deck of the Eads Bridge. It would be unwise to hold up the whole program on account of that one point, as we can be in better position to settle it with the bills before the Bridge Committee and will be that much ahead."

The group which called on President Miller of the Terminal yesterday included representatives of the Associated Retailers, the Chamber of Commerce, the Downtown Improvement Association and the City Improvement Association.

No information was given out as to the result of the conference. Miller said he would have no statement to make until the bills were introduced. It is understood the way was left open for further discussion as to a modification of the rental named by the Terminal.

For Downtown Organization.

The downtown business group interested in this measure is undertaking to form a central organization to unite the efforts of several associations in behalf of the abolition of tolls on Eads Bridge, Third street widening, the river front improvement and other projects of particular value to the downtown section. The opening up of Eads Bridge as a free highway crossing is considered of major importance by the retail merchants, who think it would bring them many customers from East St. Louis and adjacent territory.

An organization meeting is to be held soon and it is planned to raise a fund of probably $200,000 to carry on the activities. An effort is being made to interest all business organizations in the downtown area.

Concerted action was taken by three of these organizations Friday in protesting against the bridge settlement. The presidents of two, Morton May of the Associated Retailers, and John H. Robertson of the City Improvement Association, sent letters of protest to President Neun of the Board of Aldermen. The Downtown Improvement Association sent a resolution of protest.

Heat When It's Cold Cool When It's Hot!

The Day of Air Conditioning

By Dean F. Paul Anderson
Dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Kentucky

Man has lived for centuries, accepting climatic conditions as they were handed to him by whimsical Nature.

Today man has learned how to make his own weather.

First, man determined in the Pittsburgh Research Laboratory of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, in co-operation with the Bureau of Mines at Pittsburgh and the Public Health Service at Washington, what were the atmospheric conditions most conducive to comfort, therefore to health, therefore to longevity.

The comfort zone was established and this has been accepted by scientists the world over. The term "effective temperature" was coined to express the invariable law that exists between dry and wet bulb temperatures throughout the entire range of temperatures in which man lives and works.

Air conditioning depends on three variables—dry bulb temperature, or the one of common experience—wet bulb temperature, or the one produced when we wrap up the bulb of an ordinary thermometer in a wet cloth and then cause the moisture in this wet covering to be evaporated by either swinging the thermometer in the air or blowing on it with a fan. The third element in air conditioning is air motion.

Wet bulb temperature enables the engineer to measure the humidity.

For every dry bulb temperature in the comfort zone there is a wet bulb temperature for any prescribed humidity.

The engineer can make any humidity he desires in the comfort zone. If the humidity is too low, as it often is in Winter, he puts sufficient moisture by spray into his air in motion to bring the humidity up to the point he wants it; if the humidity is too high, as it frequently is in Summer, the engineer takes away moisture by passing his air currents supplied to a conditioned room through sprays of refrigerated water.

So, dear humanity, the engineer has shown you in a very simple way how to provide a constant climate for your indoors the year 'round. In factories, in offices, in auditoriums, in homes, we can spend hours and hours without being annoyed by enervating conditions of atmosphere.

It is not pleasant to be too hot or too cold. The engineer has eliminated one of the most annoying variables affecting our happiness, namely: uncomfortable atmospheric conditions.

More human energy is therefore available for work and play. It is easy to be happy and contented in a perfectly air conditioned environment.

(Note: This is the second of a series of articles to appear for five consecutive weeks on the subject of Conditioned Air.)

St. Louis is rapidly realizing how important to health, comfort and efficiency is the control of temperature and moisture of air wherever people congregate indoors. To meet the ever-increasing demand on our company for accurate information on this subject, a special Air Conditioning Department has been established.

On request a specially trained engineer will gladly call and help solve your air conditioning problem. There is no charge or obligation for this service. Call MAin 3222 and ask for the Air Conditioning Department.

Salesroom of the Union Electric Light and Power Company

The dog days are as pleasant as a spring morning in the salesroom of the Union Electric Light and Power Company at Twelfth Boulevard and Locust Street. Though the street may be ablaze with the burning rays of August sun, though the midsummer humidity may oppress you as you approach the building, pass through the doors and you will give a sigh of relief, for you have entered a store equipped with a modern air conditioning system.

Union Electric Light and Power Company installed this cooling system because they were convinced that cool customers stay to buy.

Air Conditioning Improves Production and Quality for For-Eta Nut Co.

The application of conditioned air in the process of manufacturing confections creates a uniform product of superior quality. Conditioned Air also makes it possible to manufacture a quality product during all seasons of the year.

While coating nuts and fruits with chocolate a definite temperature and humidity is maintained by freezing the moisture out of the air and lowering the temperature by means of refrigeration.

Conditioned Air and refrigeration are used in the manufacture of For-Eta products.

MUNICIPAL OPERA TICKETS ON SALE AT TWO BOX OFFICES

Seats May Be Obtained This Afternoon at Theater and at Arcade Building.

The Municipal Theater Association has arranged for the sale of seats for tonight's performance of "The Circus Princess" and for all of next week's presentations of "The Desert Song" at two ticket offices to be opened at noon today. These are the downtown box office in the lobby of the Arcade Building and the main ticket office at the lower entrance to the Municipal Theater in Forest Park.

"The Circus Princess" drew another capacity audience to the Municipal Opera last night. It was announced that reserved seats at all prices are available for tonight's performance.

HINCKLEY-ROBINSON WEDDING

Daughter of Former Assistant Secretary of Navy Weds.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Helen Douglas Robinson, daughter of Theodore Douglas Robinson, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Robinson, was married today to John Arthur Hinckley of Washington, at Mahaqua Mansion, near Mohawk, N. Y. The Rev. Julius Atwood, former Bishop of Arizona, performed the ceremony in the presence of intimate friends and relatives. Among the guests was Mrs. Douglas Robinson, grandmother of the bride and sister of the late President Roosevelt. Mr. and Mrs. Hinckley will make their home at Washington.

Tee off with golf balls your tooth paste pays for Intelligent people, recognizing the remarkable cleansing powers of Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢, buy it instead of dentifrices in the 50¢ class. The average saving is $3 a year. Spend it as you please. Golf balls are merely a suggestion.

See teeth whiten!
Feel your mouth grow healthier

EVEN those whose teeth are hard to whiten comment on how swiftly, yet how gently, Listerine Tooth Paste performs this task. Such action is due to new cleansing and polishing agents, harder than tartar and so, capable of removing it, but softer than enamel and therefore harmless to it.

And regular users assert that this dentifrice definitely improves mouth hygiene. The gums grow firmer. The entire mouth seems fresher, exhilarated, and healthy.

Buy a tube of Listerine Tooth Paste and give it a thorough short trial. Compare it with any paste at any price—and judge by results alone. After such tests, more than a million people have switched to Listerine Tooth Paste. We can think of no greater tribute to the product.

Incidentally, Listerine Tooth Paste saves you about $3 per year, over dentifrices in the 50¢ class. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

PETITIONS OUT FOR STATE VOTE ON CONDEMNATION

Proposed Amendment Would Give Cities and Counties Right to Take Excess Adjacent Property

Initiative petitions are being circulated to place on the Missouri ballot in the November general election a proposed amendment to the State Constitution which would give the State, counties and cities the right of excess condemnation, a modern means of financing public improvements.

The amendment, if adopted by a majority vote, will be self-operative, without legislative action. The petitions are being circulated here and elsewhere in 11 of the 16 congressional districts, under direction of the General Council on Civic Needs. They must be filed with the Secretary of State by July 6. They are distinct from the petitions for another constitutional amendment for the proposed consolidation of St. Louis and St. Louis County as Greater St. Louis.

Excess condemnation consists of the acquisition of land adjacent to that actually needed for a street opening or widening or other improvement. The surplus land presumably appreciates in value by virtue of the improvement, whereupon the governmental agency which condemned it can sell it for an enhanced price, applying the profit to the cost of the property really needed. The procedure has been used successfully elsewhere, and civic leaders regard it as an excellent means of part financing for large developments and of facilitating consummation of plans.

While the proposed amendment is sponsored for the primary benefit of St. Louis, it could be utilized elsewhere in Missouri, but its use would not be mandatory in condemnation proceedings. The old method of condemning for actual requirements would remain in force also.

It is desired particularly to use excess condemnation in the proposed river front development and double-deck roadway for Third street, as advocated by the City Plan Commission. The General Council on Civic Needs has declared that excess condemnation would make it possible to carry out the whole river front scheme.

That plan would cost $48,000,400, it has been estimated, including $15,000,000 for land, $11,000,000 for the Third street double-deck and $22,000,000 for improvements along the river. Benefit assessments were estimated at $9,000,000 and the council estimated that sale of excess land would bring $15,000,000, leaving $24,000,000 as net cost of the whole.

Excess land acquired would have to be limited to parcel lying wholly or in part within not more than 150 feet from the closest boundary of the improvement, and in the case of parcels lying only partly in this range only portions not more than 200 feet from the closest boundary of the improvement may be taken. It would be provided that excess property sold would have to be restricted to protect the improvement and its environs as to view, appearance, light, air and usefulness.

Another feature would provide for issuance of bonds to pay in whole or in part for property taken under excess condemnation, which would be a lien only on the property so acquired and not included under the limit of bonded indebtedness for the municipality or other governmental agency concerned.

LADY ASTOR'S COUSIN WED TO LIEUT. CLAXTON, U. S. N.

Miss Zita Langhorne Wears Grandmother's Wedding Gown at Military Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.

EASTON, Md., June 14.—Miss Zita Mary Langhorne of Cambridge, Mass., a grand niece of Herbert Spencer and a cousin of Lady Astor, was married here this afternoon to Lieut. Edward William Clexton, U. S. N., at the Church of SS. Peter and Paul.

The ceremony was military, the bride and groom marching from the altar beneath an arch of swords held by a group of naval officers. She wore a bridal gown made in Paris in 1850 and worn by her grandmother. At a reception afterward at Oaklands, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. John Hubbard Tweedy, the bride cut the wedding cake with a sword.

Lieut. Clexton is stationed at Philadelphia with the supply corps.

HURT, THROWN FROM AUTO

Wife of Dr. Drace Suffers Skull Fracture in Crash.

Mrs. Julia Drace, wife of Dr. Charles Drace, 3838 Castleman avenue, suffered a scull fracture at 10 a. m. yesterday when thrown from an automobile driven by her husband following a collision with another machine at Hereford street and Oleatha avenue. She is in a serious condition at St. Anthony's Hospital.

Tino Scharamitaro, a clerk, 6226 West Park avenue, driver of the other machine, was arrested for careless driving.

A WORD OF EXPLANATION

As we are working on a 13 period calendar this year our inventory will be taken on the night of June 18. Inventories are usually taken on June 30th—but we are taking our semi-annual inventory at the end of the sixth period of the 13 month year.

10,000 DENIED SEATS AT BYRD HOMECOMING

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The demand for seats for the homecoming of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd here next Friday is greater than it was for Roosevelt, Peary, Shackleton, Amundsen, Lindbergh, or Byrd himself when he flew to the North Pole, or any other adventurer. Every seat at the Washington Auditorium has been allotted, and 10,000 applicants have been turned down, the National Geographic Society announced today.

The seats for the address of Admiral Byrd, and the presentation of the society's special gold medal of honor by President Hoover, were made available wholly to the membership of the society, except for the few invitations sent to distinguished officials and diplomats who are the guests of the society on such occasions.

Arriving in Washington on a special train Friday morning will be the 42 men who spent 14 months on the ice and some 40 other men who played essential parts in the expedition, either in New Zealand or in manning the ships on their perilous trips through the pack ice.

On board this special train will be Admiral Byrd and Mrs. Byrd, and their son, Richard Byrd Jr., Admiral Byrd's mother, Mrs. Eleanor Bolling Byrd, a party of her guests, former Gov. and Mrs. Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia, and Capt. Thomas Byrd.

President Hoover will receive the entire expedition party at the White House at 12:30 o'clock.

One addition was made to their Washington program today. Following the official call at 3 o'clock upon the Secretary of the Navy, the entire party will make an automobile tour of Washington, first going to Arlington National Cemetery, where Admiral Byrd will lay a wreath upon the tomb of Admiral Peary, first to reach the North Pole. A similar tribute was paid Scott, who attained the South Pole, when Admiral Byrd was in New Zealand.

The exercises at the Washington Auditorium will be broadcast over both radio chains. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor will preside.

The explorer then will give his first report of his scientific work and geographic discoveries, and the first showing will be given of the motion pictures which recorded every phase of the expedition's work, both on the ground and in the air.

BOY SAVED FROM DROWNING IN FOREST PARK LAKE

Sam Rudin, 7, Rescued by Three Men; Restored With Inhalator and Taken to Hospital.

Sam Rudin, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rudin, 6005 Kingsbury avenue, was rescued from drowning in Sylvan Lake, Forest Park, yesterday afternoon, by three men, who plunged to his assistance. The boy was one of a group swimming in the lake.

The boy was unconscious when pulled from the water. His rescuers, Ben Comfort, 5731 DeGiverville avenue; Edward Henriquer, 5748 Pershing avenue and Fred Brock, 6178 Waterman avenue, applied artificial respiration until an inhalator arrived. When consciousness had been restored, the boy was taken to Barnes Hospital, where it was said his condition was not serious.

$200,000 GIFT FOR SEARCH FOR SECRET OF CHLOROPHYLL

If Discovered, it Is Thought it May Open Short Cut to Producing of Food.

By the Associated Press.

YELLOW SPRINGS, O., June 14.—C. F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors, has given $200,000 to Antioch College here for a 10-year research to learn the secret of chlorophyll, the green coloring matter in plants. It is used by plants to change the sun's energy and the chemicals of the air into sugars, starches, cellulose, and all the thousands of plant products. Its process, known as photosynthesis, is now considered more important in plant production than the soil.

Chemists never have been able to make chlorophyll. Little is even yet understood about it. If men can make it they may have thereby a short cut to producing food.

The announcement made today says that Dr. O. D. Inman, head of the biology department, will resign as dean of the college in order to conduct the research work.

FOR CANCELING BALLOON RACES

Representative Urges National Elimination Be Called Off.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 14.—The national elimination balloon races scheduled for Houston July 4 will be cancelled if the recommendation of A. D. Simpson, local representative of the national committee, is carried out.

Simpson today wired the national committee in Washington that due to lack of time in which to complete re-organization by a new group which had contemplated taking over management of the races he recommended that they be called off. The orginal promoters were unable to raise $14,000, which the National Aeronautical Association demanded be posted to meet expenses.

PLANS TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP OF ST. LOUIS AREA

Civic Group Arranging for Graph; Federal Government to Pay Half of Cost.

Civic workers interested in the development of a regional plan for the St. Louis district are arranging to have a new topographical map of the Missouri portion of the area made by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, following release of a $7500 appropriation to pay a State share by Gov. Caulfield.

Initial work on the map will cost $40,000, half of which will be paid by the Federal Government under a standing agreement. The State Highway Commission, which will benefit from the new map, subscribed $7500 and the Chamber of Commerce, Regional Planning Federation and St. Louis County Highway Department pledged $5000 jointly.

The board of managers of the State Bureau of Geology and Mines promised the remaining $7500 on May 15, provided the Governor released all of a $28,150 survey appropriation for it which had been held up for lack of funds. After the situation had been explained to the Governor, he announced on Friday that he was releasing $7500 of the appropriation for the specific purpose of the topographical map.

This will be the first such complete, detailed map of the region since the United States made one in 1904. Its total eventual cost is placed at $90,000, of which the Government will pay half. The State Bureau of Geology and Mines has promised $18,500 more if it succeeds in getting a $75,000 survey appropriation for the next biennium from the Legislature next year. Work on the new map may be started this year. It will take nearly two years to finish. It will cover St. Louis, St. Louis County and parts of Jefferson County.

Planners say the map will be valuable because there is no good map of recent date available of the region as a whole, and existing later charts are inadequate. Among the uses for which it will be important are the location of streets and highways and of various public utility lines. It will save the expense of initial surveys.

A similar topographical map of the Illinois portion of the St. Louis district, financed by the Federal and State Governments, is being made. It will cover Madison and St. Clair counties, parts of Jersey and Calhoun counties and a fragment of Monroe County.

St. Louis Delegation to Toronto.

Twenty St. Louis retail credit men will depart today for the annual convention of the National Retail Credit Association, which will open Tuesday at Toronto. The St. Louis delegates, headed by W. T. Snider, will invite the convention to meet here next year.

Now Ready! - the new Restaurant addition at Pennant Des Peres Terminal

A delicious meal and a delightful place sums up the ever increasing popularity of the Pennant Terminal on Manchester Road, (Highway 66) 15 miles from St. Louis. Constantly increasing patronage has forced the addition of an entirely new restaurant building four times the size of the original.

This new Pennant Restaurant addition will be welcome news, indeed, to the hundreds of St. Louisans who come out so frequently to enjoy those now famous Pennant meals in the charming surroundings there.

Card Parties

The new Pennant Restaurant Building provides the most delightful service and atmosphere for card parties. Several parties can be accommodated at one time. Card party accommodations are available at any time between 1:00 and 5:00 P. M. every day except Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

For reservations call BAldwin 80.

The new restaurant building itself is of the latest amphitheater type, with a completely encircling railed veranda overlooking the area a few feet below and providing, all told, tables for 200 people. In addition to this, the stone piazza in front, with its tables of grilled iron and glass, lend a Parisian touch to the exterior setting.

With restaurant accommodations so greatly increased and with parking space for over 150 cars, prompt service either inside or out is assured.

Folks from far and wide say that the dollar dinner served at this Pennant Terminal is not surpassed anywhere in America. If you haven't discovered this for yourself, one visit, we believe, will make you a regular patron.

Services provided at the Pennant Des Peres Terminal, 15 miles west of St. Louis on the Manchester Road (Highway 66).

Complete restaurant Table de Hote or a la Carte service at popular prices. Famous dollar dinners. Sandwiches. Fountain service.

Smooths your way —Saves your time to the Pacific Northwest

"One of the greatest feats of railroad engineering," is what experts call the new Cascade Tunnel.

And so will you when you emerge thrilled by the eight-mile trip under the solid granite backbone of the Cascade Mountains. Through this smooth, clean bore, straight as an arrow, light and airy, with the same temperature winter and summer, giant electric locomotives whisk the new Empire Builder and the luxurious Oriental Limited.

This electrified conquest of the Cascade Range made possible the record-breaking reduction in running time between Chicago and the cities of the Pacific Northwest. Enjoy this new thrill on your vacation trip to Adventureland this summer. See Glacier National Park on the way. Go west Great Northern . . . the short, clean, cinderless, scenic way.

NORRIS TO INQUIRE INTO SENTENCE OF CANNON'S BROKER

Senator to Offer Resolution Asking Whether Commutation Has Been Granted A. L. Goldhurst.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Senator Norris said today he would introduce a resolution Monday asking the Department of Justice whether the sentence of Harry L. Goldhurst, former head of the stock brokerage concern with which Bishop James Cannon Jr. traded, had been commuted.

The Nebraskan heard Goldhurst's five-year sentence has been commuted to two years and that "high officials" had attempted to have this action taken. He said the resolution would not mention Bishop Cannon.

Under it the Department of Justice would be requested to furnish the Senate with correspondence pertaining to any effort to obtain commutation for Goldhurst.

Ninety witnesses have been examined by the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee during the eight months it has been in session and a record of almost 2,500,000 words has accumulated.

Its work is now thought to be finished except for the formalities of presenting to the Senate the transcript of the testimony of Bishop James Cannon Jr., a general report on the prohibition investigation and a final summary of the entire lobby inquiry.

CHICAGOANS URGE BOYCOTT OF THOSE WHO AID HOODLUMS

Crime Commission Points Out Some Businesses Profit by Gang Activities.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 14.—The Chicago Crime Commission tonight announced the intention of attacking the hoodlum element's pocketbook and in a letter sent to members advised economic boycotting of all businesses, landlords, professional men and bankers who "give aid and comfort to the enemy, and are in reality partners in nefarious gangster operations."

Announcement came on the heels of the news story yesterday which placed the weekly revenues of illegal activities at approximately $6,000,000 in the Chicago area.

The letter urged "decent citizens" to refrain from doing business with anyone who traffics with the hoodlums.

The Crime Commission's call said that "The citizens who do business with gangsters become their allies. The lawyers who guide them in their lawless ventures, the landlords who lease to them hotels or buildings for their homes or business, the banks who safeguard their ill-gotten gains, are in reality partners in their criminal enterprises."

Six weeks ago the commission published a list of 28 names, headed by that of "Scarface Al" Capone, which it called "public enimies" urging warefare against them.

ALLEGED WIFE-SLAYER CAUGHT AFTER BEGGING FOOD AT FARM

Fletcher Hodge, Former Baseball Player, Arrested Near Blytheville, Ark.

By the Associated Press.

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark., June 14.—Driven by hunger and exhaustion to seek food at a farm house, Fletcher Hodge, former baseball player, accused of killing his estranged wife here Thursday night, was captured near this city today.

Mrs. Thomas Long, at whose home he sought food, recognized him. She gave him something to eat but notified the authorities after he departed and he was arrested a short distance from the house.

Two small sons of Hodge and his wife said he entered the home of her mother, Mrs. Minnie Ring, and shot her. They said he shot at Mrs. Ring as he fled from the house but missed her.

TO DRAMATIZE DREYFUS AFFAIR

(Copyright, 1930.)

PARIS, June 14.—"The Affaire Dreyfus," which split France, tore the nation in twain and fanned family and religious hate, will soon be dramatized and played before Paris audiences. Col. Alfred Dreyfus has waived his last objection to the plan. The eminent barrister, Torres, has constructed a play around the victim of Devil's Island.

The Torres drama will not place the figure of Dreyfus himself on the stage, for the play is principally a study of two other great actors in the tragedy, Gen. Marie Georges Picquart, commander of the Second Corps of the French army at that time, and Emile Zola, the novelist.

PEORIA, Ill., June 14.—When their motor boat caught fire in the middle of the Illinois river late yesterday, Henry L. Duralinger, Miss Edith Sorenson and Miss Eleanor Ressler, Vermont, Ill., were forced into the water and saved themselves by clinging to the non-sinkable cushions until rescued.

HOOVER SIGNS BILL CREATING SEPARATE NARCOTICS BUREAU

Work of Checking Drug Traffic Thus Is Removed From Prohibition Enforcement.

WASHINGTON, June 14. — The work of checking the drug traffic was separated from prohibition enforcement today with the signing by President Hoover of a bill creating a separate bureau of narcotics under Treasury jurisdiction.

The measure, passed unanimously by the House and Senate, was in response to contentions that the work of preventing drug addiction and smuggling was so important it should be consolidated under a single head. The new bureau will be in charge of a director. The bill provides that the bureau make a scientific study of the causes and cure of narcotic addiction.

OIL PIPE LINE TO MEXICO CITY

British Concern Would Carry It Up 8000 Feet Crossing Mountain.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, CITY, June 14.—The Aguila Oil Co., British owned and one of the largest in Mexico, has applied for a concession from the Department of Industry, Commerce and Labor and is now buying material for a pipe line from Tuxpan, Vera Cruz to Mexico City.

The line will connect with a refinery in the Tucuba, suburb of Mexico City. The investment is about $4,000,000. The pipe line will have a rize of 8000 feet crossing the Eastern Mexico mountain chain. The project lacks only official permission.

WOULD REPEAL MARKETING ACT

Congressman Ellis Offers Bill to Eliminate Farm Board.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—A bill to repeal the agricultural marketing act which established the Federal Farm Board was introduced today by Representative Ellis (Rep.), Missouri.

The Kansas City Representative, in a statement, attacked the marketing act as a "monstrous legislative blunder." He said he did not expect action of the bill at this session. "By the time Congress meets in December there will be a demand for repeal," he said.

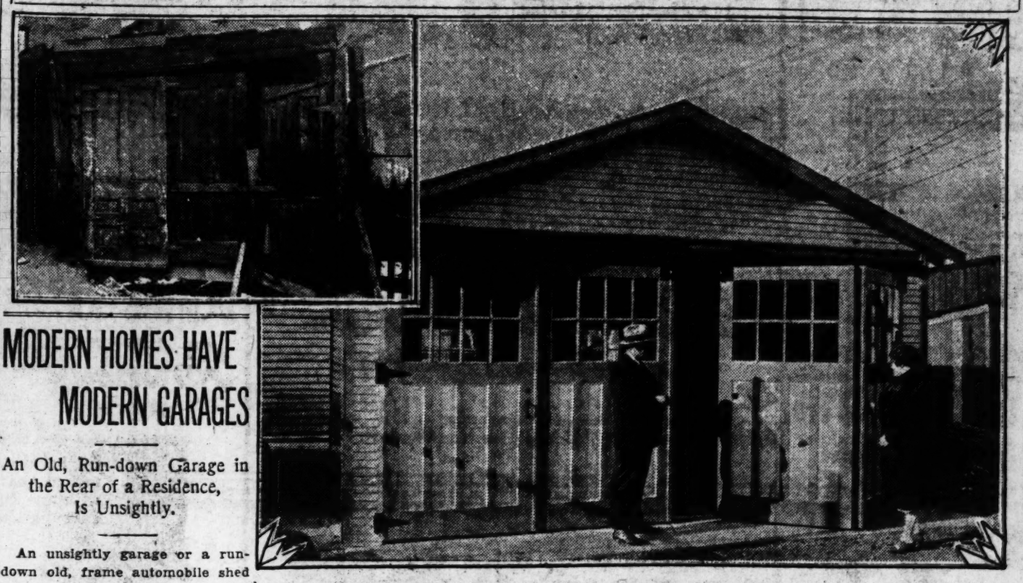
Contrast The New Garage With The Old Shed



An ugly, old automobile shed on a home place may be replaced, at comparatively slight expense, by a modern garage which will also increase the financial value of the property.

An Old, Run-down Garage in the Rear of a Residence, Is Unsightly.

An unsightly garage or a run-down old, frame automobile shed in the rear of an attractive house, always merits criticism from all persons who view the premises is the opinion of Howard A. Johnston of the Perfect Construction Co.

Particularly is this the case when prospective purchasers come to inspect the property with a view of buying.

These visitors will, in all probability, mention the absence of a modern garage as one of the chief objections to purchasing the property, for the majority of home owners maintain automobiles, so a modern garage is one of the necessary accessories of all modern homes.

So the money spent in modernizing the old shed or in providing a new garage is a good investment for the owners of home property. A study of the cost of modernizing a garage from a dollar and cents standpoint, will reveal that the cash outlay is relatively small.

A view of theunsightly automobile shed which stood in the rear of an attractive residence is shown in the above picture. The modern garage which replaced the old shed is also pictured.

Needless to say, the good garage will pay for itself in a few years by lessening depreciation and by protcting the cars from the elements.

A two or three car garage is the logical size to build, even if you have but one car. Often storage space is needed for a second car. A two-car garage increases the value of your property. It can be built for only slightly more than the cost of a one-car structure.

RID THE HOME OF RATS AND INSECTS

Commercial Organizations Specialize on Ridding Homes of Vermin.

Hundreds of millions of dollars are lost every year in the United States alone, through the depredations of vermin, rodents and moths, in the opinion of T. C. Raley of Getz Exterminators, Inc.

One of the biggest tasks in the conservation of human health and property that confronts us in the congested cities is the eradication of ants, bedbugs, roaches, rats and mice, he said.

Many persons treat the insect and rat problem lightly until it reaches such a stage that it requires an expert to successfully exterminate them.

Cats, traps, poisons, brooms and clubs are all useful, especially if action is taken at the first appearance of the pests, but in cases of more severe infestation it is advisable to employ the services of a professional exterminator or at least ask for their advice.

All homes, no matter how careful and exacting the occupants are in their living habits, are exposed to the danger of being infested with these repulsive pests—the same applies to business houses, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent yearly for preparations and services of unknown and inexperienced concerns in attempts to rid these commercial institutions of insect pests.

St. Louis has one of the oldest and largest insect exterminating concerns in the Middlewest whose service and products are well known. The service of the organization includes advice and suggestions as to ridding homes and buildings of vermin and rodents either by yearly contract or separate applications.

Window Cracks Indicate Cold and Drafty Rooms

Can Be Made Tight Against Inleaking Cold Air and Soot by Proper Weather Stripping, Insuring Comfort in Winter.

Satisfactory home-heating is not a matter of burning great amounts of fuel but of controlling the amount of cold air that leaks in through the cracks around the windows and doors of the house in the opinon of W. J. Moslank of the Monarch Metal Weatherstrip Co.

It is impossible, he pointed out, to control the temperature of the outside air or the velocity of the wind. Yet, since the inside temperature is directly affected by the outside air temperature, it is necessary to control the volume of air that enters.

Metal weatherstrips stops heat waste by permanently sealing the cracks, regardless of the shrinkage of woodwork.

Since the purpose of the fuel we burn is to heat the air in the building, it naturally follows that this fuel consumption must be in proportion to the volume of air we have to heat.

Windows and doors, he said, must have "clearance" so they can be opened and closed. A new window is usually fitted with a 1-16-inch clearance (or crack). This means an all-the-way-round crack, for an average size window, 21 feet long.

As the sash and frame season and shrink, this clearance widens to a sizeable crack. And through these cracks the cold air blows and leaks—cold air that wastes more than half fuel.

It is evident that the greater the crack the more cold outside air will leak in to chill the temperature.

Continuing, Moslank said the crack around a window, when new, allows all the warm air in a room to be replaced by cold outside air more than once every hour. This cold air must be heated to comfortable room temperature by burning more fuel.

It is also certain that, as the crack increases, due to the age of the building and the shrinkage of wood, the air leakage wil lincrease. The lower the temperature outside the colder the inleaking air will be. The greater the wind velocity the greater the volume of inleaking air.

With guaranteed metal weatherstripping an immediate, tangible saving of at least one-third the annual fuel bill is the usual result. This has been the experience of thousands, in buildings, great and small. These savings continue year after year, according to Moslauk.

THERMOSTATS USED TO CONTROL HEAT

These Mechanical Controls Readily Attached to Home Heating Plants.

The average householder finds much of interest in any practical suggestion for getting more heat from the fuel he buys. He is particularly interested if he has a modern heating plant and depends upon his own care and supervision to save fuel.

It is a matter of experience that any ordinary care cannot control a fire and keep an even temperature throughout the house. That would require one to sit by the fire and watch it all day long. That is but one reason for dissatisfaction, however.

The desirability of maintaining an even, healthful temperature at all hours of the day and night is evident. Thus conditions have developed devices for thermostatic control and automatic regulation of heating plants.

These mechanical controls for furnace or boiler are simple devices, entirely automatic. The thermostat, placed on the wall of any room, may be adjusted to cause operation of dampers on a variation of a single degree of temperature. The fire is fed as usual, but the dampers are opened or closed, automatically.

MODERN HOMES IN DEMAND

Money Spent in Modernizing Is Always Well Spent.

The average person wants a home that is up-to-date. He wants to live in a house that has modern fixtures, hardwood floors, well arranged rooms, tiled baths and clean cut graceful lines. When he finds a place of this sort he is eager to rent or purchase it.

Homes that are modern are always in demand. They sell more easily in the slow market. The house that is difficult to sell or rent is usually the old-timer that has no modern conveniences or with fixtures and accessories that are out of date.

Modernization Not Costly.

Usually a house can be modernized for less than the amount a family could pay if it were pressed to the limit. Every family wants to spend its money so that it "goes the furthest," and the exact amount to be spent on a home can be determined wisely only by carefully checking over the family's needs and its expenses.

A FEW LITTLE CHANGES

Big Results Follow All Types of Home Improvements.

As a general thing, houses need only a few changes, here and there, to bring their exteriors up to date or to render their interiors modern and attractive.

For instance, a new entrance with modern hardware; conversion of an old porch into a sun room; installation of dormer windows in the upper story; addition of a new type roof; new hardwood or composition floors; modern heating system; new plumbing equipment; interior decoration of all rooms and painting of all wood trim, will any one of them, produce great improvement and a big difference in the home picture.

CONCERNING RADIOS

Radio Cabinets Now Harmonize With Room Furnishings.

Remember that radio is a piece of furniture as well as a source of pleasure. Choose the cabinet to harmonize with the furniture of the room in which it is placed.

The radio is generally purchased entirely with its technical features in mind. True, tone is important and the ability of the set to get distant stations a convenience and source of pleasure.

Yet do not overlook the importance of the cabinet as a piece of furniture. The thoughtful homeowner will see that the radio fits into the decorative scheme also.

Modernize Remodel—Beautify Your Home

It is an attractive presentation which shows by actual photographs what can be accomplished toward Remodeling, Modernizing and Beautifying Homes. It shows pictures of unattractive, out-of-date homes . . . large and small . . . before being remodeled, along with pictures of the same homes after marked changes have been made. Those who made the changes are writing a series of articles for the Sunday Post-Dispatch. Watch for these articles every Sunday.

BROOKLYN, June 14.—Adelphia Bissonette, the hard-hitting first sacker of the hard-hitting Brooklyn Robins, shot his eleventh home run of the season over the right-field fence in the twelfth inning this afternoon, giving Wilbert Robinson's league leaders a 6-to-5 victory over the Cardinals in the first game of the series.

The four-base wallop broke up a contest that had developed into a hurling duel between William Watson Clark of the Robins and Charles Flint Rhem of the Cardinals. Rhem went to the hill in the eighth inning after the Robins had overcome a five-run lead. The strong-armed son of Carolina blanked the Brooklyn sluggers for four innings, yielding only one hit, and the sting of the defeat was as nothing compared to Gabby Street's pleasure at seeing the right-hander in his old-time form.

Rhem had everything. He was raring up on his leg and throwing straight overhand shots; the ball was dipping and bending with startling abruptness. Rhem got Bressler on a foul to start the twelfth inning, but then Bissonette caught a fast one with one of his wild swings and the game was over.

Rhem's Fine Pitching.

Rhem's best display of pinch-pitching was in the tenth inning. With one out Bissonette walked and Finn doubled to right-center, sending Bissonette to third. Rhem pitched three balls to Clark, then put over two called strikes and then Clark tapped to Rhem and Shad's throw to the plate retired Bissonette, after which Eddie Moore flied to Douthit to end the inning.

Bockenkamp Wins State Golf Title, Defeating Schambach, 4 and 3

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, June 14.—Richard E. "Dick" Bockenkamp of the Midland Valley Country Club, St. Louis, returned today to the pinnacle of Missouri amateur golfdom which he forsook eight years ago to concentrate on getting ahead in business.

The slight young man who had his business well enough in hand to take up competitive golf seriously again and won medalist honors in the twenty-sixth annual Missouri amateur tournament, disposed of a fellow townsman, Luther Schambach, in the 36-hole final match at the Millburn Country Club here this afternoon.

Schambach of the Osage Country Club, who ousted the defending champion, Elliott Whitbread of St. Louis, in the second round, bowed to the 1922 champion, 4 and 3.

Schambach's sub-par shooting displayed yesterday afternoon was woefully absent today and he never held an advantage over the man who proved a champion can come back.

Schambach Gets Bad Start.

The runner-up got away to a bad start but recovered his game to win the eighth and ninth, giving Bockenkamp only one hole to the good at the first turn. Then Bockenkamp got "hot" again and thereafter on the second nine shunned the traps with which the championship layout is generously sprinkled.

They went to lunch with Bockenkamp five up, and with gallery-ites recounting the champion's great recoveries. Lockerroom gossip at Millburn, already abuzz with accounts of Bockenkamp's eagle two holed from 160 yards with a spade mashie yesterday, had another item of interest today.

It was the champion's niblick pitch that plopped directly into the cup from a self-imposed stymie lie on the twelfth green this morning. That came just a few minutes after he managed a halve on the tenth by sinking an 18-foot putt.

Such golf was unbeatable while it lasted, but Bockenkamp got into difficulties on the second 18, and at one stage his advantage was reduced to three holes.

Starting the afternoon 18, Schambach hooked his tee shot out of bounds by inches and was over the green with his next. From there he rolled across the green into a trap and conceded the hole, Bockenkamp who had driven down the middle also was over with his next but well on in three. They took par 5s at the twentieth.

Schambach laid his 10-foot putt for a birdie 2 at the twenty-first after his tee shot rolled inside of Bockenkamp's. The latter needed a par 3.

Both drove just short of the green on the 240-yard, dog-leg twenty-second and Schambach put his approach closer than Bockenkamp's. Bockenkamp putted in his third from 12 feet and Schambach tapped his in from one foot, both taking birdie 3s for a half.

At the next they were trapped on opposite sides of the green. Bockenkamp's intended blast was topped out of bounds. After exploding his dropped ball past the cup and watching his opponent play safely out, Bockenkamp conceded the hole.

Both tee shots found the green on the following short hole, Bockenkamp's terrifically back-spinned blow bounding back toward him. Bockenkamp's 20-foot putt rimmed the cup and they halved in 3s.

Schambach's third on the long twenty-fifth was in a bunker and his "out" barely cleared the slope. His putt hovered on the lip and stayed there. Bockenkamp winning the hole with a 5, to go 5 up. On the twenty-sixth, Bockenkamp found his second shot in a grass bunker from which he putted up a sheer embankment and was short,

NAVY CREW WINS OVER PRINCETON AND CALIFORNIA

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 14.—A Navy crew that rowed like the mighty Midshipman eights of half a dozen years ago fought off one of the greatest closing spurts ever seen in this part of the country to beat the Golden Bears of California on Lake Carnegie this afternoon. Princeton was third.

In the season's first rowing battle between East and West, the Middies took the lead early in the mile and three-quarters race and hung on to win by half a length from the Pacific Coast Giants who sprinted at the amazing rate of 43 strokes to the minute in a desperate final drive.

Princeton was left far behind as the Eastern and Western standard bearers clammed down the course never more than a length apart and the Tigers, game but outpointed, finished four lengths back of California.

The Golden Bear Cubs were forced to take third place in the freshman race, the only other event on the program, as Princeton's unbeaten yearlings won by three quarters of a length from the Navy plebes with California two and a half lengths back.

ITALY TAKES LEAD OVER AUSTRALIA IN DAVIS CUP SINGLES

By the Associated Press.

MILAN, Italy, June 14.—Italy took a commanding lead over the strong Australian team in the first day of play of their semifinal round Davis cup tennis tie today. The Italians won both singles matches to lead 2-0 and needed only one more victory to clinch a place in the finals.

Giorgio de Stefani defeated Harry Hopman, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2, and Baron H. L. Demorpurgo conquered Jack Crawford, 5—7, 6—3, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4.

Morocco, Under Good Ride by Dent Smith, Wins at Fairmount

By Dent McSkimming.

George Ogle's horse, Morocco, and R. C. Stable's 2-year-old filly, Red Chill, shared the limelight at Fairmount Park yesterday afternoon in winning two outstanding races of the program. Morocco tamed the best of the $3500 claiming division in winning the fifth race and Red Chill became a claimant to the title of 2-year-old champion of the meeting in defeating seven of the best juveniles in the third event on the card.

Only 6000 persons witnessed the program.

Morocco galloped to his third victory of the meeting aided by the skillful maneuvering of Jockey Dent Smith, who would not let the horse overstep himself in the first half-mile while Calome was setting a fast pace. Smith was content to keep his mount snug in second position next the rail waiting for a sign of weakness in Calome.

Morocco Wins Easily.

The latter ran as though mitch the best until the stretch turn, when Smith let Morocco loose. In the last furlong Morocco proved himself pounds the best, pulling away to win easily by four lengths.

Royal Yeoman finished third and Crucero fourth. The latter appeared to have good early speed sufficient at least to put him in third place at the half-mile ground, but when it came to making a bid for the lead on the turn he had nothing left.

Red Chill Scores Again.

The R. C. stable's filly Red Chill won a place among the leading 2-year-olds of the meeting when she came from behind to win the third race on the card, the secondary feature. While Red Chill's victory was not a great surprise, since she has shown in all her starts unusual speed and promise, the defeat of Sun B. was a shock to the players who supported her at less than even money. Sun B. had won four of her five most recent races displaying in all of them surprising early speed.

At the rise of the barrier at the five-furlong gate, Princess Perodixe was first to forge to the front, but she was not able to make much of her advantage. Battel Sweep in close pursuit and Sun B. was away in a tangle. Jockey Pendergrass hustled the filly hard in the first half mile and succeeded in forcing his way up to third position on the turn but it was at the expense of an expenditure of pounds of energy and when it came time to make a move in the stretch she was not equal.

Meanwhile Cavens brought Red Chill up from virtually last place to third at the head of the stretch and by getting through on the rail was able to take command as Princess Peroxide and Whataman tired. Goodrich forced Battle Sweep to make haste in the stretch and was beaten only a nose at the wire. Ann Clay of the Audley

Reveille Boy began slowly from the outside of the starting gate where he was ordered by the starter, gradually closed up a big gap in the first six furlongs, reaching contention, and when straightened out in the stretch, gradually wore down and headed Gallant Knight and won going away. Gallant Knight was never far off the pace, moved up with a rush at the far turn, headed Hornpipe into the lead and drew away but tired in the stretch when the winner challenged near the last eighth. Xenofol raced forwardly on the inside, saved ground and held on well. Snowflake closed a wide gap from slow beginning and finished strongly as did Ned O. Tannery had no excuses, and tired.

$2 mutuels paid: Reveille Boy, win $113.08, place $20.06, show $14.28; Gallant Knight, place $4.58, show $3.60; Xenofol, show $4.60.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 14.—A 55-to-1 shot in the betting, owned by a former Memphis, Tenn., corner grocery store keeper, who was nearly flat broke before the race started, dropped out of the clouds today to win the $50,000 American Derby at Washington Park in one of the most startling upsets in turf history.

The victor was Reveille Boy, never before winner of an important race.

While a sweltering crowd of 35,000 stood in silence, gasping in the excitement of the surprising finish, Reveille Boy, the rank outsider, galloped home to victory like a champion, beating the heavily-played favorite, Gallant Knight, by four lengths.

Five lengths back of Gallant Knight came Xenofol, owned by Gifford Cochran of New York. Snow Flake, winner of the American Coaching Club Stakes at Belmont 10 days ago, was fourth, eaten for third place by a nose. Eight other crack 3-year-olds trailed Reveille Boy across the wire.

The winner paid $113.08 for each $2 ticket in the mutuels to win, $20.06 to place and $14.28 to show, and "Old Johnny" Best, proud owner of this startling 3-year-old, didn't bet a nickel on the chances of his pride and joy, the only horse he owns. However, the race was worth $49,700 as first money to owner Best and tonight he celebrated with Willie Fronk, an old-time jockey, who rode Reveille Boy to victory, and Johnny Paul, gray-haired trainer of the triumphant horse.

Lowers Track Record.

Reveille Boy clipped nearly three full seconds off the Washington Park track record when he ran the mile and a quarter in 2:04 4-5 in beating all the great 3-year-old horses of the year with the exception of Gallant Fox and Whitchone. The former record for the distance was 2:07 1-5, made by Freya, a selling plater.

No sooner had the 12 3-year-olds reached the post for the start than Reveille Boy made his presence in the race known. He wheeled and bucked, reared up and down and all but threw Jockey Fronk. He acted up this way for six minutes and 30 seconds, rearing and tearing, delaying the start and refusing to get into his stall in the starting gate. He finally was taken to the far outside and started from there, getting away last in the field of 12.

Gallant Knight Gains Lead.

When the barrier was sprung Reveille Boy showed his speed at once. Jockey Fronk, spanking him with his whip and pressing his face to Reveille Boy's neck, rushed him across the track to join the others near the rail. Portmanteau was off first, with Tannery right at his heels. Hornpipe was third and Gallant Knight fourth.

They ran in this order around the lower turn. As the field straightened out for the dash down the back stretch, Gallant Knight, the favorite, sailed into the lead, pulling out to an advantage of two lengths. It looked like it was all over.

Then, all of a sudden, there was a flash of red and white moving up on the extreme outside. It was Jockey Fronk aboard Reveille Boy.

As the field hit the lower bend Reveille Boy had moved up from last place to a position where he

DE MAR BEATS INDIAN RUNNER IN MARATHON

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, June 14.—Setting a pace which left 41 others far in the rear, the 42-year-old Clarence De Mar, running under the colors of the Melrose, Mass., Legion Post, today won the second annual pre-Olympic race of 26 miles, 385 yards, in two hours, 34 minutes, 45 seconds.

The sturdy veteran of three Olympic games breasted the tape 10 minutes 56 2-5 seconds ahead of the second place runner, Harry Chaca, Hopi Indian, who won the contest last year. De Mar's time was 2 minutes 9 1-5 seconds slower than the world record of 2 hours 32 minutes 25 4-5 seconds, set by H. Kolehmainen of Finland in the 1920 Olympiad.

Running mates of Chaca, Hopi tribesmen, competing for the Los Angeles Athletic Club, swept the next four places.

De Mar took the lead at the end of two miles and was never headed, although Howard Tsemptewa, fourth finisher, challenged him at the six-mile mark.

Harvard Beaten In Polo Tourney

By the Associated Press.

RUMSON, N. J., June 14.—Harvard's polo team, intercollegiate champions, was eliminated today from the 1930 tournament by West Point. The Cadets led all the way and won by a score of 8 to 3. Harvard was without the services of E. T. Gerry, one of its outstanding stars.

Capt. Joseph Haskell led the Army team in scoring with four goals, and he was greatly assisted by R. Eugene Beebe with three goals. Nelson W. Kimball, Harvard's No. 1, made two of his team's total.

TUT UNOFFICIAL VICTOR OVER SULLIVAN

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 14.—King Tut, Minneapolis lightweight, tonight pounded out an unofficial decision over My Sullivan, St. Paul welterweight, in a bruising 10-round bout which was crammed with action throughout. Tut weighed 141 and Sullivan 143½ pounds.

Mike Gibbons knocked out Geneo Peru of South America in the first round. A left hook did the trick after Peru had been on the floor once.

By James M. Gould.

"Goose" Goslin, now of St. Louis, and Heine Manush, now of Washington, performed about equally well for their new teams, yesterday, in the opening of the series between the Browns and Senators but, as a matter of fact, Rick Ferrell "stole the show" from both of them and, driving in four runs on three straight hits, personally conducted the Browns to a 5-4 victory. This victory by the way, lifted the Browns to sixth place and went down in the books as Sammy Gray's second victory of the year.

Both Goslin and Manush hit safely once. Both took care of their chances in the field. But, as the Browns won the game, the first day advantage in the somewhat startling trade may be said to have rested with Bill Killefer.

Gray Deserved Victory.

Gray thoroughly deserved his victory, allowing only six hits. Two and perhaps three of the Washington runs were due to errors by Gray's supporting cast. Blue erring twice, Ferrell once and Gray once.

In stealing the limelight, Ferrell made three hits in three chances. His single in the second scored Kress and Gullic and his double in the fifth let him score another run. In the seventh, with Melillo on first, he made it a perfect day by hitting one of Relief Pitcher Braxton's serves into the left field stands for a homer. Therefore he batted in four runs and scored the other himself.

Had Washington won the game the Senators would have taken over top place in the American League, as Cleveland and Philadelphia also were defeated.

Incidentally, it was the third straight victory for Killefer's men.

The attendance was estimated at 7000.

Manush had a chance in the ninth to win a Washington home for himself. Two were out, West was on second and Rice on first. But the best Heine could do was to hit a fly which Gullic caught to end the hostilities.

The Senators scored in the first on hits by Rice and Manush and Cronin's infield out. As has been told, Ferrell singled over two in the Browns' second, Kress and Melillo being on by virtue of singles.

Misplays Aid Senators.

It was all tied up in the fourth when, with two out, Blue dropped a throw, Bluege singled and Ferrell let Goslin's fine return get away from him.

In the fifth, the Browns again went into the lead. With one down, Ferrell doubled and scored immediately thereafter when Gray singled to center. There was plenty of scoring in the seventh, the Senators and Browns each counting twice. For Washington, Bluege walked. Hayes bunted for a sacrifice, but Gray threw the ball far over the head of Melillo, covering first. On this throw, Bluege scored and Hayes reached third. Gray then tightened and disposed of Tate, but West's hopper took a bad bound over Melillo's head and Hayes scored.

Ferrell's homer, in the last half, drove in Melillo who had reached first on a fumble by Bluege.

With one out in the ninth, Harris, an outfielder obtained only yesterday by the Senators from the White Sox, doubled, but he was run down on West's tap to Gray and, after Rice had walked, Manush flied out to end it all.

In the second game of the series today, Dick Coffman will pitch for the Browns. Walter Johnson says he has decided to use Al Crowder against his old teammates.

Brownie Notes

GOSLIN was away to a good start when he robbed West of a hit in the first inning by a startling running catch in left center. Not to be outdone, Manush, in his first time at bat for Washington, singled to right.

Cronin's speed was rather shown up in the first. With Rice on third and Manush on first, Cronin hit to Melillo. Oscar's throw to Kress was too late to get Manush at second, but Kress' relay flagged Cronin at first.

O'Rourke Back at Third.

O'Rourke was back on third for the Browns. Hale was uninjured, but Killefer prescribed a rest for him, after 15 hitless times at bat.

Marberry nearly passed Ferrell in the second. It would have been better had he done so, for "Rick" singled two runs over. He hit a "cripple" when the count was "three and one."

The Senators were hitting hard in the early innings and two double plays by the Browns didn't hurt Gray any. Nor did a fine catch of a foul and a fine stop of a grounder by O'Rourke.

Manus hand Goslin not only exchanged uniforms but also positions in the field and spots in the respective batting orders.

Goslin Shows Great Arm.

Goslin showed a great arm in the fourth, when he ferried Bluege's hit home. It was right on the first hop to Ferrell, who, in his anxiety to retire the runner, neglected the formality of first catching the ball, and thereby drew an error.

In the fifth, when Gray singled Ferrell home, Manush also cut loose with a great throw, but Marberry cut it off and, perhaps, spoiled the play at the plate.

Cronin got away with a bit of doubtful sportsmanship in the sixth. He raised a foul which Ferrell went after and, just as Ferrell was about to make the catch, tossed his bat in front of the Browns' receiver. Killefer claimed interference, but his claim was overruled. Then Cronin did foul to Ferrell.

The summary doesn't contain such a heading, but one might be inserted to read "Runs thrown in, Gray 1." He did that with a queer heave of Hayes' intended sacrifice in the seventh.

ATHLETICS SUFFER THEIR FIFTH STRAIGHT DEFEAT, LOSING TO TIGERS, 11-2

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, June 14.—The Philadelphia Athletics took their fifth consecutive lacing by the score of 11 to 2 in the series opener with the Detroit Tigers this afternoon.

Scoring four runs in the first to drive Mahaffey from the box and counting five more in the second off Shores, the Tigers piled up a lead that never was threatened. George Uhle in the box for the Tigers, held the world champions to six safeties. Akers of the Tigers rapped out a homer in the second with one on base and Williams got a circuit blow for the Athletics in the ninth.

Bissonette's Homer in 12th Brings Defeat to Cards, 6-5

formance, Rhem probably will be given an early chance as a starting pitcher. He drew the starting assignment in the first game of the season, but lacked his usual speed and control and has worked little since then. Before the present road campaign started he underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils.

Hallahan Batted Out.

Bill Hallahan was the starting pitcher who couldn't protect a five-run lead that his comrades gave him.

Adams' triple and Bottomley's sacrifice fly produced a run in the first inning and in the fourth Peel's double and Orsatti's single added another. In the fifth, singles by Adams, High and Peel and a wild throw to th eplate by Bissonette gave the Cardinals three more.

Then the Robins began to fly. Bressler walked. Bissonette doubled, Flowers hit a sacrifice fly and Lopez singled to produce two runs in the fifth, and in the sixth Frederick hit a homer. Herman walked and after Haid had relieved Hallahan, Bissonette hit his second double to score Herman.

Lopez beat out a bunt for his fourth straight hit to open the seventh inning. He moved to second on an infield out, to third when Adams fumbled Gilbert's grounder and beat the throw to the plate on Frederick's grounder to Farrell.

Jim Elliott started for the Robins, Phelps pitched the sixth, seventh and eighth, and then Clark took up the burden.

Redbird Notes.

BROOKLYN, June 14.

Jess Haines will pitch for the Cards tomorrow in the second game of the series, unless Dazzy Vance works for the Robins. If Vance is on the hill, Grabowski will hurl against him.

Ernie Orsatti reported his ankle much improved, and so Gabby Street sent him to right field in the hope he would be more effective against Elliott than Watkins had been against Boston southpaws.

Frank Frisch's father will be home tomorrow after a trip to Germany, so Frank will postpone his departure for St. Louis until after he has greeted him.

Some "Reasons Why."

Men who have followed the fortunes of the Brooklyn club closely for several years attribute the excellent showing of the 1930 Robins to several factors. Glenn Wright, now out with an injured leg, is mentioned prominently as having steadied the infield. Then Neal "Mickey" Finn, the second sacker from the Missions club of the Pacific Coast League, has made good, pushing Jakie Flowers to the bench.

Del Bissonette lost most of last year because of illness, is playing regularly and pounding the ball.

Catcher Lopez from Atlanta is doing most of the catching and is described as one of the best throwing catchers in the league. He is hitting well over .330 and has bolstered the club offensively and defensively.

Finally, and of great importance, the pitching has been excellent, with Luque, Vance, Elliott, Phelps and Clark carrying most of the burden.

Finn Makes Fine Play.

Gordon Slade, who is filling in during Wright's absence, was Finn's teammate with Missions. The two infielders were purchased at a reported price of $60,000.

YANKEES STOP CLEVELAND BUT INDIANS HOLD FIRST PLACE

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., June 14.—Cleveland's winning streak was broken today as the Yankees won a hard-hitting contest, 11 to 7.

Cleveland had won seven games in a row.

Gehrig hit his fifteenth home run of the season.

The Indians' position at the top of the American League was not disturbed, as both Philadelphia and Washington also were defeated and the first and third teams remain within seven points of each other.

RED SOX HAND FABER HIS NINTH DEFEAT

CHICAGO, June 14.—Thirteen hits off Faber and McKain gave Boston an 8 to 4 victory over the White Sox in the opening game of their series today.

Four straight hits drove Faber to shelter in the fourth, with the score 3 to 1 against him, and the Red Sox proceeded to clinch the game with a four-run spree in the sixth. Earl Webb led the attack with four straight singles.

It was Faber's ninth defeat as against a lone victory this season.

KANSAS U. SCHEDULES FOOTBALL GAME WITH WASHINGTON, NOV. 14

LAWRENCE, Kan., June 14.—The University of Kansas football team will meet the Washington University Bears of St. Louis on Nov. 14, 1931, Dr. F. C. Allen, athletic director, announced today.

Final negotiations were concluded today with Dr. Al Sharpe of Washington. Kansas had scheduled Oklahoma for that date, but Ben G. Owen, Sooner director, agreed to change the date to Nov. 7. Thus enabling Kansas to meet the Bears again.

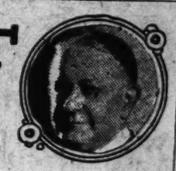
Dr. Allen left tonight for Springfield, O., where he is to teach at the Wittenberg College summer coaching school, and later at the Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A. He finished a course at Oklahoma Baptist U. this week.

The Kansas director reported that Nebraska authorities would like to have the K. U. game played at Lincoln this fall, because of the drawing power of Big Jim Bausch and the Jayhawker powerhouse. Allen said, however, that the game will be played in Lawrence as scheduled.

The revised 1931 schedule:

Oct. 10, Iowa State at Lawrence.
Oct. 17, Kansas Aggies at Lawrence.
Oct. 24, Nebraska at Lawrence.
Oct 31, open.
Nov. 7, Oklahoma at Norman.
Nov. 14, Washington at St. Louis.
Nov. 21, Missouri at Lawrence.

SPORT SALAD by L. C. Barnes



Casual Comment.

THE game abounds in home-run clouts and triples,
The rabbit ball evades the fielders' clutches;
It likewise is a banner year for cripples,
Who on the bench are hitting on both crutches.

Miss Fortune it appears is always seeking
A shining mark to pick upon and harass;
The Charleyhorse the tendons has been tweaking,
While many limbs are swathed in plaster-Paris.

As day by day the ranks are growing thinner,
And substitutes appear in each position,
It's getting pretty hard to pick the winner—
It all depends upon the club physician.

The Real Guy.

It's getting to be that the most valuable man to a team is the bone doctor.

So it can readily be seen that baseball is a hazardous game at the best. Between the solid bone and the broken bones the old pastime gets it going and coming.

University of Maryland has a one-man gridiron squad in the person of Bob Wilson. Watch him grow.

Youth may insist on being served, but since old Tom Zachary joined forces with George Sisler, Rabbit Maranville and Hank Gowdy, the Boston Braves are conceding no three-foot puts to the Kindergarten Leaguers.

Just to show that he was not giving an inch to the rising generation, Tom not only won his premier as a Brave, but contributed a home run himself by way of adding to the gaiety of the occasion.

Old "Pete" Alexander carried on until he was past 43 and with ordinary care could have run his string up to about 53. So much for youth.

However, baseball is a young man's game. That's why Ty Cobb had to lay down his bat at the age of 42 when he was still going fairly strong.

Alexander was known as the game's smartest pitcher. But he was finally outsmarted by an older and stronger guy who gets 'em all if they stay with him.

Incidentally it is reported that Alex may go to Dallas as the highest priced pitcher in the Texas League. If Pete regains his old f[illegible]he enemy attack will pr[illegible]be confined to a few scat[illegible]Texas Leaguers.

"Silk Stockings Gag Broadway Victim."

"Schoolboy Pitches Third No-Hit, No-Run Game of the Season."

He would do that right after our eulogy of the old timers and their superiority to youth.

Between the Giants and Dodgers New York has a rather rosy chance to grab that National League pennant. All they have to do is play both ends of the bridge against the middle.

See where Dazzy Vance has been broadcasting over the radio. Another one of the penalties of greatness.

Westborough Net Team Wins From Westwood Club

The Westborough Country Club tennis team defeated the Westwood Country Club players, 3 to 2, in the feature of yesterday's St. Louis District Interclub play. Capt. Reinhardt's team captured both doubles matches and one of the singles contests to gain the victory. The matches were played on the Westwood courts.

In the first singles match Herbert Weinstock won from Edwin Beckman, 7—5, 6—0. Proctor Wright gained a point for Westborough by winning from R. N. Skrainka, while Kenneth Senkosky lost his match to John Friedman, Westwood's coming star. Bill Buscom and Robert Semple, former Missouri Valley junior stars, joined the Westborough team to win the first doubles match, while Westborough also captured the second doubles contest.

The Triple A tennis team defeated the Washington University Club players, 5 to 0, in another Interclub match, while the Illinois Mosaic Tile Club team won from the St. Louis Country Club team by the same score. Both matches were hard fought, a number of individual matches requiring extra sets.

BALTIMORE WINS 20 OUT OF 23 GAMES TO LEAD INTERNATIONAL

BALTIMORE, June 14.—Winning 20 out of the last 23 games to climb in three weeks from fifth place to first place in the International League standing, the Baltimore Orioles tomorrow start a six-game series with Rochester which will decide whether they are to hang to the top or again slip below the Red Wings, last year's pennant winners.

The Orioles started the season with a rush, but slipped and on May 24 returned from a long road trip in fifth place with an even .500 per centage in the standings, having won and lost 17 games. Today they lost their third game in 23 starts, and held a percentage of .649 with 37 games won and 20 lost, for a four and a half game lead over Rochester.

SEIBOLD SHUTS OUT REDS, 2-0, FOR HIS NINTH 1930 VICTORY

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, June 14.—By defeating Cincinnati 2 to 0 here today the Boston Braves won their first shutout victory of the year and pitcher Socks Seibold chalked up his ninth win. It was not until the ninth the Reds were able to make two hits in one inning.

In this frame Welsh's throw to third cut down Sukeforth, who had walked, after Callaghan had singled to center. Crawford singled, but Heilmann and Kelly were thrown out, thereby ending what looked like a Red rally.

Richbourg's squeeze single in the third and Maranville's scoring at the head of a double steal in the fourth gave Boston its runs.

CUBS DEFEAT GIANTS, STRENGTHENING HOLD ON SECOND PLACE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Chicago Cubs entrenched themselves a little stronger in second place today, defeating the New York Giants, 8 to 5, in the first game of the battle for runner-up honors in the National League. The Cubs now hold a two and one-half game advantage over the Giants.

Pat Malone went the route for the league champions and although issuing eight bases on balls, held a lead given him in the early innings.

Fred Leach accounted for four of the Giants' runs with two homers with one man on base each time.

Woody English, Cubs third baseman, was chased from the game in the fourth inning by Umpire Clark for disputing a decision at second base.

As the field rounded into the last turn for the drive to the wire, Reveille Boy was going like a champion. He shot into the lead at the head of the stretch, raced Gallant Knight into submission, and widened his margin until Fronk was sure he had the victory won.

Previous to today Reveille Boy had not amounted to much as a money winner. The most notable achievement was finishing second to Gallant Knight in the Fairmount Derby but a week ago he finished sixth, absolutely last, in the Cleveland Derby.

"Old Man" Best bred Reveille Boy from Last Reveille and Little Ann. Up until the time Reveille Boy was foaled, Little Ann was Best's only horse, his complete racing stable. She fell dead in a race a year ago and then Best began racing Reveille Boy.

ENGLISH WOMEN TENNIS STARS DEFEAT AMERICANS FOR WIGHTMAN CUP.

MRS. MOODY AND MISS JACOBS ARE DEFEATED IN DECIDING DOUBLES MATCH OF SERIES

By William T. Tilden II.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 14.—Before a gallery of over 8000, Great Britain won the Wightman Cup by four matches to three. Helen Jacobs, playing superb tennis, crushed Joan Fry to even the score at two matches all. Then Helen Wills Moody placed the United States ahead by beating Mrs. Holcroft Watson, but only after a desperate first set in which Mrs. Watson led 5—0 at one time and twice held the set point at 5—4. Miss Mudford brought England even by an overwhelming victory over Miss Palfrey in straight sets with the little American girl a victim of center courtitis. Miss Godfrey and Mrs. Watson then won the cup in a thrilling three-set match over America's two Helens in one of the most exciting climaxes ever seen in tennis history.

The crucial singles contest between Miss Fry and Miss Jacobs opened with Miss Fry serving. Helen Jacobs evidently determined to avenge yesterday's defeat, opened with a rush that broke Miss Fry's defense and the American swept through the set, 6—0, in a magnificent display of hard driving. Miss Fry held game point three times in the fourth game but Miss Jacobs' great serving saved it each time. Miss Jacobs was coming in and volleying brilliantly at times, while her terrific driving had Miss Fry on the defensive at all times.

Helen Jacobs, in the first set, showed the finest tennis she ever played. Strokes and tactics were beyond criticism. Miss Fry is a great fighter and started the second set unflustered by her loss of the first. She took the first game, but there was no sign of weakening in Miss Jacobs and she served her way to one all. The game went with the service to two all when Miss Fry lost her delivery due to marvelous driving by Miss Jacobs and a lucky net cord off a hard recovery by the American making the games 3—2 in favor of the Untied States. Miss Fry was in a critical position, but got back into the match by breaking through Miss Jacobs' service for three all. At this period Miss Jacobs showed signs of fatigue. Miss Fry was using Mrs. Watson's tactics, running Miss Jacobs about the court, but she was making too many errors off Miss Jacobs' chops and the American led, 4—3. Melen Jacobs then launched a fierce attack that carried her to 5—3 and then ran out the set, 6—3, and tied the score of match at two matches all.

Mrs. Moody Starts Poorly.

Mrs. Moody and Mrs. Watson followed. Mrs. Moody opened her service with a double fault and netted ball, reached 40-30 only to double fault again. Mrs. Watson's terrific forehand won England the first game. By a series of terrific driving rallies Mrs. Watson then forced Mrs. Moody to run miles on the defensive and crashed her way to 5—0 by superlative play. It was the first time in years that Mrs. Moody was definitely in serious difficulties. She resorted to a slow covering game in an attempt to break up Mrs. Watson, but the English woman went calmly ahead to 4—0. Mrs. Moody was obviously growing nervous, missing many shots and the excitement growing to the point of hysteria. Mrs. Watson went 5—0 in a game replete with the most senational rallies with the invincible Mrs. Moody obviously in extreme difficulty and facing defeat.

Mrs. Watson led 30-15, 2 points from set in the sixth game, but broke and these errors gave Mrs. Moody her first game. Up to then Mrs. Watson played flawless tennis, but the break had come. Mrs. Moody went to 2—5, then Mrs. Watson steadied and reached 30-15 again on Helen's errors, but once more Mrs. Moody's relentless pressure forced the English girl into errors and it was 5-3. In a moment more it was 5-4 and Mrs. Watson's last chance was facing her. The next point she won with a marvelous drive. She again held a lead of 30-15, but a net made it 30-all. She gained set point with a short drive, but missed it by placing the ball over the baseline. She gained another set point on Mrs. Moody's errors, but again she drove out. Once more she had the whole court but missed an easy stroke with Mrs. Moody off court and netted another and it was 5-all and the match was over.

Helen was running miles, making remarkable recoveries and extended to the limit. From then to the end of the match Mrs. Moody had complete control and won, 7—5, 6—1. To Mrs. Moody must go great credit for courage and strategy and praise for putting America in the lead, three matches to two.

RESULTS OF MATCHES

Helen Wills Moody, U. S., defeated Joan Fry, England, 6—1, 6—1.

Mrs. Phoebe Watson, England, defeated Helen Jacobs, U. S., 2—6, 8—2, 6—4.

Miss Fry and Miss E. Harvey, England, defeated Sarah Palfrey and Edith Cross, U. S., 2—6, 6—2, 6—4.

SATURDAY.

Mrs. Moody defeated Mrs. Watson, 7—5, 6—1.

Miss Jacobs defeated Miss Fry, 6—0, 6—3.

Miss Phyllis Mudford, England, defeated Miss Palfrey, U. S., 6—0, 6—2.

Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree, England, defeated Mrs. Moody and Miss Jacobs, 7—5, 1—6, 6—4.

Defeat of Sarah Palfrey Paves Way for British Victory With Doubles Triumph

The babies of the teams, Sarah Palfrey, United States, and Miss Mudford, England, then came to the court for the vital singles match. England had to win to have a chance, while victory for the United States clinched the cup. Neither girl showed signs of nerves, but hit out with speed and confidence. Miss Mudford's brilliant forehand offset Miss Palfrey's volleying. Miss Palfrey, suffering from center courtitis, tossed away several games on errors. She fought bravely but vainly to end her own errors, which were more than outweighing her good spots.

Miss Mudford played well and fully deserved her victory but Sarah was the victim of a center court throng which many an older and more experienced player has known. One can but praise her for her attitude of calm under the stress and strain that must have been very trying. The score was thus tied at three matches all when the two Helens made their first appearance as a Wightman Cup pair against Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfrey and Mrs. Holcroft Watson. The cup hung on the result of this match.

Mrs. Moody opened the service and the English star started a lobbing campaign the first game, but the Americans won. A remarkable recovery by Mrs. Godfrey aided England to 30-0, which with errors off ground by Miss Jacobs brought them game point. Mrs. Godfrey could not volley with the speed of the Americans and United States led, 2-0. In the next game, fine volleying by Mrs. Godfrey broke through Miss Jacobs' delivery. Mrs. Moody flashed two brilliant volleys to help United States to a lead of 3-1. Magnificent volleying by the Americans held Mrs. Moody's service and they led 4-1. A missed overhead swing and a wild drive by Mrs. Moody gave England 4-2. Miss Jacobs served way out to 15-30 but a double fault and a foot fault on the second ball game England the game for 3-4. The English team then reached four all on errors by the Americans. Then the next game was full of amusing points and crazy incidents, which was won by the United States, making the games 5-4. The two Helens clashed in teamwork repeatedly on middle shots but managed to win. The two marvelous volleys by Mrs. Godfrey in the same point gave England five all. Miss Jacobs dropped her service when Mrs. Moody netted an overhead smash and England led 6-5. Brilliant lobbying by Mrs. Watson, coupled with two bad errors by Miss Jacobs, gave England the set 7-5.

Americans Capture Set.

The Americans broke through Mrs. Godfrey's service to lead 2-0 and then pressed on in a rush of great volleying by Miss Jacobs to 3-0. A marvelous backhand passing shot by Mrs. Moody won a long deuce game and it was 4-0. The Americans took the set 6-1.

The all important final set opened with Mrs. Watson serving. A miraoulous half volley by Mrs. Godfrey and a wonderful lob by Mrs. Watson followed by a brilliant volley by Mrs. Godfrey gave England a chance to break Mrs. Moody's service but good serving saved it. Mrs. Godfrey was playing miraculous tennis and the crowd getting unruly at her wonderful recoveries. The American girls met the challenge by breaking through Mrs. Godfrey's service, ending with a great volley by Miss Jacobs after three half volleys by Mrs. Moody. Miss Jacobs served the United States even at 2 all. A bitterly fought deuce game finally went to England on errors by the Americans. Mrs. Moody was caught at her feet as she attempted to reach the net and was 15-40 down but two fine serves brought it to deuce. The English took the game in two fine shots by Mrs. Godfrey. Mrs. Wills Moody burst out in a flash of awe-inspiring speed that broke through Mrs. Godfrey and the United States was 3-4 down. Fine serving by Miss Jacobs and great volleying by Mrs. Moody gave the Americans 40-30, but they missed game point and it was deuce. Another moment and they had volleyed their way to 4 all. A series of great rallies gave England 30-0 and Mrs. Watson volleyed her way to game, aided by an error by Mrs. Moody. Mrs. Moody served a double fault and netted two shots, then drove out to end a great match. The turning point of the match was due undoubtedly to Mrs. Godfrey's great playing.

REPORT BREADON WILL BRING UP NIGHT PLAY AT LEAGUE MEETING

NEW YORK, June 14.

JOHN A. HEYDLER, president of the National League today called a meeting of the club owners of his circuit to be held at the Hotel Commodore Monday.

It's for the transaction of "routine summer business," according to the announcement, but the report today was that some of the owners would bring up the lively ball question and propose again the erection of screens in some of the parks where the stands are within easy shooting distance of the plate.

Also, it was said that Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, would bring up the question of night baseball, which has been tried out with success in some of the minor league cities in the West.

DR. WEISS WINS IN VETERANS' TENNIS TOURNEY

By Davison Obear

The St. Louis District Tennis championship for veteran players opened yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Triple A Club in Forest Park. Only two matches were completed in the singles event. The remaining first round matches will be played today. First round contests in the Veteran's doubles will start this afternoon.

A total of 30 players entered the singles event according to Dr. George H. Rice, chairman. This exceeds last year's total by four players. The increase in the Veteran's tournament as well as the gain in entries for the juniors, boys and girls indicates good progress in the St. Louis District this year.

Albert Stracke, Triple A golf star, has been practicing up on the tennis courts and yesterday managed to defeat Dr. George H. Rice, the 75-year-old player. Dr. Rice forced Stracke to an 8—6 score in the first set but won only three games in the second.

Dr. William Weiss, Magnolia Tennis Club player, advanced to the second round by defeating C. R. Crockwell of University City, 6—0, 6—3. Dr. Weiss is the father of Merceina Weiss, winner of the district girls' title last year and member of the Forest Park Tennis Club women's team this season.

The pairings for today's matches are as follows:

First round—C. F. Bascom vs. C. C. Clark, Clyde Fraizer vs. Bert Bernet, Everett Davis vs. Harry Lindeman, Alvin Moore vs. Paul Laidley, R. A. Thompson vs. W. Gottsberg, T. M. Corwin vs. James Goodwin; Arthur Reppert vs. bye, Bert Aid vs. George Dieckman, Charles Fitzgerald vs. Louis Sharp, Paul Schiffhorts vs. Joseph Dickson, Oliver Shattinger vs. Scott Gardner, William Bascom vs. Paul Schnitz.

Second round—Dr. F. E. Dieknite vs. W. F. Bronaugh.

WRAY'S COLUMN

NEW YORK, June 14.

WOULD-BE Young Men of Manhattan or from all points North, South and West, whose immediate objective is a "working press seat" and an assignment at some major fight show, find the glamor and their own enthusiasm greatly thinned out after attacking one of the best promoted championships.

The modern provision for pressmen, radio men, telegraphers and photographers is limited at best. About a ring circumference of less than 100 feet, the promoters must accommodate 450 accredited newspaper writers and many operators.

Only four rows are possible and a little calculation will enable any primary school mathematician to reach the conclusion that the Young Man of Manhattan had better not be an old man or a fat man or he will be unable to shoehorn into the 10 or 11 inches of space allotted him.

At the Sharkey-Schmeling fight Young Men of Manhattan were numerous and, as usual, late. That was too bad. For, after 8 o'clock wherever one vacant working press chair is, three claimants seem to grow. Acrimonious disputes are numerous, for gentlemen of influence and note in the community are not lightly to be ejected from their undeserved holdings.

Even after quiet has been restored and the working press so packed in that the arms of the writers and the operators alike are almost "frozen" into immobility by the jam, the Young Man, etc., who has settled himself to get the thrill of his life finds his troubles have only just begun.

Seconds Have Big Backs.

HE is seated near the corner which Sharkey is to occupy and he examines the ring, in which a preliminary has begun, to find just what he can see.

He gets the shock of his young life again. He sees the big backs of seconds and helpers in the corner, and of working newspaper brothers, wearing, it would seem, abnormally high hats rising tier on tier in front of him. A tangle of ring posts, swinging seats and ring ropes breaks up the ring visibility badly. To his intense surprise he finds that he can see little of the fighters below their hip line, unless they drift over toward the ropes of the side on which he is sitting.

The ring is built so high that the electricians can almost work in standing posture underneath; and so the reporters' seats rate down from the ringside at what appears a 45-degree angle.

This writer occupied the third row in Sharkey's corner and when the main event began there was a strange conglomeration of everything except newspaper men in his immediate vicinity. On his right was Dan Morgan, a boxing promoter. On his left, seated on a stool in the aisle leading to the ring corner was Bill Carey, head of the Garden corporation. Directly in front of him, also on a stool, was Joe Jeannette, Negro second. Joe Humphreys, announcer, seconds and handlers and butters-in of various degrees of influence displayed their backs and hats on all sides.

"You'll have to get out of the aisle, Mr. Carey," the president of the Garden corporation was warned. But Bill didn't get out. Nobody gets out of any place without being thrown out in haunts where the Young Man of Manhattan and elsewhere sweats his way.

"Now that's all," arises an angry retort from behind. "You get out or be thrown out," a very angry young holder of a working press ticket was hissing in the ear of a half-soused politician.

"Is that so? You and whose army are going to put me out? I'm here to stay."

"All right," said Young Man of Manhattan, "Here goes." And he climbed over the back rail of the fourth row and plumped himself down in the offender's lap. "Here's my ticket, here's the seat. I'm here to report this show and I'm not going to lose my job for any butinsky."

At this point the head usher arrived; and as the intruder was attracting unfavorable attention to himself, he finally decided to evacuate without resort to arms.

But it is not always that way. "Take the best you can get," is the first law of the ringside.

Troubles Have Only Started.

BUT Young Man from Elsewhere than Manhattan's troubles have only just begun. Besides the man evicted there are probably four or five more intruders who haven't been thrown out. The row of workers is still jammed. The typewriter can be used only by crossing the hands, as with the piano.

The announcer's loud voice tells the name of the referee. Young Man of Etc., not being from Manhattan, does not know the ring personages.

"What did he say the referee's name was?" he cries.

"I think it was Grawley," is the reply.

"What are his first name and initials?"

"Search me, fellow, but you'll probably have better luck in the city directory," is the retort.

The crowd surges into the ring and only a few of the names the announcer mentions can be distinguished. Here and there our Y. M. of Etc. can pick up a fact. For the rest unless acquainted with everybody personally, he might as well be in Timbuctoo. There is no way he can get information, because he is tightly wedged in the center of an immovable body of fellow workers, all of whom are interested in their own situation and many of them, too, from any other point than Manhattan.

Another Rush and Jam.

THERE is a rush and jam of the fighters arriving at ringside and bluecoats making the crush in the corner almost unbearable. The seconds are piled so high on top of the ring ledge that the view is completely cut off.

There is a wedge of persons being introduced into the ring, and the Young Man figures he better get the names all down, but before his neighbors and the announcer can help out, the ring has been cleared, the scrappers are flashlighted and the fun has begun.

By standing up from time to time (and being jerked back into his seat by tugs at his coat), the Young Man of Etc. has managed to see the high lights of the fighting. But such is the attitude of the ring that if the fighters should go to the floor he would be unable to see them without standing perhaps on his chair.

The Young Man we are talking about got a break. Schmeling fell on his side of the ring. He saw the foul blow, also the following hurly burly, but the rest of his information he had to extort from officials by laborious effort after the pandemonium that followed the battle was over.

After which was the crunch through the elevated, the long ride to the telegraph office, where, worn out and hungry but game, our Young Feller gets himself into action to tell all the world something about it.

He sets down valiantly to the typewriter, types his signature bravely, so—

By JOHN SMITH.

And halts there wondering just what those 2000 words with which John Smith is going to enlighten humanity are going to be. Most of the inspiration has been knocked out of him by the drubbing he took in getting the inspiration.

N. B. A. FIRST TO RECOGNIZE MAX SCHMELING AS CHAMPION

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 14.—After three days' deliberation, the National Boxing Association announced today it definitely had decided to recognize Max Schmeling, victor by a foul over Jack Sharkey, as the world heavyweight boxing champion. The N. B. A. thus became the first organized boxing body to formally declare Schmeling the title holder.

Stanley M. Isaacs, N. B. A. president, in announcing the decision, said so many fouls had entered into recent outstanding boxing matches that it was necessary for authorities to take action to cut down the percentage of unsatisfactory endings.

He said two suggestions will be laid before the Rules Committee of the N. B. A. One would fine a contestant committing a foul no less than 10 per cent of his purse, the other would allow the recipient of a foul 30 minutes in which to recuperate from the blow, and if at the end of that time official physicians reached an opinion the boxer could continue that the match be resumed.

The N. B. A. ruled that Schmeling was not responsible for the foul blow; that Sharkey unintentionally delivered the low blow; that both boxers were paid full purses and that the foreign invader was formally declared the winner in the ring.

New York Acts Tuesday

NEW YORK, June 14. — The pendulum swung further today toward Max Schmeling and his chances of winning recognition as the world's heavyweight champion following upon his victory over Jack Sharkey on a foul in four rounds at the Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Following upon the announcement in Cincinnati of Stanley Isaacs, president of the National Boxing Association, that his organization would recognize the German youth as the world's title holder, Chairman James A. Farley of the New York State Athletic Commission indicated the local rulers might do the same. Official decision on Schmeling's claim is scheduled for Tuesday.

"Fights are decided in the ring, not at the Commission meetings," Farley said. The second member of the three-man commission, William Muldoon, announced yesterday he did not believe Schmeling would be considered the world titleholder because of the unsatisfactory ending of the bout.

Schambach winning the hole with a 5 to 6.

Bockenkamp pulled his tee shot on the twenty-seventh and played a beautiful iron from the rough squarely on the green for a sure 4, which he made, while his opponent's second was off to the right, necessitating an approach and 2 putts.

Playing the last six holes, Schambach won the first with a par 4 while Bockenkamp had to be content with ladies' par 5. They halved the next, one over par, and Bockenkamp conceded the following one when his blasts in the sand became too numerous. The champion took a birdie 3 and went 4 up, the match becoming dormie. Bockenkamp punched onto the short fifteenth and took a 3, the match and championship.

MOROCCO WINS DISTANCE RACE AT FAIRMOUNT

Farm entry was third and Sun B. fifth, behind the tiring Princess Peroxide.

The first race was more exciting after its conclusion than during the running. War Nymph proved himself best by beating Forecaster and Robina Seth and four others and then Forecaster ran away. The lead pony boy, Lester Newton, took chase and attempted to arrest the runaway. He got his hand on the bridle but Forecaster was making such speed that he not only dragged Newton from the saddle but also upset the lead pony. Newton lay stunned against the outer rail of the track near six furlong chute and Forecaster continued his gallop with Jockey Belyski standing in his stirrups making a vain effort to check him. After running two miles and half, including the actual race of six furlongs, the runaway was caught.

Newton's injury and a scalp wound and abrasions were dressed at the field hospital and he was removed to St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis for future treatment. Buddy Berry took his place in the saddle.

Jockey Willie Day added to the list of casualties when he was thrown from the saddle as he sent his horse, High Life, away from the barrier in the seventh race. He suffered a bruised leg and was sent to St. Mary's Hospital for treatment.

The second race was a two-horse affair, Oleman Sunshine and King Halma putting on a duel far in advance of the others. King Halma was the winner.

Kingsport Repeats.

The consistent Kingsport, withstanding a severe drive through the stretch, ran Eloise into submission and outlasted The Padre to win the fourth race.

The winner was ridden by Joe Renick, his second winning mount of the day. The refund was $6.82 for $2.

Billy Doran, running in his very best form, took the lead at the first turn and maintained a killing pace to outlast the rush of Mary-Dale and win the sixth race at a mile and a furlong. Finland was third.

Hula, ridden by Clyde Pegg, won the seventh race after Bunthorne had set the pace and tired. Thistle Boy's rush in the stretch got him second place and Evergreen Queen was third.

Queen Whims, coming fast in the last quarter, disposed of Uncle Parks to win the last race of the day. It was her third straight victory. Uncle Parks was second and Ed Reese third in a close finish. George Cimerak rode the winner.

Fairmount Notes

Two horses found new homes yesterday. A. J. Pershall represented by Highway in the fourth race, claimed Eloise from Bill Cain for $2500, and in the sixth race Charley Graffagnini claimed Mary-Dale from D. R. Riddle. Graffagnini had Frank Fullen in the race and paid $2000 for the transfer.

Jim Best, owner of Reveille Boy, winner of the American Derby, bet $100 win and $100 show on his horse in the running of the Fairmount Derby when Reveille Boy finished second. "At a mile and a half Reveille Boy would beat the sox off that field," he said after the race.

ARNOLD DRIVES 115 MILES PER HOUR AND WINS ALTOONA RACE

ALTOONA, Pa., June 14. — Twenty-three-year-old Billy Arnold of Chicago traveled 200 miles at an average speed of 115.5 miles an hour to win the annual flag day event at Tipton Bowl here today.

Arnold, winner of the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis took the lead at the start, fought off all attempts to beat him and finished the grind in 1:47:56.4. Deacon Litz, of Duboise, Pa., fought up from the ranks to take second place four miles back, finishing in 1:50:31.6 for an average of 111.1 miles an hour, while Frank Farmer, Philadelphia, came in a poor third in 1:57:33.8 Only seven of the 16 starters finished.

The race, the first appearance of two-man cars on any board track this year, was marred by only two mishaps. A broken feed line sprayed gasoline over the machine of Fred Winai, Philadelphia, setting it afire and burning Winai and his mechanic, Clyde Terry, severely as they swung the car from the track. Ernest Vonhambauch, Detroit, a race steward, suffered a broken ankle when struck by a car coming into the pits.

Arnold met and conquered two serious challengers to win the race. Swinging his car into the lead on the first lap, he strove with Babe Stapp, Los Angeles, for 160 miles and was pulling away when Stapp was forced out by a broken oil line at the three-quarter mark. Early in the race the car of "Shorty" Cantlon, Detroit, forced Arnold to the limit, but two flat tires forced the machine back to a poor fourth place despite the hard driving of Herman Schuerch, Los Angeles, who relieved Cantlon at the wheel.

Of the original field, the only cars to finish, outside of the four leaders were those driven by Speed Gardner, Pittsburg; Zeke Meyer, Philadelphia and Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis, who were flagged in that order.

First place added $4500 to Arnold's winnings for the year. Litz received $2000 for second place and Farmer got $1500 for third. Cash prizes to the other entrants ranged from $1200 for fourth place and $1000 for fifth, to $400 for drivers ranked down the line to fourteenth.

Cantlon yielded the wheel to Schuerch after being almost overcome by fumes as he drove his car through the early laps.

Champion Schmeling Says He Will Win Decisively Next Time He Opposes Sharkey

By Max Schmeling,

As Told to a Representative of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The next time I fight Sharkey I will beat him. If, when I come to defend my title here next June for Madison Square Garden, he is the man who stands out as the best American challenger, I will be glad. Because then I can show you something that now only a few of my friends believe—that I can beat him.

If I need anything else to add to the confidence I already had before the fight, it is what I learned in those four rounds with Sharkey. In my own mind I became champion, when I looked in Jack's eyes in the fourth round and saw that he was uncertain. From now on it will be the same any and every time we met. He knew after he could not stop me with his hardest punches that I could beat him.

You can believe how happy it makes me to be the first European heavyweight champion of the world. Many others have tried it and failed. George Carpentier went to a match with Dempsey, Tom Heeney was named challenger to Gene Tunney and failed and Phil Scott was eliminated in the semi-finals. That I am able to take the championship to Germany where boxing is in the beginning makes me happier than anything.

To Defend Title Next June.

My contract with Madison Square Garden calls for me to defend my title here in June. If it were not for troubles with my old manager, Von Buelow, I would like to fight this September, so that I would not stay out of the ring too long. A fighter needs work and I still am young and still have something to learn.

Each time I fight I learn something. Sharkey was a good boxing master. I learned plenty from him. Too much for Sharkey I learn.

If I can, I will fight one bout in Europe late this summer. My contract here does not stop me from doing that, and Jeff Dickson wishes to promote it. If it can be done, I will do it. It is hard to say anything about my plans. There are so many offers. Tour, exhibitions, theatrical. I would not like to go on the stage over the summer.

To my manager, Joe Jacobs, I cannot give full enough credit. When I was helpless from the low punch he protected my interest as no manager has ever done before. He fought hard for me.

SORTIE DEFEATS JACK HIGH TO WIN $10,000 BROOKLYN HANDICAP

SANDE, THROWN BY DISTRACTION, REMOUNTS AND RIDES IN RACE

NEW YORK, June 14.—Weight took its toll at Aqueduct today as G. D. Widener's Jack High, holder of the American Turf record at a mile, finished second to A. C. Schwartz's Sortie in the renewal of the historic Brooklyn handicap.

With only 111 pounds in the saddle as compared with 122 pounds carried by the speedy Widener 4-year-old, Sortie flashed pass the judges' stand three lengths in front of Jack High, which led J. E. Widener's Curate by eight lengths. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Comstockery was fourth with A. K. Macomber's Petee Wrack fifth.

Sortie stepped the mile and one-eighth in 1:49 4-5.

When Jack High established a new mile record of 1:35 over the Belmont Park turf, he had only 110 pounds in the saddle.

A burning pace set by W. R. Coe's Maya for the first half mile killed all hopes of Jack High winning two out of three of the big spring specials for older horses. The son of John C. Grier, won the Metropolitan while the Suburban went to Petee Wrack. Maya broke from the barrier flying and before the field of 11 had found its stride, Pony McAtee had Jack High up in front matching strides with the Coe entry. On the back stretch McAtee eased his mount back but going into Aqueduct's long home drive, the field went wide and Jack High and Sortie moved up on the inside. Pony went to the whip but Sortie was much the best.

Earl Sande, who had the mount on the Wheatley Stable's temperamental Distraction, narrowly escaped serious injuries while the field was passing the club house en route to the post, Petee Wrack suddenly lunged out with his heels and landed on Distraction's shoulder, the horse wheeled and Sande was thrown to the track. For several moments it was doubtful whether the jockey would be able to remount and Sonny Workman was announced as a substitute. But Sande remounted the Wheatley Stable colt.

The race carried a value of $10,-800.

HELLRUNGS MUST BEAT UNITEDS TO STAY IN U. CITY MUNY RACE

Needing a victory to stay in the race for the first half of the University City Muny baseball title, Hellrung & Grimm will tackle the league-leading United team today at 3 o'clock on Diamond No. 2 in Heman Park. A victory for the Uniteds will virtually clinch the pennant for the first half. With six victories and no defeats, the Uniteds have a two-game lead, with only four games left to play.

St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce will meet University City Knights of Columbus at 1 o'clock on Diamond No. 1, while Columbia Athletic Club tackles the Trumbull Tailors on Diamond No. 2 at 2:30 o'clock.

Willie Day Leads Fairmount Riders In Week's Earnings

Bernard Hanford, the apprentice rider who has left Fairmount track for a vacation with his family in Tulsa, after which he will do his riding in Chicago, was the leading jockey for the meeting at the time of his departure. George Cimerak is next in the standing, which is as follows:

JOCKEY.	First.	Second.	Third.
B. Hanford	30	26	11
G. Cimerak	23	28	22
E. Goodrich	14	15	7
W. Day	14	7	12
M. E. Meyers	13	11	8
W. Kern	9	7	8
C. Pesz.	7	17	15
A. Caverns	10	9	5
T. Swigert	7	4	12
H. Thomas	7	4	10

Day Ahead in Earnings.

Last week Willie Day was the leading rider in the matter of salary. His check called for $259. Hanford was second with $226 and Cimerak third with $213. Eleven riders earned fees exceeding $100 for the week ending Friday.

In 215 races running up to Saturday, 79 favorites have won, for a percentage of 36.5.

ILLINOIS RACE TRACKS TO PAY STATE $600,000

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14.—Six race tracks operating in Illinois this summer will contribute more than $600,000 toward the expenses of the Illinois State Fair, county fairs and 4-H Club work, the Department of Agriculture announced today when final racing schedules were filed with Director Stuart E. Pierson.

Schedules for the six tracks call for a total of 207 racing days. Fairmont will race 49 days, Aurora 38 days, Washington Park, Arlington Park, Hawthorne and Lincoln fields will each race 30 days.

Four of the tracks have already started their seasons and have paid license fees totaling $204,000 into the State treasury for use in connection with fairs and educational work of the Department of Agriculture.

In addition to the license fee, the tracks also pay a rate of 20 cents for each paid admission. Admission tax collections from Aurora, Fairmont and Washington Parks so far this season amounted to $23,-050. Last year the admission tax totaled $158,628.40.

The fees, paid upon application for the racing licenses, ten days prior to the opening of the racing meetings, go into a fund designated as "the State and County Fair and 4-H Club premium fund."

WHITCOMBE WILL PROVE HARD MAN TO CONQUER ON HOYLAKE LINKS

By Bobby Jones,
American Open and British Amateur Champion.

HOYLAKE, Cheshire, England, June 14.—Arriving in Liverpool a few days ago to our untold delight we have found the Hoylake links where the British open will be played next week a far different course from the one over which one played in the amateur in 1921. I had not played Hoylake since that time and remembering our experience then I had some misgivings concerning the condition of the course. But I have seldom seen a course in more perfect order for a championship. In the first place, many alterations have been made and in no instance has the change failed to improve the layout.

Many holes have been made longer and a good many others have been tightened up around the greens and blind shots entirely eliminated. It is not a subtle course like St. Andrews, which requires a lot of local knowledge and understanding, but rather a giant of a course like Oakmont, which seems to say to the player, "Here is what you have to do, now let's see if you can do it."

Tee shots are all frightfully exacting, each fairway being quite narrow and lined on either side by pot bunkers and heavy rough grass. Putting greens, too, are small, bunkered severely close into the hole. The whole layout is so like a first-class American course that I am wondering now how some of the holes can be played if the ground becomes hard and a following wind is blowing. Certainly for the golfer who drives accurately and plays irons with precision there is ample reward on the 18 perfect putting greens.

I think I have never seen a set of greens so true and fair with such uniform texture. The man who can putt will have all the chance he wants to make his skill count. On such a course the Britons whose chances particularly appeal to me are C. A. Whitcombe, Abe Mitchell and Archie Compston. Whitcombe particularly has at the present moment, for he is playing specially well just now.

Another man whom the course should appeal to is Horton Smith. Always marvelously straight up to the hole if Horton's putter happens to be in the proper mood which it almost always is, he has the chance to compile an amazing score, which no one will touch. These are men whose names come up first when one begins to think of those who out of the field possess the capabilities which the course requires. There are many others too—Diegel, Cotton, Aubrey Boomer and George Von Elm, among them who can always take care of themselves. Whoever wins will have beaten a fine field over a fine golf course.

Simmons' Inability to Play Regularly Has Been Real Blow To Champions, Mack Declares

By Connie Mack
Manager World Champion Athletics.

DETROIT, June 14.—As the major league teams near the half-way mark in the 1930 pennant fight, everything points to sizzling races, both in the American and National Leagues. As a rule there is always a keen fight for the National League flag and this season is not going to be an exception while at the present time there are four clubs bunched at the top who are clamoring for the American League banner.

The American League does not always give its followers a dramatic pennant struggle, but the race this year with the Athletics, Washington, Cleveland and the Yanks in the running ought to please the most exacting fan.

The Athletics are having a tough time getting their regular lineup intact. Al our batting ace was out about 10 days with an injured knee. He came back in fine shape in the Chicago series and it loooked as if we were set again. Simmons was hitting on all cylinders, collecting two singles, a double and a home run in the final with the White Sox, but on the very last play of this game he twisted his left ankle badly and was lost to us for the vital series with Cleveland. There's no telling when he can return.

Does Not Take Long.

With Simmons out we are very much as we were before and have to meet stern opposition on foreign fields with a weak front. In addition to the loss of such a powerful batter as Simmons, Jimmy Dykes has left behind in a Philadelphia hospital with stomach trouble. Not only has he been lost for the entire year, but it will be a long time before he leaves the hospital. So with two hard-hitting regulars missing, we have been at a disadvantage.

You can always get quick action in baseball. As late as last Tuesday morning our players were riding on a crest of prosperity. Simmons had rejoined us, and we rejoiced in a record of 13 wins out of our last 15 games. We were three games in the lead and everything was rosy. The next day Simmons was hurt and we lost the final game in Chicago, an 11-inning heart-breaker, and then went to Cleveland and dropped the three-game series. That enabled our rivals to pass us.

Of our new men we are now playing regularly in the absence of first-string men, the outstanding one has been young Eric McNair, a natural shortstop, who was sent to third base when Dykes left the team. McNair has been covering this difficult position as if it were the only place he had played in his life. He seems equal to anything in the fielding line.

Good Four-Club Race.

It still looks to me like a good four-club race in the American League down to the wire. Washington and Cleveland are playing smart ball and the Yanks are coming along fast and are always a threat.

There is no doubt that injuries and illness to Athletic players that have kept men like Simmons, Cochrane, Dykes and Bishop out for so many days has helped to make a race. The Athletics will breathe much easier when their lineup is intact again.

MAJOR LEAGUES GET MORE TIME TO MAKE DEALS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—By special dispensation from the league president, John A. Heydler, the deadline for exchange of National League players has been extended from midnight Sunday June 15, to midnight, Monday, June 16. A meeting of the National League will be held at the offices here Monday at 11 o'clock. Several eleventh hour trades have been reported brewing and the pot may begin to boil in the extra inning ordered by the league.

Major league rules provide that assignments of players from one club to another shall not be made from June 15 to the end of the championship season except by the waiver route.

BIKE RIDERS WILL COMPETE IN 10-MILE RACE THIS MORNING

The annual spring road race of the Century Cycling Club will be held this morning over the Gravois road course.

STIMACK'S WORK HELPS LAFAYETTE PARK BAPTISTS WIN DOUBLE BILL

ALLENS DEFEAT OPTIMISTS ON TWO SAFETIES AND 5 ERRORS

Lafayette Park Baptist won a doubleheader in the Sunday School division of the Municipal League yesterday afternoon mostly through the work of Stimack who pitched in both games. Arlington M. E. was on the losing end of both games by scores of 16 to 1, and 6 to 4.

Stimack let Arlington down with only two hits in the first game, struck out eight and walked one. In the second game Arlington took a four run lead through the generosity of Kern, who issued eight bases on balls in two innings. Stimack was rushed to the rescue and he turned back Arlington with no hits and no runs in the five innings he hurled.

In the Y. M. C. A. No. 2 League, Red Goose scored two runs in the ninth to nose out M. K. & T., 5 to 4. Four hits, a sacrifice and one error accounted for the pair of runs.

The Allens only made two hits against the Optimists, but they were enough to enable the Allens to win, 3 to 2, in the South Side Y. M. C. A. League. Cornish, the Optimist catcher, hit a home run, but nobody was on base at the time. Five Optimist errors helped the Allens in securing their trio of runs.

Tower Camp sent the Kroemekes into a tie for second place in the Commercial League with the Bell Employes, when Tower Camp defeated the Kroemekes, 13 to 8, for its seventh straight victory.

FRITZ MERCUR WINS MIDDLE STATES AND PENN TENNIS TITLE

PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—Fritz Mercur, Bethlehem, Pa., former Lehigh University tennis star, today defeated Dolf Muehleisen of the University of California in the final round for the Pennsylvania and Middle States tennis championship. The scores were 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

In the final round in doubles Mercur and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., defeated Muehleisen and Bob Muench, University of California, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

A. A. U. WEIGHT LIFTING CHAMPIONSHIPS, JULY 26

The Western A. A. U's first weight-lifting championships will be held under the auspices of the St. Louis Weight Lifting Club on Saturday afternoon, July 26, at the Railroad Y. M. C. A., Twentieth and Eugenia streets. This event is open to all registered amateur lifters in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and St. Clair and Madison Counties in Illinois.

Entry blanks may be obtained from the chairman of the weight lifting committee, A. E. Michell, 1020 Dutton avenue, Webster Groves. Entries close on July 19.

Gold, silver and bronze medals will be given in each class. The tournament will be held under A. A. U. rules.

ENGLAND LEADS IN CRICKET MATCH WITH AUSTRALIAN TEAM

By the Associated Press.

NOTTINGHAM, England, June 14.—With the weather as a powerful ally, England, who did none too well in its first innings in the cricket match against Australia, today held a strong position. At the end of the second day's play the scores stood: England 265, Australia 140 for eight wickets.

More than 30,000 saw the match and many more were turned away when the gates were finally closed as the grounds were full.

KUHLMANNS MEET MORGANS IN MUNY HORSE SHOE MATCH

Stiff competition is expected this morning in a match between the Kuhlmanns and the Morgans, in Division No. 2 of the Municipal Horseshoe Association. Only a few games separate the two teams in the standings. In the other Division No. 2 match, the leading Gausmanns will oppose the Plegges, who are trailing.

The standings:

Team.	W.	L.	Pct.
Hausmann-Parker	31	18	.633
Kuhlmann & Kuhlm.	31	24	.564
John A. Morgan Inc.	27	26	.509

STOCK LIST AVERAGE OFF 10 POINTS IN WEEK'S TRADE

Prices Pretty Generally Approach or Penetrate the Low Levels of the Year as Speculative Holdings Are Liquidated.

FINAL SESSION DULL AND WEAK

Effect of Tariff is Subject of Considerable Discussion —Wheat Price Breaks Below $1—Copper Price Is Cut.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Speculators and investors alike have been liquidating their speculative holdings during the past week and putting their affairs in order. Under pressure of this selling, aggravating by bear attacks, stock prices fairly generally have approached or penetrated the low levels of the year.

During the first half of the week the turnover averaged about 4,000,000 shares a day, the largest since early May. Floor traders were impressed by the fact that selling was heavy from sources not normally associated with the bear side of the market. Unconfirmable rumors had it that investment trusts, seeing little prospect of speculative profits during coming months, were liquidating their speculative holdings. The selling slackened, and the market turned dull at the end of the week, but lagging for purposes other than the covering of short commitments was not conspicuous, and strong support was lacking.

Index Down 10 Points.

The Standard Statistics Co. composite price index of 90 leading shares was carried down approximately 10 points during the week. The market has been declining steadily for a fortnight, with scarcely a rally worthy of notice. Such persistent selling is extraordinary, and many observers state that a substantial technical rally cannot long be postponed. It is notable, however, that bears have found the market a most successful medium for their operations and considerable short covering has been accomplished without changing the trend more than momentarily.

From Nov. 13, the bottom of the autumn crash, stock levels, as measured by the composite index, gained approximately 65 points, up to early April, but since that time have lost about half that gain. The index at the end of the week was only about five points above the low of year, recorded Jan. 2. Eliminating the autumn crash, stock prices now average around the levels of November, 1928. Utilities are around the levels of a year ago, but industrials and rails are around the levels of about two years ago. More than 100 issues touched new lows for the year or longer this week.

German Loan Floated.

A reassuring development of the past week was successful flotation of the German loan. Passage of the tariff measure by the Senate removed an element of uncertainty, but was variously interpreted as regards business prospects. Unsettling developments were renewed declines in commodity prices. Cotton futures dropped below 14 cents a pound to new lows for the season and July wheat went under $1 a bushel. Credit was more plentiful, call money renewing on Friday at 2½ per cent for the first time in nearly two months. Stock prices weakened again today.

How much of the selling was prompted by the decline in commodity prices, especially wheat and copper, and how much by the legislative action on the tariff bill was problematical. It was noticeable, however, that the list turned downward after the opening of the Chicago grain market and after a reduction in the export price of copper metal had been announced.

The effect of the tariff was a subject of considerable discussion. It was pointed out that enactment of the old protective measure, enacted eight years ago, had been virtually ignored; but it was apparent today that the professional bears were putting an unfavorable interpretation on the present measure and using it to depress the price structure.

LOCAL STOCK TRADE LARGER, PRICES LOWER

United Railways 4s With Turnover of $205,000 Between 68 and 69 Feature Bond Section in Latter Part of Week.

Securities that were the more active on the St. Louis Stock Exchange during the last week lost ground. Aggregate business exceeded that of the previous week. The bond section of the market was featured by a turnover of $205,000 in United Railways 4s between 68 and 69. Virtually all of these securities were purchased by one house. Two or three houses were on the selling side.

Wagner Electric was the most active share issue ranging down more than 2 points on transactions aggregating over 1600 shares. Coca-Cola Bottling sold down about 3 points, recovering some. National Candy was off a point.

Fractional declines took place in Missouri Portland, Rice Stix, Hamilton - Brown, Consolidated Lead and Dr. Pepper.

Scruggs common at 12 was unchanged. Southwestern Bell preferred was higher. International Shoe closed lower after being up in the early part of week. There was a turnover of more than 1100 shares.

In the banking group First National Bank reacted 2½ points and Mississippi Valley Trust 5 points. Mercantile-Commerce closed unchanged after being up. Franklin American was unchanged.

On the Cotton Exchange all months made new lows for the season. Copper Exporters, Inc., cut the export price from 13 cents to 12.55 cents a pound. This step was accompanied by rumors of an impending European buyers' strike or boycott on this country's nonferrous metals in retaliation for the tariff, which does not affect these commodities. It was further pointed out that Europe could not avoid buying copper here for the next two years unless it stopped using the red metal, for the South African mines will not be in full production for some time.

Nevertheless, the rather disconcerting situation in the industry, in view of recent price movements, led to a selling movement in the copper shares, several of which dropped sharply. Anaconda lost about 2 points, touching the lowest level in nearly four years. American Smelting, Phelps Dodge and St. Joseph Lead made new lows for the year or longer.

Rail Index at 1930 Low.

The weakness of this group was accompanied by renewed selling of the rails, whose composite price touched a new 1930 minimum. Baltimore & Ohio, Atchison, Nickel Plate and Rock Island all sold into new low ground.

The ease with which prices of such shares slid off inspired selling operations elsewhere. International Telephone was subjected to unusually severe pressure and broke to the new low of 48¾. At the closing quotation of 48½ the stock was 5 points net lower. U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, Consolidated Gas, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, Johns Manville, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Western Union, Radio and National Biscuit yielded 2 to 4 points and finished virtually at the bottom. American Tobacco "B" lost 7 points. There were considerable wider declines in several specialties, including J. I. Case, Air Reduction, Worthington Pump and Eastman Kodak.

Wheat closed 1¾ to 2¾ cents lower. The selling was attributed to bearish Canadian crop estimates of 425,000,000 bushel minimum, a weak cash market and good rains in the northwest. Corn was 2½ to 3¼ cents lower on a favorable Kansas report, weak southwest markets and beneficial rains in the northwest. The net losses in cotton ran from $1.30 to $2.75 a bale.

Another break in the Spanish peseta was a feature of the rather dull foreign exchanges. Sterling cables sagged 1-16 to $4.85⅝.

PRICE OF EXPORT COPPER REDUCED TO 12.55 CENTS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Copper Exporters, Inc., today reduced the price of export copper to 12.55 cents, from 13 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports.

The cut in the export price followed the action of custom smelters yesterday in reducing the domestic price of the metal to 12 and 12¼ cents delivered.

BUSINESS INDICATOR

Industrial and Financial Briefs

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Crude rubber consumption of all classes by manufacturers in the United States during May is estimated at 39,902 long tons, according to statistics compiled by the Rubber Manufacturers' Association. Estimated consumption during April was 40,207 long tons, and in May last year 49,233 long tons. May imports this year totaled 40,745 long tons, compared with 49,927 long tons in April and 49,130 long tons in May, 1929.

Eldorado Oil Works of San Francisco directors have recommended to stockholders a merger with the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. The plan provides the entire properties and assets of Eldorado, which manufactures cocoanut oil and meal, be taken over as of July 1. The proposal calls for the issuance of 25,000 shares of preferred and 30,000 shares of common of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet in the 150,000 outstanding shares of Eldorado.

Cable advice from London to the New York Rubber Exchange stated stocks of crude rubber at London and Liverpool will be increased approximately 1000 tons in the weekly reports to be made public May day. This will bring British stocks to a combined total of 104,7 tons, a new high figure.

Directors of the Colorado Southern Railway have recommended a mortgage bond issue of total about $20,000,000 to refinburse the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for advances made to provide funds for refunding purposes and for capital improvements.

A call for the redemption July 1 of all outstanding first lien 5 per cent sinking fund bonds due Jan. 2, 1931, at 102½ and accrued interest has been issued by the Union Oil Co. of California of an original issue of $20,000,000, there remained only $1,082,000 of the bonds outstanding at the end of March.

BOND TRADE IS QUIET, LITTLE PRICE CHANGE

Improvement in Utilities Raises Them to the Highest Point in Year According to Averages.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—a quiet half-day session brought little change in the price level of listed bonds today.

The volume was about on a par with Friday, proportionately, and sales in a wide field of issues with railroad and utilities contributing the largest proportion of activity. High grade legal issues, and a few rails gained fractionally.

Southern Pacific 4½s per cent and bond issues were firm. Louisville & Nashville 4½s. Great Northern 4½s and Pere Marquette 4½s gained about a half point. Pricing East Coast 5s moved up and New England 4s established a new high for the year. Other rails were steady.

Quiet improvement in utilities raised them to the highest point of the year, according to the averages, with the best demonstrated in International Telephone 5s, International Hydro Electric 6s, Louisville Gas and Electric 5s, North American Edison 5s, Northern Ohio Traction and Light 6s.

Reports of a pending merger of Transcontinental Oil with another company, lent strength to its stock and was reflected in a rise of 1¼ points on its 6½ per cent bonds. Industrial issues were irregular. Schulco 6½s lost more than two points. Shell Union Oil issues were in demand and firm.

Telephone issues were the soft spots in the convertible group. International 4½s dropped 2¼ to a new year's low and American Telephone 4½s declined 2 points on a few sales. Other stock privilege issues in the railroad and amusement group rallied with many at an advance.

Hanse S. S. Warrant 6s were spectacular performers in the foreign list. Originally inactive, the Bremen bond was accumulated early today and rose 1½ points. The new German International 5½s per cent loan was active and eased slightly. Other German issues were steady. Berlin Electric 6½s gained 3 points. The demand for Government issues was small and prices were unchanged.

Light trading took place in United States Governments with prices regular and Liberty 4¼ per cent issues the only ones to attract any interest. Closing prices were irregular.

ALL COTTON MONTHS MAKE NEW LOWS FOR SEASON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Further sharp declines here today were attributed to liquidation of July and of price declines promoted by the more favorable average of crop advices, with weakness in grain.

Continued selling on ground for months with July contracts selling off 60 to 70 points lower while the distant months lost 35 to 45 points. Trade was easy at net declines of 50 points.

Much covering at the close left the market a fairly steady affair, prices were to 15 points higher than the lowest, which was about or less general from the season's top. Some attributed the rally to the volume of offerings of the trailing or scatter-ing type of the position. Some were larger than anticipated, was report that there was a good deal of switching against deliveries.

Belief in wheat was doubtless a factor in the nervous action of cotton. Stop orders on the decline which reached 20 points with the weakness in the December contract in the afternoon, when the new crop months sold 35 to 37 points lower. July prices were the lowest of the season and the July premium was reduced from 200 points at the close of Friday to 70 points at the close of today's market.

Private domestic consumption of all growths for May, sales compared with April, showed a shade increase in spinning of anything, but was mentioned as a factor on the bulish side that there was from Liverpool to influence other way, and most the favorable view of the reduction and liquidation of old contracts with the weakness of the end of the week at the end of the week of 50,000 bales against 82,-

CHICAGO WHEAT BELOW $1 FIRST TIME IN 1930

Price Goes to 99 Cents—Corn, Rye and Oats Break Season's Previous Bottom Price Records—Rye Lowest Since 1914.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 14.—Throwing overboard of holdings of future deliveries of all grain sent values downward today, with wheat reaching as low as 99c a bushel. This was the first time during 1930 that wheat has sold at less than $1, and not only wheat but corn, rye and oats broke the season's previous bottom price record. The season's previous bottom price since 1904. Live slumbered the new tariff bill. Senate adoption of new quarter a at Washington received in one quarter a share of the blame for today's general rush to sell grain. But most trade authorities put the responsibility on heavy rains which stopped crushing of this season's wheat in Canada. Closing quotations on wheat were unsteady at but 1/8 to 2¾c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 2¼c to 3¼c off, oats ½c to 1¾c off and provisions 10c to 17c lower. The decline to a rise of 5c to 7½c on the tariff vote. Washington action, the announcement of a notable decreasing factor in corn values, the comment was made that United States wheat should be discriminated against should Canada be favored in American import duties. Reports of advances in Australia asserted would certainly help, but the fact remained that the big domestic surplus of the country of the big domestic surplus of wheat.

Other traders, who took little stock in such dispatches, were saying that considerable heed had been taken of the harvest of wheat in Kansas, the first of the great state in this country to be widely begun, and which showed that the spread of the harvest northward should soon be adding to the surplus of last year's wheat that is pressing for an outlet.

At times wheat prices today snapped back to above $1 a bushel, but such rallies proved transient, and at no time did the market recover from the low level of yesterday's finish, except to profit taking on what apparently due materially to profit taking on the part of previous speculative selling. Stop loss selling on a volume right up to the limit of holders' resources, on the other hand, increased by leaps.

The market was further depressed by offerings from traders who apparently believed that the rains in Canada had figured, and that the rains had put the discard definitively into the shade of the season's friends of higher prices.

Throughout the greater part of the day, corn led in the general downward trend, lower prices for oats, Rye and barley did not, however, keep pace with the decline in corn values but were also under pressure with other cereals. Besides, heavy liquidation of speculative sorts, especially during the last hour, sent corn to new low ground for the season, with December actually minus a penny of the previous record for the season, with December actually minus a penny of the previous record for the season, indicating food prospects for the new corn crop, which was described as at present fortified with moisture, and with the ground around collapse of other grains, probably due to the downturn, with most of the available supply being taken by mills, shippers and industries. Oats were down ½ to ¾c.

Offerings were light.

Opening prices generally lower, wheat ranged down more than a cent early. The fall in Canada and Liverpool closed 1¼d to 1½d lower. Winnipeg declined more than a cent early. Corn was down early, September being off more than 2c.

July wheat opened at 99½c, Sept. wheat $1.01⅛, July corn 79¾c, and Sept. corn 80¾c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 40,600 bushels, compared with 44,800 a week ago and 103,000 a year ago, included 15 cars local and 14 through. Corn receipts were 123,000 bushels, compared with 67,200 a week ago and 198,800 a year ago, included 61 cars local and 7 through. Oats receipts were 70,400 bushels, compared with 57,200 a week ago and 103,400 a year ago, included 24 cars local and 9 through. Hay receipts were 7 cars local and 1 through.

CONVICT IN PRISON 21 YEARS, PAROLED

One of Eleven to Be Freed by Governor, Who Grants Board's Request.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 14.—Eleven convicts in the Missouri penitentiary were paroled today by Gov. Caulfield, upon recommendation of the State Penal Board, including Herman Johnson of Lawrence County, oldest white convict in the prison in point of time served. Johnson, 46 years old, had served 21 years and seven months under a life sentence for a double murder.

The board recommended parole of Johnson on the ground he was one of the oldest prisoners in the penitentiary, and granting of a parole to him would have a good influence on prison discipline among long-term convicts.

Johnson pleaded guilty to murder of two youths with whom he was riding in a box car on a railway train, near Monett, Mo. The evidence showed the two youths were asleep when Johnson shot them and robbed the bodies. He previously had served four years in the Arkansas prison for an assault, and has spent 25 years and seven months of his 46 years in prison.

After he had been in the penitentiary several years Johnson disabled himself by deliberately thrusting one of his arms into the mechanism of a machine in one of the prison factories. The arm was severed.

Dr. M. A. Bliss, superintendent of one of the State eleemosynary hospitals, recently examined Johnson, at the request of the Governor, and reported he was sane. Dr. Bliss said Johnson from youth apparently had a "profound disregard for human life."

Johnson was paroled to F. F. Foubister, in charge of the local unit of the Salvation Army, who had agreed to find employment for him and act as his sponsor.

Charles H. Finney, St. Louis, served one year and six months of an eight-year sentence for robbery of a drug store also was paroled. The prosecuting witness, Charles Jacobus, 3107 Wyoming avenue, St. Louis recommended a parole.

"GOAT GLAND" SPECIALIST TO APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

Milford (Kan.) Doctor Gets Delay in Hearing on Revocation of His License.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 14.—An order postponing for 10 days the hearing set for next Tuesday before the Kansas Board of Medical Registration and Examination on a complaint asking revocation of the medical license of Dr. John R. Brinkley, "goat gland" specialist, of Milford, Kan., was granted today by Chief Justice William A. Johnston of the State Supreme Court.

The delay was allowed to permit Brinkley to perfect an appeal to the United States Supreme Court in his suit to enjoin the board from proceeding with the hearing. The Kansas Supreme Court yesterday sustained the District Court in its refusal to grant an injunction.

Brinkley, who is charged with fraud and unprofessional conduct, met a further reverse when the Federal Radio Commission declined to renew the license of Station KFKB at Milford, over which Brinkley lectures on his rejuvenation operations and prescribes medicine for listeners who write him. The Milford station license expires next Friday.

SAYS 62 PCT. OF ETHER SPACE IS HELD BY TWO CONCERNS

Federal Radio Commission Answers Court Attacks on Its Allotment to Universal Wireless.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Contending that the Radio Corporation of America and the Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. have more than 62 per cent of all the ether space allotted the Federal Radio Commission today filed a brief in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals answering the attacks of those companies on the allocation of 40 wave lengths to the Universal Wireless Communications Co.

The Radio Corporation, the Mackay Co., the Wireless Telegraph & Communications Co. and the Intercity Radio Telegraph Co. appealed to the Court after the Commission had refused them certain channels for point-to-point communication.

The Commission's brief contends that the appeal was not made within the 20-day period required by the Radio Act.

FINDS SKELETONS OF GIANTS IN WEST VIRGINIA MOUNDS

Prof. Sutton Discovers Bones of Mound Builders From Seven to Nine Feet Tall.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, W. Va., June 14.—Excavation of two mounds near Morgansville, about 12 miles west of here, has disclosed what Prof. Ernest Sutton, head of the history department of Salem College, thinks is evidence that a race of giants inhabited this section of West Virginia more than 1000 years ago.

Skeletons of four mound builders, indicating they were from seven to nine feet tall, have been uncovered. One of the skeletons which Prof. Sutton surmises may have been that of a chief was buried alone, completely encased in a chamber carefully prepared from large, flat rocks, sealed with clay. The other three were found together.

Data on the discovery will be submitted to the Smithsonian Institution.

Numerous Parties For Polo Players From Cincinnati

Largest Is Garden Dinner Dance Given by Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr. at St. Louis Country Club.

POLO matches yesterday afternoon and today between the Red Birds of the St. Louis Country Club and the Cincinnati (O.) Hunt and Polo Club have given St. Louis' smart set numerous opportunities to show hospitality to the visiting players since their arrival yesterday morning.

The largest of the parties was a garden dinner dance given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Brookings Wallace Jr. at their home in the Country Club grounds. The garden was lighted with great amber flood lights from the second story balcony of the Spanish mansion, where an orchestra played.

Ten tables, seating 120 guests, were placed about the dance pavilion constructed beyond the terrace, with popular sports depicted in the decorations. On one table there was a miniature polo field, with toy horses and riders playing to a diminutive grandstand. On another was a hunting field with realistic jumps and hazards. Another had a beach scene with doll bathers reclining under gay umbrellas, a golf course, a baseball diamond, tennis court or boats sailing on a toy lake. The table cloths were sky blue tarlatan, and the napkins heavy crepe paper with polo players pictured in the corners. The dance floor was bordered with a vine-garlanded railing, with corner posts resembling tree trunks on which were hung lighted lanterns. Mr. Wallace is captain of the Country Club team.

The Cincinnati guests include Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Flach, whose daughter, Miss Elaine Flach, has been the guest for a week of Miss Josephine Salorgne Scullin; Mr. and Mrs. Tim Goodman, Werner Atkins, Lucien Wulfen, Mr. Van Ingen and Mr. Ficks. Other out-of-town guests include Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Caperton and Robert Bonnie, Louisville, Ky., who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Langenberg.

Yesterday morning Miss Scullin's mother, Mrs. Josephine Salorgne Scullin, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Flach and Mr. and Mrs. Goodman at breakfast, and today there will be three parties for the visitors.

Edward L. Bakewell has invited the visitors, with a group of St. Louis friends, to the Bridlespur Hunt Club at 11 o'clock for an informal gathering and at 12 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. G. Hayward Niedringhaus will entertain the players and their wives at breakfast at their home in the Country Club grounds.

This evening Edward K. Love Jr. of the Red Birds will give a buffet supper at the club, and at the same time Robert Brookings Smith will have a similar party for Miss Flach and Miss Scullin at the home of his mother, Mrs. Jay Herndon Smith, in the Country Club grounds. Noel Carpenter gave a party for Miss Flach at the club's dinner dance last night, and Miss Almira Steedman a dinner Friday night at her home. Miss Flach will depart tonight with her parents and the team for Cincinnati.

June Weddings in Church and Home

At a nuptial mass at Our Holy Redeemer Church, Webster Groves, last Monday morning, Miss Margaret Elizabeth Byrne became the bride of Daniel Hanlon Jr., son of Mr. and and Mrs. Daniel Joseph Hanlon, 104 West Jackson road, Webster Groves.

The ceremony was in charge of the Rev. P. J. Dooley, pastor. Honor stations in the sanctuary were assigned to the Rev. Walter J. Tucker, assistant pastor, the Rev. O. Kuhnmuench, S. J., the Rev. Charles Hayden, S. J., and Edward Drummond, S. J.

Miss Angela Byrne, sister of the bride, and Joseph Heffernan, the bridegroom's cousin, of Portage, Wis., were the attendants. Thomas Byrne, Edward, Robert and Paul Hanlon, brothers of the bridegroom, served as ushers.

Mrs. Hanlon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Byrne of South Rock Hill road, Webster Groves. She is an alumna of Washington University, member of Phi Mu Sorority, and past president of the Junior League Sodality of Holy Redeemer Parish.

An attractive wedding was that of Miss Viola Bircher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bircher of Ferguson and Francis Harold Barnidge of St. Louis, which took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, with Mgr. P. P. Crane officiating. The home was decorated in early summer flowers and the bridal party stood before a bower of smilax, ferns and white roses arranged in the living room.

Miss Lois Dodge was the bride's only attendant and wore a gown of aqua-marine chiffon combined with matching lace, made with a long fitted bodice and full skirt. The sleeveless bodice had a lace cape falling to the waistline in the back.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of white net over satin made with a tight fitting bodice and long full skirt. She wore a tulle veil held in place by orange blossoms. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Barnidge was attended by his brother, Edward Barnidge.

After a motor trip in the East and Canada the pair will live in St. Louis.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Catherine Holden, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Holden, 3924 North Twenty-second street, and George Francis Dowling, son of Mrs. M. Dowling, 5012 Devonshire, took place Wednesday morning, June 4, at 9 o'clock, at the Church of the Holy Name. Monsignor P. P. Crane, assisted by the Rev. R. Woods of Sikeston, Mo., and the Rev. Father Callahan, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Edward B. Holder, and was attended by Miss Eilleen McGrath. Maurice Fitzgerald was best man for Mr. Dowling. Mr. Dowling and his bride will reside in Southampton.

The wedding of Miss Ethel Eleanor Chapman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Chapman, to Philip Gallop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gallop, 501 Purdue avenue, was solemnized Thursday morning, June 5 at B'nai El Temple. The altar was decorated in palms and ferns. The bride was attended by Mrs. Bertram M. Newhouse as matron of honor; Miss Nancy Gallop as maid of honor; Miss Clairbelle Fixman and Miss Hortense Handelman as bridesmaids. Harry Shapiro Jr. was best man; the groomsmen were Robert L. Aronson and Joseph B. Steinhauer.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin, the long skirt ending in a train. Rose point lace adorned the neck, and she wore a veil of tulle with a band of rose point lace and a shower of orange blossoms at either side. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Newhouse was attired in deep eggshell tinted satin and a hat of hairbraid and tulle in pastel green. Miss Gallop wore pink point d'esprit with a tulle hat.

Miss Fixman wore aquatone point d'esprit with pink tulle hat, and Miss Handelman wore poudre blue point d'esprit with a pink tulle hat. Each carried an arm bouquet of roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a breakfast was served for 75 guests at the Coronado Hotel.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Chapman of Chicago, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lauer of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. E. Weyenberg of Milwaukee, Mr. and Mrs. S. Finkle and family of Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Frank Weenberg of Chicago, Mrs. Bette Goldstein of Chicago and M. Appelbaum of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. Gallop have departed for a honeymoon in the East.

A wedding of Wednesday evening at Second Presbyterian Church was that of Miss Evelyn Thelma Cooper, daughter of Mr. W. A. Cooper, 5628 Enright avenue. The bride wore an old-fashioned gown of ivory satin. The billowy tulle veil held in place with orange blossoms fell over a train of satin. Her bouquet was of white bride's roses and orchids with showers of lilies of the valley.

Miss Frances Shinn was the maid of honor. She was gowned in pale green net over green satin. She carried an arm bouquet of premier roses tied in flesh color ribbon.

The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Banks, Miss Josephine Edwards, Miss Dorothy Smith, Miss Milda Clucas, Miss Isabel Godiar and Miss Juniata Wyatt. Three gowns were of pale blue chiffon and three in light pink with slippers and maline hats to match the gowns. They carried large arm bouquets of premier roses tied with ribbon to match their gowns.

The train bearer was Florence Gehlert, in white chiffon. The flower girls were Myra Blass in flesh crepe and Mary Ellen Kenland in blue crepe. They carried baskets of flowers.

Mr. Betts had as his best man, Fred Gossons, and the groomsmen were Albert Linders, Russell Cissell, Murray Owens, Albert Harslock, Olan Dean Lewis and Harry Bleich.

The wedding dinner and reception was held at the Coronado Hotel, after which the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to Canada and will return by way of New York.

The marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Wright, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Wright, 350 North Gore avenue, to Joseph Burton Norwine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Norwine, Polo drive, Clayton, took place June 7 at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of St. John's Methodist Church officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin made in princesse style and trimmed in rose point lace. Her veil of tulle was fastened to the head with tiny sprays of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Kathleen Alley of Maplewood, maid of honor, wore a frock of apple-green taffeta and tulle made with a tight fitting bodice and full long skirt. A large malines bow at the back of the waistline had wide streamers touching the ground. She carried an arm bouquet of Pernet roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Lenore Veninga, wore a frock of turquoise blue taffeta made with a tight bodice and with tiny puff sleeves, and a full long skirt. She carried an arm bouquet of Dorothy Hill roses. Miss Amy Brookhart, also a bridesmaid, wore a frock of pink lace over pink taffeta and carried an arm bouquet of blue delphinium and baby's breath. Patsy Jean Wright, a niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a frock of pink silk with ruffles of point d'esprit and carried an ivory colored basket of rose petals.

The best man was Edward Alley, a cousin of the bride. The groomsmen were Jack Norwine and Fred Wright, also a cousin of the bride. Herbert Sayers, James Kent of St. Louis and Clarence Coff of Webster Groves were the ushers.

A reception at the Kings-Way Hotel followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Norwine departed for Lake Taneycomo in the Ozarks to spend their honeymoon. They will make their home temporarily in Webster Groves upon their return.

Cards from La Porte, Ind., have been sent to St. Louis friends, by Mr. and Mrs. Warren M. Bowman, of that city, announcing the coming marriage on Wednesday, June 25, of their daughter, Miss Josephine Belle Bowman, who has just been graduated from Lindenwood College, to Edgar Gerard Schumm. The ceremony will take place at 5 p. m., in First Baptist Church of La Porte.

Miss Bowman was editor of the college annual of this year at Lindenwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Pegman, 1379 Clara avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ida Pegman, and Louis Steinberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Steinberg of Clayton, Mo.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Dorothy Kornblum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob K. Kornblum, 761 Westgate, and Aaron H. Shanbet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Shanbet, 1319 Hamilton avenue.

The marriage of Miss Edna Switzer, daughter of Mrs. Milford Switzer, 742 Forest avenue, to Lloyd Starrett, son of Mrs. J. H. Coffey of St. Joseph, Mo., took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Christy Memorial Methodist Church with the Rev. R. E. Foard of Dexter, Mo., officiating.

The bride wore a gown of white satin made on princesse lines, with the skirt falling in a short train at the back. The long sleeves had insets of satin forming tiny puffs. This same effect was used in the neck line. The veil of tulle was fastened to her hair in cap style with sprays of lilies of the valley. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Frances Ruth, maid of honor, wore a frock of sage green chiffon, with a close-fitting bodice and full long skirt. She wore a hat of pale green hairbraid with a bow of moire to match the moire bow at the back of her frock. Her flowers were pale pink roses. Miss Thyra Stone, the bridesmaid, wore a frock of orchid chiffon over peach colored taffeta and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Her hat was of lavender hair braid with a bow of orchid moire. Peggy Ann Frick, the flower girl, wore a frock of pink taffeta with ruffles of tulle.

Mr. Starrett had as his best man Herman Gall, and Lloyd Sietden of Kansas City was groomsman.

A buffet supper and informal reception at the home of the bride's mother followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Starrett departed later in the evening on a motor trip to Canada. They will make their home in Webster Groves.

Both Mr. Starrett and his bride taught in the Webster Groves schools. They received their master's degrees Tuesday at Washington University. Mr. Starrett received his A. B. degree at Westminster College several years ago.

The engagement of Miss Grace Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Jones, 2645 Oakview terrace, Maplewood, and Herbert C. Duenckel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick William Duenckel, 2912 Ellendale avenue, was announced at a dinner bridge given by Miss Jones' mother in Los Angeles, Cal. Miss Jones is attending the University of Southern California. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Miss Jones is a former student of Washington University. Mr. Duenckel is a graduate of Washington University, and a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Engel of 764 Leland avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Estelle, to William E. Shamski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Shamski of Caruthersville, Mo.

The marriage of Miss Marguerite Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zihlsdorf Mitchell, Marissa, Ill., and Robert D. Abbott, son of the Rev. and Mrs. B. A. Abbott, 5428 Clemens avenue, took place Tuesday morning at the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom's father officiated and Mrs. Arthur J. Revell was her sister's only attendant. Robert C. Mare was best man.

Mr. Abbott is a graduate of Washington University Law School, and is a member of Kappa Alpha and Delta Theta Phi fraternities and the Missouri Athletic Association.

Mr. Abbott and his bride motored East for a honeymoon in Virginia, and on their return will make their home in St. Louis.

Invitations have been sent out by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Voge, 4444 Red Bud avenue, for the marriage of their daughter, Ethel Virginia, to Arthur C. Sealage, June 28, at 8 p. m. at the Pilgrim Lutheran Church.

Miss Helen Huger, daughter of Mrs. Christine Huger, 5011 Chippewa street, and Herman Beckman were married Thursday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Anthony's Church. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Huger, as bridesmaid, and Alfred Dill was best man.

Immediately after the ceremony a breakfast was served for the families at the Saum Hotel. Mr. Backman and his wife departed for a honeymoon and on their return will live at 3605 Paris avenue.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Ann Strum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Strum of Springfield, Ill., and Harry H. Goldfader, 6209 Alamo street. The date of the wedding has not been set.

St. Louisans Who Are Visiting in France

PARIS, May 30.

COUNT AND COUNTESS CARLETTO DEI FRANZONI arrived in Paris yesterday after two months in North Africa and along the Mediterranean coast. They have been on their wedding trip and are going to Deauville for the summer. Countess Franzoni was formerly Miss Mary Kelley of St. Louis and New York. She arrived from America early in April and was married here. She will spend several days in Paris with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Connolly and will then join her husband in Deauville.

The French line steamer Paris carried a party of more than 100 American and Canadian physicians and their wives, who will visit Deauville, La Baule and Contrexeville. They are expected to arrive in Paris June 23. The trip has been organized by Count d'Ornano with the object of making better known to American medical men the French health resorts.

St. Louis members of the group include: Dr. Robert D. Alexander, Dr. D. W. Barr, professor of medicine of Washington University, and Dr. and Mrs. Lewellyn Sale.

Kirkwood

MR. AND MRS. JOHN R. CURLEE of Sappington and Monroe avenues will depart late this month for Harbor Beach, Mich., where they will occupy their cottage for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John K. Lord Jr., 125 Woodlawn avenue, departed by motor last week for the East to spend several weeks. Mr. Lord will attend the thirtieth annual reunion of his graduating class at Dartmouth. They will go to Northampton, Mass., to join their daughter, Miss Virginia Lord, and will visit other points in the East before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Edwards of Monroe and Woodlawn avenues returned recently from Lexington, Va., where they were guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spears Glasgow, for a short time while returning from a winter's stay in Florida.

Miss Amy Chandler, who has been making her home at the Forest Park Hotel since her return from a two years' stay abroad, will leave June 24 for Montreal to spend the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Deane of East Bodley avenue departed last week by motor for Sturgeon Bay, Wis., with their children. Mr. Deane will return home in a short time, but Mrs. Deane and the children will remain during the summer.

Mrs. Walter L. Clarke, 211 South Woodlawn avenue, entertained Wednesday afternoon at a tea for Miss Kate d'Arcy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John d'Arcy, 203 Woodlawn.

Mrs. George R. Robinson of Argonne drive and Woodlawn avenue expects to leave soon for Cable, Wis., to spend the summer. She will be joined there by her daughter, Miss Ann Robinson, who has been visiting friends in the East.

Miss Wilmot Muller, 560 North Taylor avenue, entertained her chapter of the Garden Club last Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. B. L. Tatman of South Geyer road was hostess at a tea Wednesday afternoon for Miss Mary Tarrant, a missionary to China, who is here on a furlough.

Maury Jones, son of Mrs. Lorraine F. Jones of Ivy Lodge, will depart late this month for New York, where he will spend a short time before sailing for Italy to spend the summer.

Eugene Lofgreen, son of Dr. and Mrs. John Lofgreen of Taylor and Adams avenues, has returned from St. Mary's Hospital, where he was confined for three weeks following an injury to his hip.

The Mary Queen of Peace School, Berry road near Lockwood avenue, will give its annual picnic today on the grounds of the school.

Mrs. Frank H. Morgan, 700 North Taylor avenue, was hostess to a card party yesterday afternoon sponsored by the Girls' Friendly Society.

Miss Elizabeth Andrews has returned to her home in Washington after a visit of three weeks with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Hoyt, 417 South Kirkwood road. Miss Andrews was entertained at several informal affairs. Last Sunday evening Bown Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney J. Adams, 426 South Kirkwood road, gave a picture show at the Hoyt home in compliment to Miss Andrews.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Becker, 660 Marshall avenue, entertained over last week-end at the country home of Mrs. B. Fromm, Margaret Lodge, Lonedell, Mo., members of Austin and Floyd Kay Post, No. 156, American Legion. The guests included friends from Webster Groves and Kirkwood.

The last assembly dance of the season was given Friday evening at the Woodlawn Country Club. Mrs. William S. Matthews, Mrs. Albert S. Chandler, Mrs. Henry Worrall and Mrs. E. F. Berkeley Jones were chaperones. There were several informal dinner parties before the dance, among them being one by Miss Leslie Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Brown, and another by Miss Marjorie Hawkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hawkins.

Miraculous, New Reducing Garment
takes off inches from hips, waist, thighs
WEAR TODAY'S STYLES IN PERFECT FORM
American women have accorded an enthusiastic welcome to Beauty Mould. After trying on this wonderful new Reducing Garment they have realized that they can be stout and still be fashionable. And after wearing it but a short time they have marveled at the manner in which the flesh has actually disappeared. Those women accustomed to reduce by strenuous exercise and rigid diet found that the Beauty Mould way was a new way and a sure way and an easy way—and since securing this marvelous Reducing Garment they have been wearing the new styles beautifully while losing flesh daily.

This is what Miss Varden says:
"For years I have been a corset and dress model and have exhibited at many style shows throughout this country and Europe. I am what is known as a perfect 36.
"I never diet, but when I put on excess fat I immediately begin wearing this silk-surfaced rubber corset and in a short time I reduce down to perfect 36 measurements. Then I must discontinue wearing the corset, otherwise I reduce too much.
"There are no bad effects from wearing this lovely garment; it absorbs all moisture, and in appearance, fit and style it is the equal of any corset I have ever worn."
Beauty Mould
lets you wear the new styles beautifully while losing weight daily
The Beauty Mould is a totally new invention. The surface next to the body is an absorbent finishing cloth, the outside is lustrous silk. And between these two is an interlining of that famous patented Rubber-Tex. Here is a flesh-reducing garment that eliminates all the disadvantages of the old-time rubber corsets.
Marvelously comfortable to wear, beautiful in style, modelled to conform the figure to the newest fashions of today.
You can wash it and keep it fresh always. And the back lacing lets you pull it in as your hips and waist grow smaller day by day.
No excuse now for anyone looking stiff, bulky, fat! Beauty Mould gives you the smart slender figure you must have to look beautiful in the new styles, while it gradually reduces your body to lovely lines.
Find out how true all this is—how unbelievably slim and graceful you can look, and become . . . in the Beauty Mould.

Beauty Mould is a product of The Sandfelder Co., Chicago, Ill., and is made by the Associated Apparel Industries, Inc., largest manufacturers in the world of Corsets and Brassieres. Makers of Gossard, Modart, Nature's Rival, Beauty Mould, Jackson, Venus, and College Girl Corsets and LaMode Garments.

The Rev. John F. Adrian, pastor of Corpus Christi Catholic Church at Jennings, will celebrate his silver jubilee mass at 10 a. m. today in commemoration of his twenty-fifth year in the priesthood. He was ordained at Kenrick Seminary. Father Adrian has been at Jennings since November, 1915, when he was sent there by Archbishop Glennon to organize a new parish. After the mass, a dinner will be served to visiting clergy, and in the evening there will be a reception in the parish hall.

150-MILE RADIUS GIVEN ST. LOUIS TRADE AREA

Chamber of Commerce Charts Region Containing Parts of Seven States.

The Chamber of Commerce gave a statement to the press yesterday announcing it had charted the trading area of St. Louis as extending to a radius of 150 to 200 miles around the city. It stated that data for this chart was submitted by the Associated Retailers. The Chamber's statement follows:

"Information was recently received by the Chamber of Commerce that advertising agencies in other cities and trade journals published there were designating the St. Louis trade area as being limited within approximately a 50-mile radius. The Chamber's Research Department, headed by M. M. Drake, went into the question, conferring with officials of the Associated Retailers and business institutions here.

"As a result of the study the department made, it was found that this city's retail area is roughly bounded by a circle with a 150 to 200 mile radius, which takes in practically all of the states of Missouri and Illinois and considerable portions of Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Iowa.

"To give an idea of the extent of this area, it might be stated that the circle bounding it runs roughly as follows: Beginning slightly west of Springfield, Mo., to a spot a few miles east of Kansas City; around to above Davenport, Ia., and including Burlington, Ia., Moline, Rock Island and Kewance, Ill.; around north of Ottawa, Ill., to a few miles west of Indianapolis and including Terre Haute; to a spot several miles east of Evansville, Ind., around south of Hopkinsville, Ky., and including Owensboro and Paducah; to south of Jonesboro, Ark., and back to Springfield, Mo.

"Aiding the compilation of the facts in the study, K. F. Niemoeller, manager of the Associated Retailers, stated that he did not know how the idea of a 50-mile radius could have been arrived at.

"'As a matter of fact, St. Louis stores enjoy the patronage of a great many people from Missouri and Arkansas, going into Missouri within 50 or 75 miles of Kansas City,' he said.

"'From the south we have quite a little business from points beyond the Missouri-Arkansas State line. From Illinois we have the patronage from as far south as Cairo; from the east a considerable trade as far as the Indiana-Illinois State line. There is also a large volume of business comes to St. Louis from points south of Danville, Springfield, Decatur and Jacksonville, with some business form each of the four cities, although not much from Danville.

"'Swinging around to the west we have a considerable volume of trade as far north as Hannibal and some as far as Keokuk. It is quite possible that the 50-mile radius was suggested at a time when highway conditions were not as good as they are at present, but with the continued improvement of roads throughout Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Arkansas, our retail trading area should not be limited to less than 150 to 200 miles.'"

SUMMER COURSES IN CITY'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS ANNOUNCED

Harris and Stowe Teachers' Colleges Offer Opportunity for Advanced Work.

Seven-week summer courses, 8 a. m. to noon, five days a week, will open tomorrow at Harris and Stowe teachers' colleges, Beaumont, Sumner and Cleveland High schools, and 35 grade schools, of which six are for colored students, as are Stowe and Sumner.

And resident of St. Louis who is under 21 and a high school graduate may enroll in the general course at Harris or Stowe, under a ruling of the Board of Education in January providing two years' general college education at public expense. Teachers employed by the board pay no tuition for training courses, which are open to others for $20 for the six-week term.

Which Girl is Yours?

Is your's the healthy youngster destined to glorious womanhood? Or have you a nervous little lightweight whose life will be an uphill struggle? And why is it some girls thrive while others seem never to get a grip on life? There is a reason, Mother—a reason all can understand.

Every day the food you give your girl shapes her future health. Yes, each meal can be made to help her—or not. The highest medical authorities have proved that growth and energy are a matter of food—not merely enough food—but certain kinds of food—properly balanced.

The finest balanced food for youngsters is admitted to be Thompson's Chocolate Malted Milk. It is highest in that very Principle-of-Growth—butterfat. It combines in easily digested form all of those elements which build strong bones, sturdy muscles, firm flesh, active energy. It adds 76% to the food value of plain milk.

If you have a tired nervous little girl begin now to give her a little Thompson's in her milk two or three times a day. You'll soon notice the increase in energy and the quieter sleep it produces. Send for our Life Line Chart—free—and keep track of her growth in height and weight compared to the average. It will help you develop the kind of daughter you long to have.

Serve Easily at Home

Thompson's now prepare a special "Double Malted" Malted Milk already mixed with powdered chocolate in most appetizing proportions. In a jiffy you can mix a delicious chocolate malted milk right at home. Two teaspoonsful in a glass of milk—just a moment of shaking—that's all.

Your druggist or grocer will be glad to deliver right now—today—a 1 lb. can of Thompson's Chocolate "Double Malted". Telephone him now. Give your children a home treat for luncheon or dinner. Watch their happy smiles when they taste the food that's best for them. Get Thompson's now.

Synchronized Operation of Two Stations 'Significant'

Tests by WHO and WOC on Full Time Basis Revive Hope That One Channel May Be Able to Carry Net Program to Whole Country.

By MARTIN CODEL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Proof that chain broadcasting is evolving to the point where one wave length may be sufficient to carry a network program to the entire country appears to be in prospect in the synchronization experiments by two Iowa stations—WHO, Des Moines, and WOC, Davenport.

Almost coincident with the decision of the Westinghouse Co. to abandon the synchronized operation of WBZ, Springfield, Mass., and WBZA, Boston, the Iowa broadcasters began experiments which promise to pioneer a new technique in the use of wave lengths. A measure of success appears to have greeted their efforts.

Meanwhile, Westinghouse has been authorized by the Federal Radio Commission to replace its two Massachusetts stations, which have been synchronized by wire on the same channel for broadcasting the same program, with a new 15,000-watt station to be erected at a site 20 miles southwest of Boston. While Westinghouse forsook synchronized operation because of the wire cost, and because WBZ was unable to cover Southern Massachusetts, the Iowa stations were impelled to synchronize because they have been forced to share time on a cleared channel since the 1928 reallocation.

"A very significant experiment" was the formal comment of Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, chief engineer of the Federal Radio Commission, after his recent inspection of the WHO-WOC efforts to synchronize. Dr. Jolliffe asserted that it was feasible for two or more stations to maintain their common frequency while carrying the same program if their transmitters were stable. He emphasized the fact, however, that highly specialized and intricate apparatus was being employed by the Bell Laboratories engineers in their work with the Iowa stations.

Both WHO and WOC have crystal control and both operate with 5000 watts power. Situated about 190 miles apart, they have established a receiving station at Marengo, Ia., exactly midway, which is connected with WOC by wire. This midway station receives the programs of both stations. At WOC a monitor checks the fluctuations and, by means of an adjustable condenser, is able to hold the simultaneous operation within one-tenth of a cycle. At times the adjustment is so fine that the two waves are held within three one-hundredths of a cycle.

There is a narrow strip of territory around Marengo where reception is ruined by fading. But listeners within most of the service ranges of either or both stations are unable to detect any lag or any imperfection other than a slight fading. But this fading is not sufficient to be detected by the ordinary ear over the major portion of the service areas of both stations.

They are highly enthusiastic about the project out in Iowa, according to Dr. Jolliffe. If it continues successful, there is every prospect that the operators of the two stations, now jointly owned, will withdraw their proposal to the Federal Radio Commission to abandon WHO and WOC and erect a new 50,000 watter in their stead. In the meantime, they have obtained authority to operate both stations full time under the synchronization scheme, both carrying the same programs.

Success over a period of time will mean that widely flung chains of stations can operate on single channels, for if it proves feasible with two stations others can be added and kept in adjustment by similar means. This advance in broadcasting technique may mean a decided economy in wave lengths, the establishment of more national and regional chains, and a wider selection of programs for metropolitan and rural listeners alike.

Slumber Music Back On Air Tomorrow

The Slumber Music of three months ago, with Ludwig Laurier directing the string ensemble, will return to the air in response to popular demand tomorrow night. Milton J. Cross will be announcer and soloist three nights each week.

The Slumber Hour was altered to make it consist largely of selections by a quartet and soloists. But so great was the protest by the Laurier audience that NBC decided to reinstate the original group.

At times the adjustment is so fine that the two waves are held within three one-hundredths of a cycle.

There is a narrow strip of territory around Marengo where reception is ruined by fading. But listeners within most of the service ranges of either or both stations are unable to detect any lag or any imperfection other than a slight fading. But this fading is not sufficient to be detected by the ordinary ear over the major portion of the service areas of both stations.

They are highly enthusiastic about the project out in Iowa, according to Dr. Jolliffe. If it continues successful, there is every prospect that the operators of the two stations, now jointly owned, will withdraw their proposal to the Federal Radio Commission to abandon WHO and WOC and erect a new 50,000 watter in their stead. In the meantime, they have obtained authority to operate both stations full time under the synchronization scheme, both carrying the same programs.

Success over a period of time will mean that widely flung chains of stations can operate on single channels, for if it proves feasible with two stations others can be added and kept in adjustment by similar means. This advance in broadcasting technique may mean a decided economy in wave lengths, the establishment of more national and regional chains, and a wider selection of programs for metropolitan and rural listeners alike.

Slumber Music Back On Air Tomorrow

The Slumber Music of three months ago, with Ludwig Laurier directing the string ensemble, will return to the air in response to popular demand tomorrow night. Milton J. Cross will be announcer and soloist three nights each week.

The Slumber Hour was altered to make it consist largely of selections by a quartet and soloists. But so great was the protest by the Laurier audience that NBC decided to reinstate the original group.

Golf Broadcasts This Week by KSD

KSD is to rebroadcast resumes of happenings in the British Open Golf Tournament on June 16 to 20, inclusive, from 4:45 to 5 o'clock each afternoon.

The broadcasts will include reviews by Willy Keller, British golf champion, and an analysis of crucial plays.

Byrd's Arrival To Be Broadcast Over All Chains

Elaborate Plans Made by NBC and CBS to 'Cover' Event Thursday.

Full details of the arrival of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's Antarctic Expedition at New York next Thursday, June 19, will be broadcast over all the chains. Both the NBO and CBS networks will have tugs equipped with short wave transmitters meet the Byrd ship off Quarantine.

When Admiral Byrd lands at Pier A, New York, Graham McNamee for the NBC and Ted Husing for the CBS will take up the story.

As the procession winds through New York's streets it will be reported by the NBC's mobile short wave trancsmitter mounted on a truck manned by Announcer George Hicks, and a crew of radio engineers. Hicks words, coming from the short wave transmitter, will be picked up by seven NBC short wave receivers scattered over the city and will be relayed to the NBC studios for transmissinn to WEAF and WJZ and to the chain stations, including KSD and KWK. The CBS plans to have announcers stationed at micvrophones along the parade route.

All the chains will have microphones and announcers at the city hall, where Admiral Byrd will be received by Mayor Walker.

The proceedings at the luncheon given by the New York Advertising Club to Admiral Byrd at 11:15 St. Louis time Thursday forenoon will be broadcast. So, also, will the speches at the dinner in Byrd's honor given by the Merchants' Association of the City of New York at 8 o'clock Thursday night.

Friday, the Rear Admiral and the members of his expedition will go to Washington, where Byrd will be presented with the National Geographic Society's special gold medal by President Hoover. The ceremonies will be broadcast from 7:30 to 8 p. m. President Hoover will make a short address and present the medal to Byrd. During the ceremonies Byrd will make his first report on his scientific discoveries in Antarctica.

Saturday the explorers will be guests at an American Arbitration Association luncheon. The ceremonies will be broadcast from 11:10 a. m. to 12 noon.

Meetings 5700 Miles Apart to Be Linked by Broadcast Network

A broadcast, which will co-ordinate two meetings being held more than 5700 miles apart and will present as speakers seven of the men most prominent in international affairs, will be staged by the National Broadcasting Co. next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The broadcast is the National Electric Light Association Round-the-World program. It has so arranged that executives of NELA will address the World Power Conference in Berlin and that leaders of the power conference will address the NELA convention. Thomas A. Edison, speaking from his library in West Orange, N. J.; Lord Derby, speaking from England, and Senatore Guglielmo Marconi, speaking from London, will be heard by both assemblies through a special international network. The world will be able to listen in on all proceedings.

Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., and Mathew Sloan, president of the NELA and of the New York Edison Co., will speak from San Francisco, scene of the NELA convention and control point for the broadcast. From the power conference will come short addresses by Dr. Karl Koettgen and Dr. Oskar von Miller, chairman and president of the conference, respectively.

Vacation Motoring Route Leads to Cape Cod Section of New England

Passes Through Illinois and Indiana, Connecting with Roosevelt Highway, which Leads Through Picturesque and Historic Country to the Atlantic Coast.

A TOUR of New England and its famous seashore resorts on Cape Cod will prove of interest to many persons who plan to spend their vacations motoring this summer. At these resorts visitors will find diversified outdoor sport and recreation. The principle attraction of Cape Cod, of course, is the delightful sandy beach, the surf-bathing and kindred sports, but there also will be found excellent golf courses, tennis courts, beautiful lakes and streams stocked with fish (not to mention deep-sea fishing), fine roads leading to countless historic and scenic spots and, in fact, everything that can be expected of a vacation at the seashore.

The suggested route to this section of New England is interesting as well as pleasant. Motorists from St. Louis and nearby should proceed eastward on U. S. 40 through Illinois and Indiana, to a point west of Columbus, O., where U. S. 42 is encountered and followed north into Lodi. Continue east from Lodi on Ohio State Route No. 17 to Ellsworth, drive north from Ellsworth into Warren and leave the latter town on No. 82 as far as the Pennsylvania line. From the State line follow Pennsylvania No. 65 to Oil City and then motor north from Oil City on U. S. 8 to Union City, located on the Roosevelt Highway, U. S. 6.

Follow Roosevelt Highway.

A great traffic artery, the Roosevelt Highway wends it way from the placid shore of Lake Erie, at Erie, in Western Pennsylvania, through that State, and through New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, to the rock-bound Cape Cod Coast. It traverses mountain regions, picturesque valleys, cities and towns that have their own attractions, and takes the motorist past the shores of many pleasant inland lakes.

Leaving Union City, the traveler follows this highway through Columbus into Corry. This town was named after one of its first settlers, Hiram Corry. Horace Greeley, noted publisher and philanthropist, spent much of his early life near Corry. Panama Rocks, with exceptional scenic attractions, is near this town.

Southeastward from Corry one passes through Youngsville and enters Warren, ideally located at the junction of the Alleghany and Conowongo Rivers. Going through Warren, motorists will be impressed with the magnitude of the national forest preserve now in the course of development. When this project is completed, Warren will be at its entrance.

Journey from Warren, through Clarendon, Sheffield and Ludlow into Kane. This enterprising little community, with only 7000 inhabitants, is widely known as a great glass manufacturing center. Natural gas for fuel and excellent glass stone is found in abundance nearby.

A Hunter's Paradise.

Continuing eastward on the Roosevelt Highway, the tourist passes through Mount Jewett and on through Farmers Valley to Port Allegany. From Port Allegany he travels southeastward to Coudersport. Beyond any doubt, the most interesting place at Coudersport is Black Forest, lying a little south of the village. In the forest there are said to be more brown nose black bear than in any other locality in the United States. Needless to say, this vast wooded area is a rendezvous for the hunter, fisherman, camper and vacationist. It is State-owned. Other interesting places nearby are the ruins of Ole Bull's Castle and the Ice Mine, the latter one of nature's greatest freaks. Ice forms in this cavity during the summer months and wastes away in the winter.

Reluctantly leaving this wonderful attraction, the traveler journeys on through Galeton and then to Ansonia, in Tioga County, where old Indian camping grounds are to be seen.

From Ansonia the continues to Mansfield. The Roosevelt route crosses another great highway at Mansfield, known as the Susquehanna Trail. This interesting north and south route connects points in New York State with the capital of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, and also the national capitol. Originally, this same trail was used as a means of communication between the Indians of the south and those of the Five Nations. When William Penn got the grant of land in this vicinity, he at once employed two men to build a road over this trail.

Pass Through Troy, N. Y.

Again eastward-bound, one passes through Troy, named after the Troy of the old world. During the Civil War, Troy was a concentration point for all troops from that section of Pennsylvania. Among the points of interest near the city are Mountain Lake and several scenic mountain glens.

Drive from Troy, through Towanda and Wyalusing, where Moravian Indian missions were established more than 150 years ago, and continue southeasterly into Scranton. Lake Lincoln Park is a popular amusement resort. In it is a large municipal swimming pool.

Leaving Scranton, continue through Carbondale, where some of the largest coal mines in the world are located, and on through Hawley, where the tourist passes a $10,000,000 hydro-electric dam. The waters of the Wallenpaupeck here form an artificial lake 51 miles in circumference, the largest artificial body of water in Pennsylvania.

A brief jaunt along the Roosevelt highway brings the traveler to Milford, county seat of Pike County, which is renowned for its picturesque scenery, and from there through Matamoras, where he may still see a fort used during the Revolutionary War, to Port Jervis, located in the beautiful valleys of the Delaware and Neversink Rivers.

Visit Race Track at Goshen.

He then travels over this route through Centerville and Slate Hill into Goshen. A visit to the historic race track at Goshen will prove interesting. During the season thousands of sportsmen assemble there.

From Goshen follow U. S. 6 on through Chester and Monroe and through the picturesque mountain village of Highland Mills to Central Valley. At Central Valley the traveler will see a large direction sign indicating the way over the newly completed Long Mountain road through Bear Mountain Park, to the Bear Mountain Bridge. This

Auto Production Falls Off in May, Sales Holding Up

Retail Deliveries Greater to Date Than in Any Year Except 1929.

By MARC BRAUN.

DETROIT, Mich., June 14.—The automobile business has not been and is not now as bad as many have pictured it. While production dropped off to some extent in May, as compared with April, new car sales have been regarded as fairly satisfactory and there is no indication that there will be any lessening for some time to come.

An optimistic note was sounded this week by H. H. Rice of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and a General Motors executive, when he reported that retail passenger car deliveries in the first four months of 1930 were greater than in any previous year, barring 1929.

Sales of new cars totaled 257,064 units in April, as against 298,824 in March, an increase of 19.5 per cent, and showed a 26 per cent decline from sales in April, 1929, which was an abnormal period. The present decrease in production, it was pointed out, is due in part to the fact that dealers have 45,000 more cars on hand than they had a year ago. And production, Rice pointed out, in the first five months of 1930 was only 6 per cent less than the average for the corresponding period during the last five years.

Plan Foreign Displays.

From what one learns from executives, the American automobile manufacturers have no intention of curtailing their efforts to increase their foreign trade. They are preparing to show a larger variety and finer cars than ever before at the annual foreign shows, the dates of which are as follows: Paris, Oct. 2—12; London, Oct. 17—26; Berlin, Nov. 6—16; Brussels, Dec. 6—17. "American automobiles are in as great a demand in foreign

Black River Section May Be Reached Via Route 61

With 25-Mile Detour From Farmington to Fredericktown Replaced by Concrete, This Will Be Popular Way to Reach Lesterville, Mo.—Return May Be Made Through Bismarck.

By ROBERT L. BRADLEY, Automobile Editor.

NOW that the 25-mile detour between Farmington and Fredericktown has been replaced by smooth pavement, except for a single brief dirt stretch just south of Farmington, many St. Louisans will select this route for a motor trip to Lesterville, Mo., in the beautiful Black River section. It adds but 12 miles to the trip and offers the advantage of the extra hard-surfaced highway, to say nothing of the change in scenery from the customary route.

Whether the week-end motorist goes this way or follows the usual routing through Bismarck, he will find much of interest in the Ozarks around Lesterville. Fishing, one of the chief attractions, is reported to be good. Other outdoor recreations, such as hiking, boating, swimming and horseback riding, may, of course, be enjoyed in that vicinity. At this time of the year, the trees are in full foliage, wild flowers grow in profusion in the thick grass and underbrush and the melodious notes of a number of interesting varieties of birds may be heard along the cool paths and trails.

South on Highway 61.

Driving south out of the city one takes United States Highway 61 (the LeMay Ferry road) through Barnhart and past Herculaneum. Several miles beyond Festus and Crystal City, the pavement divides, No. 21 going to the right through De Soto. No. 61 should be followed, however, through Halifax, a small cluster of buildings, on through Desloge and Flat River to Farmington.

Highway employes are stationed at the end of the concrete just beyond the Farmington limits, regulating traffic over the one-way detour which must still be used. Last week we waited for 15 minutes while a number of north-bound cars drove past. Then we were given the word. The detour is dusty and bumpy, but it only lasts for two miles until the new concrete is reached.

There is something about new pavements that thrills the blase motorist. It is so smooth the pressure of one's foot on the accelerator unconsciously grows heavier and heavier, until one's car is fairly zooming. It is with an effort that the speed laws and the habit of safe driving are recalled to mind.

One part of the highway cuts across country for two full miles in as straight a line as can be laid. Down one hill and up the next. And the curves are well banked.

Through Scenic Country.

But one should not travel too rapidly, or the beauty of the landscape will be lost. When the engineers laid out this pavement, they did a real service to the motoring public. The slab traverses a delightful countryside, with green fields of growing grain furnishing a welcome contrast to the darker shade of the forests and the white of the highway. A blue sky overhead, flecked with an occasional wisp of cloud, makes the picture complete.

At Fredericktown, regrettably, we leave No. 61 and take No. 67 through this town, which is off the north and south highway. Once on the city streets, or rather at the town square, the Highway 70 markings are followed and once again we find ourselves out in the country, this time on just such a graveled road as one will encounter almost anywhere in the Ozarks these days.

No. 70 offers still further delights to the traveler, passing, as it does, through a picturesque farming neighborhood. The road crosses the St. Francis River shortly before it reaches Lake Killarney. The fishermen in the party may want to stop over either at the river or the lake for an hour or two of sport, but with the Black River as a destination, our advice is to push right along.

Pass Lake Killarney.

As the road follows the north curve of Lake Killarney, one may catch a glimpse now and again of the placid waters. Resorts on the edge of the lake are a week-end attraction in themselves, but we will hurry along.

On into quiet little Arcadia to

Willys-Knight '87' Presented At Low Prices

Features Newly Designed Sleeve Valve Engine, Roomier Bodies.

Featuring a newly designed Knight sleeve valve engine, luxurious and roomy bodies, modern lines of beauty and smooth riding qualities, a new Willy's Knight, known as the "87" series, is announced by the Willys-Overland Co. A complete line of the new cars is on display at E. J. Johnson, Inc., local distributer, and associated dealers. The new car lists at from $975 to $1265 at the factory.

All "87" models have an overall length of 159 inches, except the de luxe sedan, which has an overall length of 161¼ inches. In addition to this sedan, there are the coach, coupe, standard sedan, roadster and touring car.

Lines are low and graceful, similar to those of cars selling in higher price classes. Exterior color combinations are blended harmoniously. The interiors, likewise, are well fitted and upholstered, with an eye to comfort, taste and spaciousness.

Wire Wheels Available.

Wire wheels, which are available for all models add to the smart appearance. Spare wheels and tires are mounted in the fender wells, while those models equipped with wood wheels carry the spare in the rear. Wire wheels are standard equipment on the de luxe sedan. The smart appearance of the rear of the car is completed by the metal trunk rack, which is equipment on all models. Parking lights are located on forward fenders.

No detail has been overlooked to provide quality in the lowest priced Willys-Knight and to give every convenience and comfort to driver and passengers. Included among these details are generous leg-room and spacious seats, "finger-tip control," improved steering mechanism, adjustable steering post, narrow-rim steering wheel, adjustable front seat in sedan, four-wheel brakes which respond to the slightest pressure on the brake pedal, double acting Monroe hydraulic shock eliminators, and mono-control for opening or closing the windshield.

The two sedan models, the coach and the touring, carry five persons, while the coupe and roadster, each of which have rumble seats, carry four persons.

High speeds now possible in the modern motor car necessarily require the most advanced braking equipment in order that the driver may at all times have his car under perfect control. This safety feature in the Willy-Knight "87" is provided by the four-wheel Bendix duo-servo, internal expanding, two-shoe brakes. They are fully inclosed. The braking area is 187 square inches. The brake also operates on all four wheels.

Like all other products of Willys-Overland, the new car employs the "finger-tip control," consisting of a single button in the center of the steering wheel, which enables the driver to start the engine, sound the horn or operate the lights.

The spring length of 178 inches, combined with the use of the double acting shock absorbers, are factors in providing exceptional riding comfort over all kinds of roads at any speed.

A manually controlled heat valve is operated from the instrument panel. This provides minimum gas temperatures for maximum work and high temperatures for the warming-up period. This equipment is especially desirable in the winter months.

The series of tests that preceded general production of the "87" are said to have disclosed a high standard of performance. It embodies many important engineering advancements in Knight engine design.

Force Feed Lubrication.

Lubrication is taken care of through the use of the full force feed system. The oil is carried under full pressure to crankshaft main bearings, connecting rod bearings, eccentric shaft bearings and timing chain. Sleeves, pistons and piston pins are oiled by spray.

Strength and rigidity are shown in the construction of the frame. The seven cross-members are riveted to the upper and lower flange, which is recognized as an advanced chassis construction.

The steering gear, designed for ease of handling and safety, is a semi-irreversible type, worm and gear. The 17-inch steering wheel is of hard rubber with steel center.

The speedometer, oil gauge, heat indicator, ammeter and electric gasoline gauge are attractively grouped on the instrument panel while the hand throttle, spark control, heat control and choke are on the dash within easy reach of the driver. The dash lighting is indirect.

Highway Maps Covering Nation Are Distributed

THE Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch has for distribution an excellent 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, showing the condition and numbers of highways and mileage between towns. The price is 50 cents, and 60 cents, if mailed.

St. Louis and vicinity maps show all towns, roads, rivers, streams, lakes and other details within a radius of 50 miles of St. Louis. They sell for 20 cents, 24 cents if mailed. Individual State maps are 10 cents, and 12 cents mailed.

City guides giving the location of sctreets and street car and bus lines, churches, hospitals, theaters, office buildings and containing a map of the city, sell for 25 and 30 cents.

Maps of St. Louis and the suburbs, showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Clayton, Ferguson, Kirkwood, Webster Groves and University City, sell for 40 and 45 cents.

Open Car Output 10 Per Cent of Total for 1929

Decline of This Type in Last Decade Reveals Change in Riding Habits.

How the riding habits of the nation have changed in 10 years is shown by the reversal of popularity as between open and closed cars. The "fresh-air" type of automobile has steadily lost ground.

In 1919, according to statistics in "Facts and Figures of the Automobile Industry," a publication of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, only 10 per cent of the passenger cars produced were closed types, while in 1929 all but 10 per cent were closed. In a sense, this is a triumph of utility over beauty for, while all cars have steadily grown better looking, it is generally conceded to be impossible to put as much grace of line into closed car bodies as into the open types. That still holds true, for the latest open jobs are the smartest that have ever been seen on the highways.

As between the two contenders in the open class, the touring type has generally been preferred to the roadster, but in 1928 they reached an equal footing, each representing 5¼ per cent of the total production. In 1929, however, the roadster forged ahead, for 7 per cent of the cars produced were of that type and 4 per cent touring.

The coupe has gained about what the open car has lost, for all other types of closed cars have held pretty close to two-thirds of the production during the past three years. Among these the four-door sedan is the outstanding favorite. The two-door sedan comes next and for the past two years has represented just slightly more than a quarter of the production.

Increased interest is evident in the convertible types of bodies combining the advantages of both open and closed cars, which suggests that the competition between the two older types may end in a compromise.

Auto Crash Moves Wall Several Feet, But Tires Hold Up

An eight-cylinder touring car roars down a level stretch, ith its throttle wide open. Under full power, it crashes headon into a 10-ton brick and concrete wall, reinforced with steel. The driver is hurled to the ground and the wall is moved several feet from its foundation.

Another automobile accident? Not at all! Merely a test of the new General dual balloon blowout-proof tires, performed before a crowd of safety experts, engineers and others and pictured from every angle by motion picture and newsreel cameras.

At the wheel of the doomed car was Capt. Dick Grace, Hollywood's famous crasher of airplanes in screen dramas of the air. It was Grace who crashed the airplanes to the amazement of the audiences who saw "Wings," "Lilac Time," "Hell's Angels," "Young Eagles" and other spectacular air pictures.

To give the most severe test possible of the blowout-proof qualities of the new General tire, Grace proposed to drive them with terrific force into a solid wall, remaining in the car until it crashed, so that he would be certain that the tires received the full impact of the blow.

On the General Tire athletic field, company engineers built the most solid wall they knew how to build. Nearly three feet under ground they buried the base, 15 feet wide and almost four feet thick. Of brick and concrete, reinforced with steel, it rose about three feet above the level of the field. It was apparently immovable.

The front running gear of the car was moved forward so that the tires cleared the front of the frame and springs by six inches, making it certain that the tires would get the blow first and get the full effect of it.

When the car struck the wall, the tires were flattened against the rims which were bent out of shape. Later inspection showed that the tires were not damaged in any way, inside or out, and had not lost a pound of air.

Railways Favor Busses.

At the end of 1929, there were 62 steam railroads in the United States using 1252 busses over 16,793 miles of route, while 260 electric railroads operated 10,062 busses over 20,279 miles.

Downdraft Type of Manifold Used by Indianapolis Racers

The use of superchargers was barred this year at the Indianapolis 500-mile racing classic as it had been proven that they were not practical for stock automobiles. Instead of this mechanical blower to increase the gas flow into the combustion chambers, several of the racing cars used downdraft manifolding and carburetion.

The Viking eight was one of the first cars to use downdraft manifolding. This design has the intake manifold and carburetor elevated so that the flow of the gas mixture to the combustion chamber is downward. Vaporized gasoline is considerably heavier than air, and this method of utilizing gravitation accelerates the flow of the gas to the combustion chambers and minimizes the possibility of the vapor steam pocketing and condensing in cold weather.

In addition to the downdraft principle, the manifolding of the Viking has been designed so that the distance from the carburetor to each of the eight cylinders is exactly the same. This results in an equal charge of gas vapor being delivered to each cylinder and eliminates the uneven engine action caused by some cylinders getting a rich mixture while others are starved.

Factory Supervisor Aids Used Car Sales

J. H. Morgan, used car supervisor of the Studebaker Corporation of America, is in St. Louis directing an extensive used car sale for Arthur R. Lindburg, Inc., local Studebaker distributer. The sale started yesterday and will continue throughout the week.

No Accidents for 130 Deaf Drivers In North Carolina

Motorists in possession of all of their faculties for sight, hearing and speech should find a safety challenge in the fact that 130 drivers in North Carolina are deaf and have driven for two years without an accident, according to the Safety Department of the American Automobile Association.

The A. A. A. statement is based on a report from the North Carolina Bureau for the Deaf, which made a survey of the drivers in the state who have suffered the loss of their hearing.

"While it is a known principle of compensation that the loss of one sense sharpens those remaining," says the statement, "the North Carolina record offers a challenge to normal drivers."

Hugh G. Miller, in charge of the bureau, explains that the 140 deaf drivers have averted accidents by careful use of their sight.

Cadillac Shipped 2219 Cars in May

The Cadillac Motor Car Co. reports shipments for May of 2219 units. Considering somewhat lessened buying which has prevailed throughout the spring months, this is a satisfactory showing, according to Lawrence P. Fisher, president.

"Of the total shipments," Fisher said, "445 were V-16's, the new 16-cylinder Cadillac launched at the beginning of the year. This figure corresponds with a volume of 576 for last month and, bearing in mind that the 16-cylinder Cadillacs are all exclusive custom jobs selling in a much higher price range than that in which either Cadillac or La Salle V-eights ever sold, the figure is one of unusual significance."

District Official Of Fisk Tire Co. Takes Over Duties

Announcement of the appointment of Evan B. Brewster as assistant district manager of the St. Louis district of the Fisk Tire Co. is made by H. L. Flood, manager. Brewster comes to St. Louis from Akron, O., where he formerly was engaged in tire production and merchandising as vice president and general manager of the Triangle Tire & Rubber Co. His experience in that capacity will enable him to aid local Fisk dealers in marketing the new Fisk "Air-Flight" tire, Flood declared.

Traffic Jams Cost Billions.

Traffic congestion costs the American public more than $2,000,000,000 annually, aside from losses due to traffic accidents, according to a report of the Committee on Measures for the Relief of Traffic Congestion of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Indianapolis Race Upset Old Notions About Lubrication

Not the least of the engineering findings at the Indianapolis Speedway last Friday was the upsetting of certain long-accepted notions about motor lubrication. Heretofore the prevailing opinion has been that only special castor-blend oils could withstand the terrific punishment of motors racing 100 miles per hour for 500 miles. This year, however, several of the 33 starters equipped themselves with strictly "petroleum" oils, such as may be purchased at regular filling stations for everyday motor lubrication. Of the Pennzoil-lubricated cars, two placed in the money among the first 10.

Russell Snowberger, who used Pennzoil in his Russell Special, finished eighth after losing 17 minutes due to repairing a broken shock absorber. At the end of the 500-mile grind his motor had consumed a little more than three pints of Pennzoil. Corum, who used Pennzoil in the Jones' Stutz Special, finished tenth, conceded to be a most remarkable achievement for this strictly stock car.

because its engine is the biggest in any six of its price

Powered by the largest engine in any six of its price, the Pontiac Big Six is a big car in fact as well as in name.

Sustained high speeds—swift acceleration—hill climbing . . . all are accomplished with surprising smoothness and ease. This is because Pontiac's big 200-cubic-inch engine develops its maximum power at a very moderate engine speed.

Oil under high pressure lubricates vital moving parts of the big Pontiac engine. In addition, the Harmonic Balancer and rubber mountings increase still further the delightful smoothness and silence of the Pontiac power plant.

All these features help to make Pontiac's performance so different from what you expect in such an inexpensive car. Drive the Pontiac Big Six for 30 minutes and you will appreciate what fine performance you can enjoy at low cost!

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values . . . Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

Pierce-Arrow Presents a New 'Straight Eight'

Model C Priced at From $2695 to $2875, at the Factory.

Pierce-Arrow this week is holding nation-wide showings of its new model C straight eight, announced as a companion car to the two groups of larger models introduced earlier this year. The Western Automobile Co., St. Louis distributer, has the new models on display at its showrooms at 4824 Washington boulevard. The prices range from $2695 to $2875 at Buffalo, N. Y.

The new models closely resemble Pierce-Arrow's larger and higher-priced cars being distinguished by the Pierce-Arrow fender lamps, with an option of the conventional bracket type if desired, and by the new, lowswung lines of current Pierce-Arrow design.

With a wheelbase of 132 inches, the chassis affords above-ordinary width for the commodious bodies. Unusual interior dimensions have been made possible.

115-Horsepower Motor.

The engine, of Pierce-Arrow design and manufacture, produces 115 horsepower and possesses characteristics which give the car that the company's officials claim to be the fastest accelerative and hill-climbing ability ever to have been attained by an engine of its dimensions. A new dual carburetor and improvements in manifolding account partly for the improved performance, further enhanced by a new transmission which is capable of remarkable traffic acceleration.

As in all Pierce-Arrow cars, safety glass is used for the windshield and all windows throughout.

The bodies are the product of the same Pierce-Arrow workmen who since the early days have been building limousines and other types of closed cars for owners of international prominence. The framework throughout is of straight-grained white ash. Pierce-Arrow being the only maker who uses this wood exclusively. The principal rails and pillars of the framework are solid, four-inch timbers, joined by a laminated method which is two and one-half times as strong as the ordinary mortised joint.

Wide Range of Colors.

Fifty-five operations are employed in color finishing as compared with the 14 or 15 commonly used, resulting in an unusual depth and brilliance of color. A wide range of colors is offered.

The interiors of the cars are typically Pierce-Arrow, smartly hand-tailored with expensive fabrics. The cushions are unusually luxurious, the rear one in the sedan and brougham having great depth because of the manner in which the car frame rises and then drops over the rear axle. Doors are extremely wide.

Stainless steel, pioneered by Pierce-Arrow in automobile construction, is used in more than 300 parts of the new cars, even for small bolts, nuts and washers—a permanent safeguard against rust or corrosion.

Frictionless ball bearing spring shackles, powerful four-wheel safety brakes, distinctive giant hub caps, hydraulic shock absorbers, heavier front and rear bumpers, inside sun visors, are among the long list of equipment items.

Three body types of Model C are now available—a five-passenger sedan, a five-passenger brougham and a two-passenger coupe. Pierce-Arrow's complete line of new models now comprises 18 body styles, offered on 132, 134, 139 and 144 inch wheelbases with three types of eight-cylinder engines ranging up to 132 horsepower.

Personnel Changes In Pierce-Arrow Co.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 14.—The Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co. announces the appointment of W. M. Baldwin as assistant general sales manager, and of W. E. Fellows as advertising manager.

Baldwin has been advertising manager for the past six years. Fellows comes to the Pierce-Arrow organization from the Oakland-Pontiac division of the General Motors Corporation, where he served as advertising manager for seven years and more recently as assistant general sales manager.

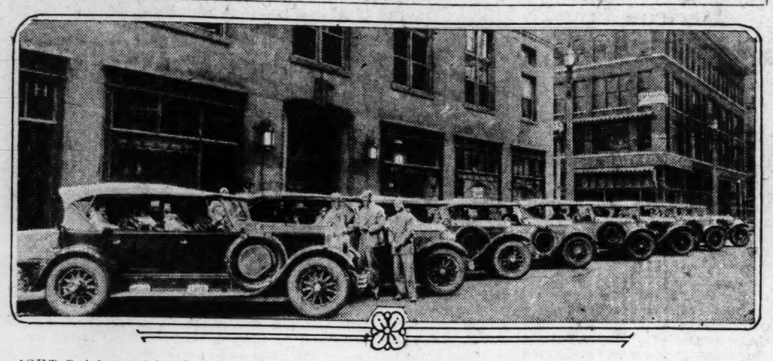
Motor Caravan Visits City En Route to Europe



EIGHT Buick sport touring cars passed through St. Louis last Sunday, with a party of 50, headed by Prof. Eugene W. Taylor of Southwestern College, Winfield, Kan. They will tour France, Italy, Austria, Germany, Holland and England.

W. H. Willcockson Takes Over Retail Vesper-Buick Sales

Former Secretary Forms Own Company and Will Operate at Same Location.

The entire retail organization of the Vesper-Buick Automobile Co., 3900 West Pine boulevard, former distributer of Buick and Marquette cars in the St. Louis territory, has been taken over by W. H. Willcockson, formerly secretary and general manager of the Vesper Co., and the new dealer company will be known as the Willcockson Buick Co. Wholesale activities here of the Buick Motor Co., as announced last Sunday, are being handled directly by the company which has established a factory branch.

W. H. Willcockson.

Willcockson, who resided in Houston, Tex., for 12 years, was prominent in business, civic and club circles there. He joined forces with F. W. A. Vesper at Kansas City, Mo., in 1920 and in 1922 came to St. Louis with Vesper as retail sales manager of Vesper-Buick. In August of that year he was elected secretary and general manager of the company.

C. C. Spiegelhalter is vice president of the Willcockson Buick Co. and J. L. Hershfelt is secretary. The retail sales and service organization of Vesper-Buick has been taken over without change, except for the retirement of Vesper and his brother, Walter H. Vesper.

In 1928 Willcockson was elected president of the Rotary Club here, and is now a director. He was active in Rotary affairs in Houston, as well, where he was also president of the Wholesale Credit Men's Association of South Texas and of the Houston City Baseball League. Willcockson now is president of the B. P. O. E. Bowling League, a director of the Algonquin Country Club and a governor of the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

Spiegelhalter, who will act as sales manager of the new company, started in the automobile business in Atlantic, Ia., as a dealer, moving to St. Louis eight years ago. He since has been engaged in the retail sale of automobiles. At one time he was manager of the northwest branch of the West Side Buick Co. and later sales manager and assistant general manager of that company.

Hershfelt is also service manager of the new company. He spent nine years with Vesper-Buick, and was made service manager of that company by Willcockson. He served one term as chairman of the Service Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

Used Car Branch

The Lambert-Tigges Motor Co., 4035 Lindell boulevard, announces the openig of a used car branch at 5870 Easton avenue. A large lot adjoins the building on the west. The location is known as the Wellston branch of the company.

Graham to Make No Midseasonal Change in Models

THERE will be no midseasonal model changes in the Graham line of six and eight-cylinder cars this summer, it was announced last week at the factory in Detroit. Officials of the Gross Motor Co., St. Louis distributer, declared that it is the Graham policy to keep its cars well in advance without making midseason changes which, they said, tends to obsolete cars.

The motor car buying public, it was said, is generally at a loss during the summer months to know just what is going on.

Hugh Roberts Forms Own Company to Handle Chevrolets

The Chevrolet Motor Co. announces the appointment of the Roberts Chevrolet Co., with offices and salesrooms at 5883 Delmar boulevard, as a metropolitan dealer. Hugh Roberts, formerly of the Hilmer-Roberts Chevrolet Co., is owner and manager.

Hugh Roberts.

Roberts has had long experience in the automobile business both from a retail and manufacturing standpoint, starting at Little Rock, Ark., as a retail Buick salesman in 1912, he came to the St. Louis branch of the Chevrolet Motor Co. in 1923, and was shortly made chief supervisor of the accounting department. In 1925 he was transferred to the Dallas, Tex., branch as a sales promotion representative. Returning to St. Louis in 1926 he became successively city accounting manager, zone accounting manager and regional accounting manager.

Once more, in 1928, he was promoted, becoming assistant general manager of the accounting division at Detroit. In January, 1929, he became a member of the Hilmer-Roberts company.

Kingsford-Smith To Try Westward Flight Over Atlantic

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Fokker tri-motor, Southern Cross, waiting favorable weather for the westward Atlantic flight by Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, in his effort to be the first to fly from Europe to the United States, is the second oldest tri-motor in the world, according to Anthony H. G. Fokker, its designer and builder. Admiral Byrd's Fokker, the Josephine Ford, is which he flew to the North Pole, was the first.

A cable received by Fokker in New York from the factory in Amsterdam, where the Southern Cross was reconditioned for the flight, states that despite the ship's four years of age and service from the Arctic to the Antipodes, the cost of such replacements and repairs as were necessary was under 20,000 Dutch guilders, or about $8000 at the current rate of exchange.

Draft Deflectors on Motor Cars Permit Opened Windows

A device known as the Dole draft deflector, which may be attached to the windows of closed automobiles, and which provides further ventilation for these models, is being distributed in St. Louis by H. C. Merry, Inc., 3920 Lindell boulevard.

The deflectors are similar to windshield wings and permit the windows to be kept open, enabling the driver to use arm signals, and have a clear view to the right and left, according to H. C. Merry, president of the company. The deflectors also have the appearance of being built into the car.

Fleet of Cars for Undertaking Establishment

City of New York Buys $15,000 Auto For Mayor Walker

NEW YORK, June 14.—In an automobile fit for a King. That's how Mayor Walker, New York's chief executive, will travel from now on.

Gotham's dapper executive has discarded his old green-and-black Cadillac for a new $15,000 Duesenberg town car. The new car is in jet black with chrome plated wheels and tan upholstery, and was designed especially for the fastidious J. J. It will bear the official five-starred shield of the Mayor of New York and the license number of 7-1.

Jimmy's Duesenberg has a 265-horsepower engine and will do 90 miles per hour in second gear—which should be fast enough to get him to work or play ahead of time if he wishes.

Nash Sales Official Speaks at Dealer Meeting in St. Louis

C. L. Mason, assistant general sales manager of the Nash Motor Co., was a visitor in St. Louis last Monday. He conferred with Frank C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co., the local distributor, and also addressed a meeting of the metropolitan dealers, discussing retail sales problems. Mason declared that the outlook for June in the automobile business is favorable.

Circus Motorized, Travels on Trucks Carrying Animals

Elephants, lions and monkeys riding on balloon tires, performers living and traveling in "bungalows" mounted on General Motors trucks, the "big top" with its poles and all of its accessories speeding from city to city on sturdy tractor-trailer units, all are a part of the vastly changed picture of circus transportation today.

It is a change initiated by the complete motorizing of the Gentry Brothers circus, with every bit of the circus equipment and all animals, workmen, and performers transported and housed on some 75 General Motor trucks of many different capacities, each specially equipped for its purpose.

It is good news to American boyhood, whether aged 7 or 70, because the huge economies and greater mobility effected by the new system bids fair to save the circus as an institution, the existence of which has been seriously threatened by competition from many modern sources.

New '6' and '8' Are Introduced By Hupmobile

Latter Is Brand-New Series, Lowest-Priced "Eight" in Company's History.

The lowest priced eight-cylinder car in its history and a new six-cylinder series are announced by the Hupp Motor Car Corporation. The cars are on view at the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., local Hupmobile distributer. Addition of these two series brings the total of Hupmobile products to five separate lines of cars—one in the six and four in the eight-cylinder class.

The two new cars, named after illustrious predecessors, are known as the Century Eight and Century Six. The new eight develops 90 horsepower and a speed of 75 miles an hour, while the six boasts of 70 horsepower and a speed of like figure. The new Century Eight follows out Hupmobile's straight eight construction with high compression cylinder head, and develops an unusual flow of power throughout its entire speed range. Its acceleration abilities include from 5 to 50 miles an hour in 20 seconds. Mechanically, the new six generally follows out the design lines of the former Century Six, but develops more speed and considerably greater horsepower as well as a faster getaway.

Both Have Six Body Styles.

In both the new eight and six series there are six body styles, including the five-passenger, four-door sedan, convertible cabriolet, five-passenger phaeton, commercial coupe, coupe with rumble seat and roadster with rumble seat.

Price ranges of the new Century eight, in addition to being the lowest ever made by the company on this type of product, again bring to purchasers a Hupmobile car definitely within the $1300 price field. Prices for this series at the factory are: Commercial coupe, $1345; coupe with rumble seat, $1395; sedan, $1395; convertible cabriolet, $1450; phaeton, $1450, and roadster, $1475.

In the new six-cylinder series prices range from $1145 for the commercial coupe to $1275 for the roadster. Other model prices are $1195 for the four-door sedan, $1195 for the coupe with rumble seat, $1250 for the five-passenger phaeton, and $1250 for the cabriolet.

One of the outstanding features of the new Century six and Century eight models is the wide variety of color combinations offered. Through a special manufacturing arrangement any color combination that is standard on the Century six is optional to the buyer of the Century eight and vice versa.

In designing both models, Hupp engineers have again brought new and graceful lines to these Century cars, establishing new precedents in body style and construction, as was true of their illustrious predecessors.

An Interesting Fact.

For the construction and maintenance of highways in the United States upwards of 44,000,000 barrels of cement, valued at about $120,000,000, are used annually. To produce this huge quantity, work is provided for 60,000 people.

countries today as in the past," said one export manager. "Outside of this country and Canada, there are very few manufacturers of other countries in a position to compete with us because quantity production is not on their manufacturing menu. With the exception of a number of British manufacturing concerns, and only one or two in France, most European manufacturers make, comparatively, such a small number of cars that they cannot compete with our prices, even after we add duty, transportation cost and other expense."

Beginning July 1 the executive and sales offices of Durant Motors, Inc., will be located in Lansing, Mich. They are now in Detroit. The purchasing and engineering divisions, also will soon be removed to Lansing as soon as available room has beeen made for them.

Vacation Motor Trip Leads to Cape Cod Area of New England

new link in the Roosevelt Highway system saves about 10 miles and is decidedly picturesque. At Queensboro Lake it connects with another new road, known as the Popolopen Gorge Route, which runs through a deep, rugged chasm banked by mountains. The road is more than 700 feet above the river at its highest point and affords good views of the surrounding country.

At the traffic circle one bears to the right and passes about 1000 feet onto the Bear Mountain Bridge. This immense structure is 2257 feet long. The length of the central span alone is 1682 feet. It is suspended from two huge towers 355 feet high, by two cables.

Good Views of Hudson.

The bridge which is normally open to traffic day and night, was built to afford a quick way to cross the Hudson. The views up and down the river from the bridge are exceptional and every motorist making the trip should pause to enjoy them.

Almost immediately after crossing the bridge the traveler turns right over the Bear Mountain Bridge Highway, which is built for almost its entire length of three and one-half miles, directly above the river. At "Inspiration Point," the roadway reaches a height of 410 feet above the river. Excellent panoramic views of the countryside may be had from here.

Leaving the Bridge Highway, one fololws a well-defined hard-surfaced highway to the Bronx River Parkway Extension, and crosses Annsville Creek by means of the causeway and trestle bridge, following the concrete highway on the other side to Highland avenue in Peekskill. This is a short but scenic drive.

One follows Main street out to Lake Mahopac, a water resort. A visit to some of the small islands in the lake should prove interesting.

Bent on reaching Cape Cod, however, the traveler again journeys on Route 6 through Carmel and Brewster across the Connecticut State line into Danbury, the natural gateway to New England. Danbury is also a famous hat center.

Site of French Encampment.

From Danbury motor to Waterbury, a brass manufacturing city. During the Revolutionary War, French troops camped on the city green, en route to join Washington's forces. A monument now marks the site.

Continue from Waterbury to Willimantic, where are some of the largest thread mills in the country, and on into Providence, capital of Rhode Island. The State-house at Providence is a beautiful building, with the largest marble dome in America.

Leaving Providence, the motorist drives eastward through Taunton and Middleboro to Plymouth, on Cape Cod, where the Pilgrims landed, Dec. 21, 1620, on the Mayflower. Plymouth Rock is in its original position under a granite portico. Another point of historical interest is Pilgrim Hall, which houses many relics of the early settlers.

An excellent highway runs from Plymouth around the Cape to the other resorts which have varied attractions.

BLACK RIVER SECTION MAY BE REACHED VIA SCENIC HIGHWAY 61

the junction of No. 70 with No. 21, and one travels on southward. No. 21 follows a ridge from which exceptional panoramas may be obtained on either side. At one point in particular it seems as though you are high on top of a mountain, with rolling hills and wooded horizons sweeping off in the distance.

And so to Lesterville or, perhaps, to one of the country roads which turn off toward the river a mile or so this side of Lesterville.

For the return trip, by way of variety, Route 21 may be taken to Arcadia where, instead of striking eastward to Fredericktown, the state road through Bismarck to Flat River may be used. This route strikes No. 61 at Flat River. Another way to get back to St. Louis lies over No. 21 through Potosi and Desoto. Highway 21 is usually well maintained with, of course, some dust to be put up with.

Such a circle tour as has been outlined has all the advantages of good roads, with pleasant scenery on the way and a delightful Ozark section at the end of the trip.

First Ruxton Comes Off Assembly Line Of Moon Motor Co.

The first Ruxton to be built entirely in the factory of the Moon Motor Car Co. here came off the assembly line last Monday and from now on production will be speeded up until the peak is attained the latter part of June, according to J. E. Roberts, general manager of the company. Dealer shipments started during the week.

Roberts announced that initial production models include a roadster, five-passenger sedan, cabriolet and sport touring car. He added that demand for the Ruxton front-drive car is growing and, in fact, is exceeding early expectations.

Bantam Austin to Make Appearance Here on June 28

Will Be Distributed by Central States Motors, 3145 Locust.

St. Louisans are expected to get their first glimpse of the new bantam Austin car, patterned after the famous English small car, but strictly American built, on June 28, L. P. Hambuechen, president of Central States Motors, 3145 Locust boulevard, which has been selected to distribute the Austins in this territory, said yesterday that he expects to receive the first shipment of cars some time next week.

The Butler (Pa.) factory of the American Austis Car Co. is running at top speed in order to fill the more than 170,000 orders contracted for by distributers all over the country, Hambuechen declared. The advance contracts, totaling more than $75,000,000 at retail prices, are believed to constitute a record for a newcomer in the American automobile industry.

Advance models shown to dealers and newspaper men at the New York and Chicago automobile shows revealed a distinct departure in design from other small-car makes. While a mechanical duplicate in many respects of the English Austin, the car comes to America in an entirely new dress. The exact appearance of the bantam car is being kept a secret, but it is known that a coupe, a roadster and a commercial delivery car are in production. Those who have seen the car say it combines beauty, comfort and utility of design.

Complete specifications of the new Austin have not been announced, but the following details are known: The car will be 16 inches narrower and 28 inches shorter than any standard car now on the American market. Weighing but 1130 pounds, the Austin will permit an unusual economy of operation, the combined cost of gasoline, oil and tires being less than ¾ of a cent a mile. The car will sell for less than $450.

Central States Motors, the St. Louis distributer of the Austin, was recently organized by Hambuechen to take over the distribution of Franklins. Hambuechen is widely known in local automobile circles and has surrounded himself with a capable organization, not only to market the Franklin, but in anticipation of the coming of the Austin.

Federal Announces Low-Priced Truck With 1-Ton Chassis

A newcomer in the one to and a half ton field is announced by the Federal Motor Truck Co. and is on display in St. Louis. It is the model D, a four-cylinder truck that combines speed, appearance and economy with low cost. The price of $830 for the standard chassis is the lowest in Federal's 20 years of truck building.

The all-truck construction and modern design of the model D makes it a practical unit of transportation. It is asserted that the model successfully combines the essentials of light, fast transportation with the endurance qualities of the heavy-duty models.

The new model D is powered by a L-head engine developing 47 horsepower at 2500 r. p. m. It is low-hung and combines good looks with an appearance of sturdiness. It exemplifies the trend toward distinctiveness in design. The front view is enhanced by the bright chromium-plated radiator, the large head-lamps supported by tie bars connecting the two front fenders and the heavy channel steel bumper supported by brackets built integral with the chassis frame. The shapely cowl, stylish louvres and colorful finish impart a definite touch of style to the entire unit.

"TOUCHING-UP" may be all your car needs to bring back its original beauty. We can "touch up" the worn or chipped off parts to match the rest of your car. This will save both time and money.

Roaring River Park, Gift of St. Louisan, Opened to Visitors

Roaring River State Park in Barry County, Southwestern Missouri, opened officially last week with all accommodations available to visitors for the first time since the 2400-acre tract was given to the State by Dr. T. M. Sayman of St. Louis, in December, 1928. The park is expected to prove popular not only with Missourians but with tourists from Arkansas, Oklahoma and other states in the Southwest.

Twenty cabins, many of them modern with running water and electric lights, have been renovated and repainted. The dining hall, which serves also as a shelter and a recreational center of the park, has ben leased and is being operated this season.

Roaring River Park is considered one of the most picturesque spots in the State park system. It is reached off Missouri Highway No. 44 about eight miles south of Cassville, or off Highway No. 37 through Seligman.

A concrete swimming pool fed by spring water is a feature. Camping accommodations are adequate.

At St. Louis Airfields

Optimistic reports from airline operators on recent business has cheered the industry generally, and prospects are now brighter than at any previous time during the year. T. A. T. Maddux Airlines reports a record month and week during May. A total of 5474 passengers was carried during the month, and in the final week the number was 1431. A substantial increase in traffic has been shown each month this year, the total for the months being 19,307 passengers. The largest percentage of travel is on the eastern division through St. Louis.

American Airways, of which the Universal Aviation Corporation is subsidiary, showed a substantial increase in passenger travel during May, carrying 6935 persons. The total for five months was 27,-235 passengers. Because of the general demand for air service, the schedule of Universal Airlines is being rearranged, and additional planes will be in operation this week. The additional service will be between St. Louis and Chicago, and Cleveland, Chicago and Kansas City.

Air mail over the St. Louis routes also increased during May. On the St. Louis-Kansas City-Omaha route the total was 15,828 pounds, compared with 14,741 in April. St. Louis-to-Chicago the total was 4257, compared with 4719 the previous month. The tonnage for the entire country during May was 887,053, an increase of 15,662 over April. Interstate Airlines, operating from St. Louis to Evansville, Ind., reports an increase in poundage of more than 50 per cent since the inauguration of a night schedule several months ago.

Road to Airport Paved.

The newly paved Natural Bridge road provides a much needed direct thoroughfare to Lambert-St. Louis Field. The hard-surfaced highway brings the airport many minutes closer to St. Louis.

Universal Moves Offices.

The general offices of Universal Airlines have been moved from Boatmen's Bank Building to an office building at Lambert-St. Louis Field. Only a ticket office will be maintained downtown. Officers of the company explained that the move, in addition to being an economy measure, is in recognition of the excellent improvements installed at the airport by the city under the bond issue program.

Improvements Completed.

The improvement of the west side of Lambert-St. Louis Field has been completed. The new main entrance, including a triangular flower plot, was opened today. The service road, running the length of the hangars, is in use, and a surfaced parking area has been provided for spectators' machines. Extension of runways and other work on the landing field is planned. When the bond issue program is completed St. Louis will have a flying field equal to any in the country.

Four Robins Ordered.

The Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., delivered an OX-Robin to a purchaser last week and has orders for four Robins to be filled this week. Two of the ships were ordered by a concern in Butte, Mont.

To Build Guard Hangar.

The contract for the new $75,-000 National Guard hangar will be let by the city June 24. The old air unit hangars will be taken over by the Robertson Airplane Service Co., which will build a passenger depot for T. A. T.-Maddux Airlines, according to present plans. The Robertson Co. services T. A. T.-Maddux ships locally.

New Uniforms for Curtiss Crew.

Curtiss-Wright Flying Service employes have donned new uniforms. Pilots wear olive drab trousers and shirts, and sales personnel appear in orange colored jackets and berets.

Students Enrolled.

Chris A. Sandidge, Owensboro, Ky., enrolled last week for the limited commercial flying ccurse at the Von Hoffman School, and Harold Stewart, French Guich, Cal., signed up for a complete mechanic's course. James Stuart, a former Von Hoffman student, flew here from Owensboro, Ky., to visit instructors at the school.

Tax on Planes Proposed.

A proposed ordinance introduced in the Board of Aldermen Friday would place a tax of 5 cents a gallon on all gasoline sold at Lambert-St. Louis Field, and would tax companies operating sight-seeing planes 5 per cent of their gross revenue for use of the airport.

Operating concerns would also be required to post a bond to protect the city against damage suits resulting from injury to passengers. The bill was introduced by Alderman A. H. Niederluecke at the request of Comptroller Nolte, who said the provisions are in line with requirements at municipal airports in other cities.

Under the temporary arrangement now in effect, companies operating at te airport pay a nominal ground rental. The revenue is not sufficient to meet the expenses of maintaining the field.

Graduates Get Jobs.

Two transport flight graduates of the Universal Flying School and four welders obtained positions during the week thrcugh the school's employment bureau.

James Garrard, transport pilot, was placed as co-pilot with Southwest Air Fast Express, St. Louis to Dallas. David Goss became a sales representative for an airplane concern at Kansas City. The welders obtained jobs with a pipe concern at Baltimore, Md.

Lights for Steinberg Airport.

Additicnal lighting equipment was installed during the week at Curtiss-Steinberg Airport. The equipment includes six additional floodlights to augment the 4,000,-000 candlepower Sperry floodlight recently installed.

New Instructor in Charge.

Capt. Armin F. Herald, Air Service, has taken charge as instructor for the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service, succeeding Capt. Harry H. Young, who goes to Langley Field.

Golden Wedding Trip by Air.

Having eloped on foot 50 years ago, August Block, 77 years old, of Jennings, St. Louis County, and his wife are going to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the event today with an airplane trip to Chicago.

31 Pilots Register.

Thirty-one visiting pilots registered at Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week, including Capt. Frank Hawks, whose last visit to St. Louis was made in his towed glider.

Graduated As Pilot.

William A. Hinds of St. Louis was graduated from the Universal Flying School as a transport pilot.

Endurance Flight Test.

The Hunter brothers' foursome started in pursuit of the refueling record at Chicago last Wednesday. John and Kenneth are in the endurance ship "City of Chicago," while Albert and Walter, the latter a St. Louis mail pilot on furlough, are manning the refueler.

Glider-Pilot Licenses.

Three classes of glider pilot licenses are provided for under amendments to the Air Commerce regulations. The classes are student, non-commercial, and commercial pilot. No physical or written examination is required for a student's license. Non-commercial permits will be issued following a flight test, while commercial licenses require both a physical and flight test.

Business Men Fly.

Members of the newly organized business men's aviation course took their first flight from Curtiss-Steinberg Airport last week. A luncheon and an interesting talk on aviation preceded the flight.

$35 for Flushing.

It costs $35 for water to flush the 2000-foot concrete apron at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Inspects Airport.

J. A. B. Smith, executive vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, inspected local Curtiss-Wright activities last week. "Casey" Jones of Curtiss-Wright Flying Service is expected here for the dedication of Curtiss-Steinberg Airport June 28.

Fourteen Visit Steinberg Airport.

Among the 14 pilots visiting Curtiss-Steinberg Airport during the week was G. A. Phelps of the National Continental Aviation Insurance Association of Davenport, Ia.

Buick Marquette

THE BUICK MOTOR COMPANY
the appointment of
WILLCOCKSON BUICK CO.
Salesroom, 3900 West Pine Service Station, 3901 Laclede
as an Authorized Buick-Marquette Dealer

The Buick Motor Company takes pleasure in announcing the appointment of the Willcockson Buick Company as an Authorized Buick-Marquette Dealer in St. Louis.

Mr. W. H. Willcockson, formerly secretary and general manager of Vesper-Buick Auto Co., distributors of Buick cars for a number of years, will be in personal charge of the new organization.

The appointment of Willcockson Buick Company is in line with Buicks policy of providing such facilities as will insure complete owner satisfaction, throughout the long period of usefulness traditional with these cars. As in the past, the company's building, equipment and personnel will bring to Buick and Marquette owners the same fine parts and repair service.

For the further benefit of owners, these extensive facilities will be supplemented by those of the Buick factory zone headquarters in St. Louis, thus making doubly certain the type of owner satisfaction which has won for Buick more than twice as many buyers as any other car priced above $1200.

Remember, extra service is a part of the value you get when you invest your money in a Buick or Marquette car. Thousands of authorized service stations—each identified by the familiar blue and white sign—hold out their assurance of competent aid, no matter where you go.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

DESIGNED PROGRESSIVELY

REGARDLESS of price, quality in materials, or workmanship, a motor car must be given the initial advantage of correct design if it is to prove satisfactory in the hands of owners.

That is why Olds Motor Works has brought together a most capable engineering staff. That is why Olds Motor Works has given these men the finest of equipment and the most complete of laboratories in which to work. That is why Olds Motor Works places emphasis first of all, and always, upon progressive design in Oldsmobile and Viking.

It is evident that in order to obtain full advantages from this advanced and basically sound design, workmanship must be of the highest character. It must be uniform and consistent in quality. It must be faithful to the point of idealism. That is why Oldsmobile-Viking workers follow the rule expressed by this pledge, "Anything short of my best is not acceptable."

Any Oldsmobile or Viking owner will tell you what these things mean when interpreted in terms of performance, comfort, dependability, and long life.

If you are interested in a car in any but the very lowest or the highest price classes, come and judge Oldsmobile and Viking. Drive them over roads of your own choosing. You will then know the advantages that inevitably result from progressive design and faithful manufacture.

Federal Announces Low-Priced Truck With 1-Ton Chassis

A newcomer in the one to on and a half ton field is announced by the Federal Motor Truck Co. and is on display in St. Louis. It is the model D, a four-cylinder truck that combines speed, appearance and economy with low cost. The price of $830 for the standard chassis is the lowest in Federal's 20 years of truck building.

The all-truck construction and modern design of the model D makes it a practical unit of transportation. It is asserted that this model successfully combines the essentials of light, fast transportation with the endurance qualities of the heavy-duty models.

The new model powered by an L-head engine developing 47½ horsepower at 2500 r. p. m. It is low-hung and combines good looks with an appearance of sturdiness. It exemplifies the trend toward distinctiveness in design. The front view is enhanced by the high, chromium-plated radiator, the large head-lamps supported by tie bars connecting the tw. front fenders and the heavy channel steel bumper supported by brackets built integral with the chassis frame. The shapely cowl, stylish louvres and colorful finish impart a definite touch of style to the entire unit.

What's New In Radio Industry

Geller Says St. Louis Has Good Chance to Get Next R. M. A. Trade Show—Hefter to Be Zenith District Manager — Scholarships and Tours for Students Offered by Sparton—Bosch Dealers See New Sets.

Improvements and Refinements in New Bosch Sets.

The new Bosch receivers were shown to a number of dealers Friday night at a dinner given at the Forest Park Hotel by James C. Gordon, head of the James C. Gordon Co., Inc., distributer. Another feature of the meeting was the showing of a movie film depicting the merchandising of radio from the factory to the consumer and details of the Bosch merchandising plan.

There are five tuning condensers in these new Bosch sets, to give exceptional selectivity over the whole broadcast band. A fine line of light is cast across the tuning dial to show exactly where any given station comes in best. The tuning scale is carefully graduated in kilocycles, so that stations can be easily found from a log or newspaper program listings.

Four screen grid tubes are used in the chassis installed in the "A" and "B" type consoles, while there are five screen grid valves in the de luxe models. The latter have full automatic volume control, a tone selector that emphasizes bass or treble as desired, a speaker mute for quiet tuning when passing over stations, and an electrical tuning meter which indicates when a station is tuned in to the point of finest reception.

There are four models all done in rare woods and each of distinctive design. All have push pull amplification, using the 45-type tubes, and extra large electro dynamic speakers.

St. Louis has an excellent chance to get the national radio trade show in June, 1931, according to H. W. Geller, president of the Geller, Ward & Hassner Hardware Co., who is president of the St. Louis Convention Publicity Bureau. Geller has just returned from Atlantic City, where, with W. P. Mackie, executive secretary of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association, and Ben Brinkman of The Arena Association, he invited the Radio Manufacturers' Association to hold the show here next June.

Geller said that the association's show committee promised to visit St. Louis to inspect The Arena and hotel facilities.

Philco Dealers' Banquet.

The annual banquet of Philco dealers in this territory is set for 6:30 tomorrow evening in the Italian Gardens, Hotel Chase. Officers of the Artophone Corporation will be host.

Sparton Offers Scholarships and European Tours to Pupils.

Scholarships or an equal number of extensive European tours with all expenses paid have just been made available to students between the ages of 12 and 19 years by Capt. William Sparks, president of the Sparton Radio Organization. Awards, Sparks said, will be made on the basis of points earned through educational work in contact with the public, and will be operative from June 15 to April 15, 1931. Scholarship headquarters will be established in all cities and towns in this country this month, Sparks stated.

Philco to Make Transitone Auto Receivers.

Transitone automobile receivers are to be manufactured by the Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. and distributed through Philco and Transitone distributers, as a result of a working agreement just effected between the company making Philco sets and the Automobile Radio Corporation. Transitone auto sets have been on the market for two years. Transitone is said to hold basic patents on the use of receivers in motor cars.

E. G. Hefter District Manager for Zenith.

The appointment of E. G. Hefter, well known on St. Louis radio row, as district manager for the Zenith Radio Corporation of Chicago is announced. Hefter was president and general manager of the Great Western Auto Supply Co. for nine years to 1928 and recently manager of the radio division of the Fuchs Appliance Co.

He will make his headquarters here for the present, contacting dealers in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee. The Lindemann-Hoffer Co., Inc., is local Zenith distributer.

The new Zenith receivers have a nine-tube chassis, using three screen grid tubes and having double push pull audio amplification. Cabinets are authentic reproductions of Tudor designs. Selected walnut, birch and red gum woods are combined with Australian maple butt and Italian olive burl woods.

Service Club Formed.

The Missouri Radio Club, Inc., has been organized to furnish radio receiver service throughout the St. Louis metropolitan area. Its officers are: Roy W. Owens, president; Edward Brillault, vice president; Hugh K. Wagner, secretary-treasurer. Archie W. Kehr is general manager.

Here and There on the Air

St. Louis to Be Honored in Westinghouse Salute Broadcast July 1—KMOX Gets Extension of Construction Permit for 50,000 Watt Station to July 1—Lutheran Hour on a Country-wide Chain Planned for Fall—WLW to Broadcast Another Steamer Race on Ohio River—John Kiburz, Flute Player in St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, to Play over KMOX at 3:30 Today.

A SALUTE to the City of St. Louis, "its achievements of the past, the present and the future"—will be the feature of the Westinghouse broadcast the evening of July 1 over KWK and 32 other NBC stations. Westinghouse will picture St. Louis as the hub of America, two states away from the Canadian border on the North and the Gulf on the South, and five states from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts on the East and West.

The vast resources of raw material close at hand to St. Louis manufacturers, the web of railway systems available for speedy distribution, and the cheap power and skilled labor necessary for efficient manufacturing will be emphasized in this program.

The music of a St. Louis composer, Ernest R. Kroeger, will be heard by listeners of this broadcast. Incidental music by the ensemble and orchestra will be under the direction of T. J. Vastine and Victor Sudik, both employes of the Westinghouse at Pittsburg, Pa.

KMOX Notes—John Kiburz, first flute of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will play over KMOX this afternoon at 3:30, during the Community Forum broadcast. His program will include "Andante and Scherzo" (Granne), "Chrysaliz" (Neville), "Danse des Satyre" (Le Thiere) and "Minuet," from Sonata No. 4 (Bach). Grace Terhune, soprano, will sing "Father" (Marsden), "Brilliant Bird," from "Pearl of Brazil," with flute obligato, "Estrellita" and "The Answer" (Terry). Miss Minnie Alper, district superintendent at the Beaumont office of the Provident Association, will explain how the association carries on its work among needy families. • • • The Temple Orchestra, a group of 22 musicians from St. Joseph, Mo., will broadcast at 5 today. Their program includes "Coronation March" (Kretchmar), "In a Monastery Garden" and "The Sacred Hour" (Ketelby), "Adagio Pathetique" (Godard) and "The Golden Dragon" (King). There will be a trumpet duet and a violin solo. Members of the orchestra have been playing together for 13 years. They are under the direction of Willis C. Maupin, who was a member of Pryor's Band. • • • A male chorus directed by Clay Ballew will sing Wednesday night at 9 o'clock. There will be bass and tenor solos by William Wahlert and Webster Schmidt, and the program will close with Washington University's "Fight" song. • • • Franklyn Greenwood, Chicago baritone, will sing old-time favorites, with guitar accompaniment. • • • A dramatized version of Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine" will be broadcast Monday at 9:30 p. m.

KFUO Notes.—The station will broadcast frequently this week from the floor of the convention of the Wesern District of the Lutheran Church, which will be held in the auditorium of Concordia Seminary, Monday to Friday. Listeners may tune in the opening service of the convention Monday at 2 p. m. News reports on the convention will be broadcast on the evening programs. J. Sebald, Kansas City, will play the organ over KFUO at 7:15 a. m. on the Morning Meditation program, Tuesday to Friday. Zither music will be broadcast Wednesday at 9:30 p. m.. KFUO has yielded its 7:30 p. m. period on Friday to KSD so will be on the air at 9 p. m.

John Kiburz.

A new series of Maxwell House broadcasts will begin at 7:30 next Thursday night under the direction of Willard Robison, song writer, conductor and singer.

Brad Reynolds of St. Joseph, Mo., is a member of the newly formed Rountowners Quartet which sings on the Forty Fathom Trawlers and Ward's Tip Top Club programs. He has a lyric tenor voice capable of a D in altissimo.

The American School of the Air, which was sponsored by the Columbia System and the Grigsby-Grunow Co and closed for the summer vacation, is conducting a series of nature study broadcasts at 1:30 p. m. Fridays over the CBS chain. These programs are primarily intended for summer camps.

An hour long "Chicago Variety" series over the CBS net will begin at 9:30 Tuesday night, WBBM, Chicago, serving as the key station. Waring's Pennsylvanians orchestra, Tom Gerun's Californians orchestra, Al and Pete and Charlie Straight's orchestra will take part.

"The American Golfer," which will feature golf lessons by Alex Morrison, began Friday night and will be a weekly CBS chain feature.

A running account of the Yale-Harvard boat races on the Thames River at New London, Conn., will be broadcast by the CBS chain next Friday, at 8 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. Ted Husing will be the chief announcer.

An Ohio River race between the Steamers Betsy Ann and Tom Greene will be broadcast by WLW and a number of NBC Blue chain stations Saturday, June 28. Last year WLW broadcast an account of a race between the two craft from Cincinnati to Richmond, O., which was won by the Tom Greene by a mere 20 feet.

Brewster Stickney, son of Joseph L. Stickney, a war correspondent, who stood beside Admiral Dewey on the bridge of the flagship Olympia during the battle of Manila Bay, will impersonate his father in a dramatization of the sea fight that will be broadcast by WLW at 3 p. m. next Sunday.

A weekly national Lutheran Hour broadcast is to go on a country-wide chain this fall. It will be sponsored by the I. L. L., which grants an annual subsidy to KFUO, St. Louis.

KMOX has been granted an extension until July 1 of time in which to complete construction of its new 50,000 watt transmitter on a site near the junction of Baumgartner and Lemay Ferry roads, St. Louis County. It has been understood that the Columbia chain, which now controls KMOX, planned to put the super power station on the air for the frist time July 4.

A series of 15-minute discussion of phases of education and culture is being broadcast at 3 p. m. over an NBC chain headed by WJZ. Judge William L. Ransom, acting president of the American Society of Political Science, was the first speaker last Thursday. Dr. Arthur E. Bestor, president of the Chautauqua Institution, will talk at the same hour tomorrow. Mrs. John Henry Hammond will speak Thursday, June 12.

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, and six men and women of distinction in music and the fine arts, have accepted membership on the National Committee which will sponsor the Fourth National Radio Audition. The Atwater Kent Foundation announces that the committee, in addition to Dr. Frank, will include: Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer; Mme. Louise Homer, famed contralto; Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, patroness of opera; Mrs. Elmer James Ottaway, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs; Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the famous prima donna, and Reinald Werrenrath, baritone.

Radio Board Refuses To Renew License of Dr. Brinkley's Station

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Apparently emboldened by its success in eliminating KVEP, Portland, Ore., because of its alleged use of viturperative and profane speeches, the Federal Radio Commission refuses to renew the license of KFKB, Milford, Kan., charged by the American Medical Association, the Kansas Medical Association and others with broadcasting quack medical information.

Accordingly, unless Attorney George Strong, son of Representative James G. Strong, of Blue Rapids, Kan., can obtain an injunction to prevent it, the station must go off the air at the expiration of its present license period, next Friday, June 20.

Two members of the commission, former Chairman Robinson and Judge Sykes, voted against the majority ruling Dr. John R. Brinkley and his station off the air. The majority rendered the decision without opinion. The minority let it be known that they had urged retention of the station if its operators would agree to quit prescribing patent medicines to persons writing in about their ailments.

Hearings in the Brinkley case lasted nearly a week when held here last month. Medical authorities testified that the sex rejuvenation operations performed by Dr. Brinkley and advertised by radio were spurious. Testimony was introduced to show that the patent medicines he prescribed were distributed through his own agencies to his great profit.

Attorney Strong indicated immediately that the case would be appealed, on the ground that the commission was exercising censorship over broadcast material, contrary to a specific prohibition in the radio act.

The commission apparently followed the precedent it set in the KVEP case in which it summarily ruled the station off the air after a hearing because of the character of its broadcasts, and was upheld by the Court of Appeals here when an injunction was sought by the station's owner.

CBS Appoints Correspondent in Capital of Britain

Tariff Barriers in Way Of Early Realization Of U. S. of Europe

By Edouard Herriot,
Former Premier of France.
(Copyright, 1930).

PARIS, June 14.

A LITTLE more than a month has elapsed since Briand published his memorandum concerning the European federation. This memorandum which covered 16 pages has caused a deal of ink to flow. The reception given the project put forward by the great French pacifist can readily be understood.

What Briand proposes—he is very often misunderstood—is not to create an organization which will conflict with the League of Nations but an organization which will help the workings of the League by bringing the countries of Europe in closer harmony with one another, by bringing order out of the present chaos. He states this very precisely. There can be no doubt concerning the aim which he has in view. His memorandum, then, should have the support of all who believe in the League of Nations and who desire the League to continue to make progress and those who having seen the checks given to projects which were too vast, are ready to approach those problems a little at a time and not to risk failure by considering them in the abstract and as a whole.

Tariff Barriers in the Way.

Let us consider these matters with an open mind. Why did the recent conference at Geneva which held the purpose of considering the customs situation produce so little in results in comparison with the International Economic Conference of 1927? The answer is very simple. The tariff laws of a country resume and represent its historic traditions, its economic constitution, the condition of its agriculture and history, its present and future needs, and even its fears for very often certain industries are protected purely because of their utility in time of war. Do you suppose that nations will suppress their customs barriers in the name of an idea which is more moral than political when these nations have not yet agreed upon a security pact? Let us not fool ourselves. Let us be pacifists but not dreamers.

The reduction in the tariff duties mentioned in the memorandum cannot be hoped for at once. That will come later. It will follow and not precede the economic organization and rationalization of production and means of transportation in the countries of Europe. This will take considerable time. We must first put in order our houses in this old continent which has been so badly shaken by the recent war. We will not go so far as to say that success is certain—that would be assuming too much. We shall content ourselves by simply stating that if the political and social leaders of Europe do not accept and collaborate in this work, if they continue to criticise instead of putting their shoulders to the wheel, there is a great danger of each country isolating itself and working only for its individual aims, a movement which seems to be gaining force each day. If this comes to pass we shall have to abandon forever any thoughts of universal peace.

Herriot's View of Briand Plan.

For my part, I am very thankful to Briand for having formulated his very simple and very modest plan. I thank him also for having outlined the manner in which the questions are to be studied: first, national economy (control of labor unions, trusts; examination of the customs question); second, economic factors; third, transportation facilities; fourth, finance (credits and questions pertaining to money matters); fifth, labor (unemployment and immigration); sixth, hygiene; seventh, intellectual co-operation; eighth, interparliamentary relations.

Even more modest are my demands than those of Briand. I will explain. In his memorandum he quite naturally provides for the establishment of a committee which shall be charged with the organization of a future European conference under the direction of the League of Nations. Let us refute at once the wicked charge that France is trying to obtain control of Europe. Briand in his project, proposes that a representative of each country take turns as President of the conference. I would not even request as does Briand in his memorandum that this European committee be restricted to "political" members.

Experts, Not Politicians, Needed.

I should like to see technicians, not politicians, preside at the first meetings of this European committee and over the work of the various subcommittees which shall be organized. For before going into the question of the economic factors, transportation facilities, labor, etc., there are a great many technical problems to be solved. Each year conferences are held for the purpose of discussing technical questions concerning roads, rivers, etc., which usually end in disagreement. Why not let us settle these technical questions first? In settling these questions alone we have already before us a very big task. If we attempt to federate the countries of Europe at a single blow, we shall find ourselves up against very big difficulties, for the desire for federation is not yet in the hearts of the majority of the people of Europe, and to accomplish in fact what has not yet taken hold of the imagination is very difficult indeed. Should we attempt this, we shall find opposed to us phantoms of tragedy, old prejudices, old hates, old illusions which have been built up in our minds and hearts over many centuries.

So there is a great deal of ground work to be done. Europe must be organized materially first. The peoples of Europe must be made to understand that the old order of things has changed, that electricity, radio and aviation have changed the status of humanity. Distance is no longer measured in miles, but by the length of time it takes to traverse it. We must work along these lines step by step. Eventually the business men and industrialists of Europe will realize that co-operation will serve their purpose and common interests and the European federation will come into being.

These are the thoughts which come into my mind on examining the criticism contained in various newspapers concerning the Briand memorandum. In spite of their interest, I have, of course, not been able to read all the criticisms. I was very much interested in the comprehensive opinions of the Spanish press; the very prudent and well-written article in the "Sol" and the measured declarations of the Liberal and ABC.

Through German Eyes.

According to the Frankfurter Zeitung of May 16, the German Government has its own ideas concerning a European federation. So much the better. We shall be glad to study their ideas as soon as they make them known to us. We shall study them not from a strictly French viewpoint, but from a sincere European viewpoint. Chancellor Bruening's speech at the banquet to foreign journalists, at which he spoke of the necessity of real disarmament, was in no way embarrassing to us democrats. From his speech and article of Hans Zehrer, printed in the Vossische Zeitung, it is quite clear that it is Germany's intention to demand a revision of the Versailles treaty as a preliminary step to any European federation. Mention also has been made of an immediate revision of frontiers. To reopen these matters will lead not to peace but to war. We shall evoke all the bloody past and Europe will again be a blazing conflagration. We feel that the newspaper Germania did not act very properly in publishing an article in its issue of May 22, stating that France proposed the Briand memorandum because she is being isolated and does not feel secure. They can combat our ideas, but they should not disfigure them. I do not think I am making a mistake in stating that France is an industrial and agricultural nation and would suffer least of all countries in Europe should there be a continuous state of anarchy in Europe. We are not trying to bargain; we are seeking a general accord. We are sincere in our statements that our project is not directed against any particular country, neither Germany, Russia nor the United States. A certain number of Americans feel that it is to their interest that the countries of Europe shall not get along well together, but no American who sees clearly can contest the fact that it is to the best interests of his country that the countries of Europe shall be economically

THE AMERICAN BUSINESS MAN

By Calvin Coolidge

Former President, After Outlining Faults of Capitalists in Their First Efforts at National Expansion, Believes That to Them Is Due the Prosperity of People in Present Generation.

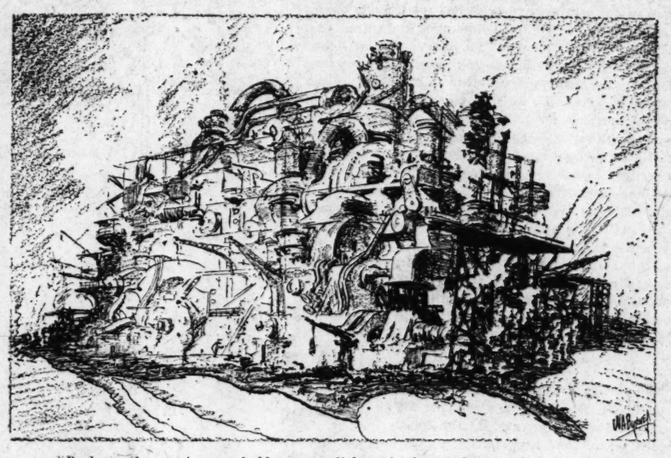
By CALVIN COOLIDGE

(Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission prohibited.)

DURING the last generation the American business man has undergone a considerable transformation. Up to that time except possibly in the field of transportation he was a local figure. He was the head of a mercantile establishment or an industry in his own town. In most instances he had founded it himself, he lived with it, he knew personally most of the people associated with him in its operation so that his relation to them had a large element of human interest and he had such a connection with the community that he was looked upon as the leading citizen of his locality. His influence was felt in the financial, social, religious and political life of his town. He was distinctly identified with the public welfare in almost all of its aspects.

When the large consolidations were effected at the beginning of this century a great change took place in the position occupied by the business man. For a time the old respect and confidence in which he had been held remained. There was even added a public pride in his accomplishments so that he was referred to as a captain of industry. But it was soon apparent that the old relationship was gone. In place of the local owner and personal friend had come the managing agent of a great diversity of owners especially intent on profits and caring little at that time for the humanities of business life.

This soon brought a change in the public attitude toward business in general and especially toward large combinations which was seized on by politicians, and the wrong-doings of a few were oftentimes ascribed to all who were attempting to develop the resources of the country in the modern way. The Government intervened with suits for the dissolution of many large combinations, restrictive laws were passed and the big business man became an object of suspicion and distrust. The public confidence that he had held and the leadership he had exercised were gone.



*"Perhaps the most remarkable accomplishment of recent years is what we term mass production. It is * * * the result of a multiplicity of conditions, the chief of which is labor-saving machinery."*

Power of Capital Not Used Wisely at First

What had happened was that a large number of men had rather suddenly come into positions of great power financially and industrially. As it was a new experience in the country the people did not understand it and oftentimes its possessors did not understand it themselves. The result was that their power was not used wisely. It sometimes tried to exert an undue influence on our political life. At other times it resorted to unfair competition. The relations with wage earners were too often unsatisfactory. Therefore, at first it was generally proposed not to make big business behave and secure from it the great public benefits it was capable of conferring, but it was to be abolished altogether.

Because of certain mistakes that had been made, certain abuses of power that had been committed it was seriously argued that business should return to antiquated methods that would have prevented the proper development of the industrial life of the nation. It would have been like casting aside the factory system and returning to the hand work of the family fireside.

This contest went on with what we can now see was unreasoning ferocity on both sides for a number of years. It was not until the war period demonstrated to the public the great service that big business was capable of performing and the leaders of industry began to reform its abuses themselves that the modern American business man really emerged.

In his emergence the business man has lost much that made him formerly an attractive character. He does not figure now as the leading citizen. The political world rarely hears of him except as a contributor to campaign funds. He does not represent any locality. He has become a technical expert in place of the all around citizen. But he has also gained much. His comprehension in his own field is broader. Oftentimes the nation is his workshop of far flung plants. He has a deeper, keener knowledge of finance and industry than that of his predecessors. His outlook is extensive, usually embracing the whole country and he is beginning in some lines to seek foreign commerce with a world vision. While he may have lost something on the civic side he has gained greatly on the economic side of life.

New Business Methods Call for New Standards

This change in character has been made necessary by a change in conditions. One man cannot know everything or do everything. Even a great genius like Franklin who lived in a much simpler age and had the advantage of a very long life yet had his limitations. Now that existence is much more complicated and movement much more swift the ordinary man does well to master even one subject. Business alone takes all most men can give. Of course our economic life has become very involved.

In the first instance it requires adequate financing. Securities must be sold and banking connections made. Plant facilities must be provided for production. Markets must be found. Advertising, transportation, insurance and taxation all have to be studied while often the most exhaustive research goes on for the improvement of the product and the decrease of the costs. In addition to all these is the now imperative demand on the humanitarian side for careful consideration of the welfare of the wage earners, for it has come to be recognized that the most important product of any industry is men and women.

New standards have arisen and new rules of conduct are observed in the financial relations of important concerns. The responsible management of our main railroad systems and leading industries operates them primarily for success in the transportation and commercial field. They are not engaged in a speculative venture in their own securities, as was often the case in the old days, when the insiders were permitted for their own profit to mislead the public. No doubt business men are pleased when their profits are such that their securities command a good price in the market, but the main effort now is to attract thoughtful investors in a sound enterprise rather than use it for a speculative purpose.

It is for this purpose that a large element of publicity has been introduced. Monthly and quarterly reports are made often showing in detail the condition of the business, stockholders are treated more like partners and reasonable requests for their information are readily granted. This does not mean that every great enterprise will be a success, but it does mean that all interested in it will have a fairly equal chance to judge of it. Candor and honesty are now employed to their full limit to give certainty and stability to the main supports of our business structure. Of course this position has not been reached by all but it has been reached by a good many and it is the ideal toward which the responsible business man is working.

Competition Is What Prevents Stagnation

Our economic life is largely competitive. People usually buy where they can secure the best bargains and sell where they receive the best prices. While there is much discussion about stabilizing business no substitute has ever been found for the necessary stimulation to progress that is the essence of competition. The proposals that have been made in that direction have in them the danger of fossilization, decay and disintegration.

Human nature has always needed the promise of some reward for exertion. But even in this field the last generation has seen a great change. While some small concerns have been closed out it has generally been because of inefficient business management rather than from unfair competition by large combinations. In fact the great industries often protect their smaller competitors by maintaining prices in time of lessened demand. Instead of attempting the ruthless destruction of a competitor the modern practice is to leave him alone or pay him a handsome price for his property.

Perhaps the most remarkable accomplishment of recent years is what we term mass production. In effect this is the doing of a large amount of work in a short time. It is not a self-existent process, but the result of a multiplicity of conditions, the chief of which is labor-saving machinery. Another element is a market capable of mass consumption. As this depends on the earning capacity of the great body of the people it requires a high wage scale. Taken all together it means the wide distribution of a product at a moderate price. One of the best examples of this is the newspaper. Without modern appliances, if it could be produced at all, it would be at a cost that could be borne only by the very rich. Now it is accessible to everybody. The same principle applies to a great variety of products.

This development has been of inestimable benefit to the wage earner from both sides. It has brought within his reach the conveniences and even luxuries of life and has greatly increased his earning power. When he was given a machine that enabled him to do the work of several persons his own importance was greatly magnified. In theory machinery displaces labor. In practice this is not true to any great extent. It increases the output but decreases the cost so that a new level in the market absorbs more of the product. The factory which can do this will employ more labor, not less. The more horse power, the more machinery we have in the country, the more chance there will be for employment at high wages. It is the enterprise of management directing the wage earner in the operation of machines that has filled the nation with automobiles, radios, moving pictures and silk stockings.

Business Man Does More For Others Than Himself

It is not so much what the American business man has done for himself that gives him a new position in the national life as what he has done for others. Wherever he has been really successful it is because he has done a great public service that has been more beneficial to the wage earners associated with him than to any other class. He has not only enabled them to earn more and more in buying power, but he has given them better health, better education, better homes and better spiritual values. If this were not true his work would be a failure.

Of course these results have not yet reached all our people but they do represent a process and plan that is very widespread. Even now in a time of considerable business recession they are still going on and in all probability the country is preparing itself in a multiplicity of ways which we do not entirely perceive or understand for another wave of economic advance.

The misfortunes of life come to all of us as individuals and will continue with us so long as we are fallible human beings, but to the people as a whole in the last generation there has come the greatest economic advance they ever made in the same space of time. It is well from time to time to consider this fact and determine whether we wish to continue in this sound, sane, successful way that is meeting the test of experience or whether we wish to discard it for some visionary experiment. Both history and reason seem to combine in testifying that we have been working in the right way toward the right solution.

Those are some of the wonders that the American business man has wrought. The structure he is building is not completed. It is only begun. But by himself he can do little. He is the brain but the flesh and bone are the wage earners. No doubt they have both made many errors and will make more but in co-operation they are working out our economic salvation. Nor are all of these together self sufficient for the complete nourishment of the body politic. We must have knowledge and religion. And to knowledge must be added wisdom, which is the informed disposition to do right. It is only by the use of all these elements that our people can hope for a progress and prosperity that will satisfy the soul of the nation.

North and South Polar Regions Differ Vastly, Admiral Byrd Found

By Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

(Copyright, 1930, by The New York Times Co. and The St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All rights for publication reserved throughout the world.)

I BELIEVE that it is difficult fully to appreciate the two ends of the earth without flying over large areas of the Arctic Ocean or the South Polar Plateau. I must confess that even though I felt I had a fair knowledge of the problems of the South Polar flight before it was made, the actuality could not be realized until we were hovering over those precipitous mountains, those magnificent peaks which fringe the plateau.

The contrast between the two polar regions of the earth, both from the point of view of flying and in their many other aspects, is almost startling. It is probable that the average person who has not made a study of these distant areas has always thought of them as being somewhat similar—ice, snow, extreme cold, and a year of one day and one night. In such respects they are, of course, alike, but there resemblance ceases. One is an ocean; the other a vast plateau. The Antarctic Continent is in the clutches of an ice age—the Arctic is not.

It is odd that the great ocean basin of the North should correspond so closely in depth to the height of the southern plateau—about 10,000 feet. In other words, the earth at the North is pushed in to form the Arctic Ocean and sticks out below to form the high land around the South Pole. The earth in its movement through the universe with the rest of our solar system is heading, so the astronomers tell us, toward a far-distant star, and the North Pole always points roughly in that direction. To me these facts have long been a subject for speculation. There is, of course, also the theory that the Antarctic Continent moved to its present position from another point on the earth's surface. However, it may have been formed, the two areas are as different as is possible for two regions affected by similar climatic conditions, and these differences control the work of the explorer in both places.

Divergent Polar Conditions.

In penetrating the North Polar basin the problems to be met are different from those of the South, whether the explorer travel over the surface or through the air. In only one particular did we find conditions similar in flying, and that is the prevalence of thick weather, fog and clouds in the summer months. But otherwise there are widely varying altitudes to be met by the aviator, and for the explorer who travels on the surface all the difference between moving over a lifeless continent of great low plains and high mountains and forcing one's way forward over or through the shifting ice of a great sea.

Sir Douglas Mawson, the great scientist, found an average yearly wind velocity of 50 miles an hour at his winter quarters in Antarctica; that is astonishing—almost the flying speed of a plane. There is nothing in the Arctic comparable to this.

The surroundings of the two regions are also very different. The Arctic Ocean is enclosed by land over which access may be had to its shores in most places and over which a retreat may be made. It supports some life along these shores, and even on the floating ice of the great sea itself life is found. Animals travel over its surface and live in its waters.

The Antarctic Continent is surrounded by an abysmal ocean and its continental shelf is much lower than any other continent on earth. It is surrounded at all times by a belt of ice, which at a few places in the summer opens sufficiently to permit access to the land. How precarious is this opening was brought sharply to our minds by the experiences of the last season, with its unprecedented formation of pack ice, which nearly made our relief impossible. The Antarctic has been guarded by Nature in a way which one cannot comprehend until one has seen it. There has been talk, I have heard, of taking sightseers to the Antarctic in a large ship. Such a trip would be folly. Even the whalers, those experienced Norwegians who go South year after year, bring out their ships at times battered and broken and often barely escape disaster.

In the Arctic there is much life, from musk ox, the northern-most animal, to the Arctic bear and fox, birds, seals and fish. In many places, such as Etah, the northern-most Eskimo village, animal life is so abundant that the Eskimo does not have a very difficult time sustaining life.

A Desolate Region.

There is no life in the Antarctic except on its shores, and most of it is there only in the summer months. This life is limited entirely to seals, birds and the teeming life of the water, ranging from the invisible diatom, which stains the ice yellow, to the schools of whales. But in the interior there is no life at all, nothing but snow and ice, except when occasionally in the summer months a bird is found wandering on some mysterious errand

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy, or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Demagogue Still Rules.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE world could very well have tolerated Mussolini as a dictator inasmuch as he preserved Italy from political chaos, perhaps revolution, with a hideous train of excesses. But in his late imitation of the former Kaiser in stirring the spirit of war among his people, he played a deplorable part. How still far below intelligent self-mastery are the masses. As the Duce at Milan uttered a covert challenge to France, the crowd roared its approval, pledging its willingness to kill and be killed. Its echoes assured Mussolini, as it assured us all, that the demagogue is still master of the world. What did this crowd know of the issues, if any, at stake? Italian butchers and bakers and candlestick makers showed a readiness to go forth and kill French butchers and bakers and candlestick makers, although they knew nothing of them save the fact of their existence. What a spectacle! Have we Christianity, have we education, have we reason? The roar of that crowd was the roar of the beast in the jungle. This is not to asperse the Italians. The blood lust is still the heritage of all humanity and humanity harks obediently to its master, clothed as the cunning propagandist or as the dictator who would pull the world down to save his temple.

Modern Cromwellism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A SHORT time ago I ordered a copy of Hugh Walpole's "Rogue Herries" (English edition) from a New York bookseller. I have just been informed that the book has been prohibited entry by the customs authorities.

Walpole, as you know, is generally rated one of the foremost contemporary English writers. His reputation and following are such that he does not have to put filth in his books to attract "readers." Nor does Walpole appear to be the kind of writer who would use his talents for such purposes. I have not read "Rogue Herries," but from a review in one of our leading magazines I understand it is a splendid story with, I think, an eighteenth century setting.

Are our melancholy experiences in the prohibition field to be duplicated in this? Is intolerance always to remain in the saddle in this country?

Perhaps intolerance is an inevitable result of democracy. The Commonwealth under Cromwell, you will remember, ruthlessly suppressed secular music, the drama and the other arts, and ruled the people with an iron hand until human nature could stand no more. The result, as you know, was that the people fled from the impossible "virtue" of the Puritans to the profligacy of Charles II. Let us hope that our spiritual descendants of the Puritans will take warning from the past. K. A. R.

Suggests Anthem Be Sung in Schools.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT IS a too well known fact that very few American citizens can even sing the first verse of our national anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner," much less the rest of the song.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" has now by act of Congress been definitely chosen as the national anthem. No country, I am sure, is as lacking as we are in this knowledge of the national anthem. England, France, Italy and Germany are all enthusiastic in their songs in the schools and churches, and as a result it makes for stronger patriotism and loyalty. I have traveled in these countries quite several times, and it is easily evident that there is a remarkable difference in the attitude toward their anthem.

I suggest that our national anthem be sung in all schools every morning.

CITIZEN.

A Pean to Springfield.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT IS gratifying to note, in your comments on Springfield, the depth of understanding of what is behind this growth.

Not to oil booms, not to digging in the ground for hidden riches, not to rearing huge factories with grimy smokestacks, not to any yielding to commercialism of any type, does Springfield owe her increased population.

Rather it is in spite of the appeal of all of these that she has grown. Steadfastly she has relied upon her appeal to those who preferred the calm beauties of nature to the more wearing, if perhaps a little more gainful, life of the big city.

Only those who have visioned her beauty, who have felt the soul satisfying serenity of life among her beautiful trees, listened to the song of the birds and smelled the sweet fragrance of flowers wafted by gentle mountain breezes, or wandered beside the blue waters of her streams, can understand why Springfield draws and holds so many thousands against the appeal of commercialism.

Springfield will continue to grow so long as she refuses to listen to the temptation to commercialize nature's gifts. So long as there is an appeal to full, serene, rich living

Indeed "a city of charm which men and women delight to call home."

A SPRINGFIELDIAN.

THE CLASS OF 1930.

Our colleges will turn out an army of 200,000 young men and women this month, all of whom, with negligible exceptions, will be looking for a job. The job will not so easily be found this year. The situation has been frankly recognized by the institutional bureaus having to do with employment. They have advised the graduate to take anything he can get.

The experience in many instances will be chastening. The occasion, however, does not call for commiseration. The slower, harder start has a lot of advantages over the springboard leap. The class of 1930, at its tenth reunion, will conceivably bring back to its alma mater an assortment of values which might not have been accumulated along the easier way. Those values the college will necessarily share with the country. So far, then, from feeling sorry for the youngsters breaking into the game, congratulations are more properly in order. They are stepping out from one school into another. Their education goes on without an interruption.

How many of those young men and women have been really interested in what happens at Washington we have no way of knowing. Shortly they will be vitally interested in a public question which never has had the place in public intelligence it should have. We refer to the tariff. No matter where he goes or what he does, the young alumnus will hear the tariff discussed. He will nowhere hear one word of praise for the powers that be in Washington over the 17 months of trading, grabbing and gabbing through which this bill has dragged. It will dawn on him, at last, perhaps, after a sweaty day, that if Mr. Hoover had really taken a hand in this matter the day might not have been so sweaty and the pay might have been better.

That is education—education with a punch. It is a great thing for the young man to learn early in life that he has direct stake in his Government; that what is done, or left undone, in Washington sometimes measures the difference for him between a good job and a poor one—sometimes, indeed, measures the dreadful difference between a job and no job. It is a great thing for the young man to realize that what a President does or doesn't do, or what a Congress does or doesn't do, may seriously affect his personal affairs.

During all his life the 1930 college graduate has been hearing a lot of buncombe about our prosperity and the reasons for it. Most of the reasons so glibly or solemnly enumerated are right here now, but prosperity is not here. Clearly, then, the explanations, often so smugly advanced, have been wrong. Can a right answer be found? We think so. We have prospered amazingly in a world mostly impoverished by a war that poured the wealth of the world in on us. We developed mass production, the stimulus of invention accelerated enterprise and we had the money to do things. Ours was an economic and industrial advantage which no nation ever before possessed. The ability to seize the opportunity was here. But the condition was abnormal, it was bound to pass, it is passing, and a new order of things has come which requires a new outlook on our part, a new commercial policy, a new economic philosophy. The Government at Washington apparently has not grasped this truth. In a business sense it is living back in a pre-war age—in the remote antiquity of Grundyism. And that is why young Mr. and Miss College Graduate are today having a hard time finding a job.

But we will wake up. We will slough off the superstition of a stifling protection that has no place in the polity of a nation like ours which, to live and prosper, must sell to the world and buy from the world. Ten years from now the college graduate of today, after a rigorous education, will be among the forces of progress keeping America abreast of the times; blowing away the myths to which we have been making offerings; safeguarding our material substance; and—let us hope—retrieving, too, the soul of our democracy.

PRE-WAR BASEBALL.

The Browns and Boston Red Sox turned back the clock on Friday when they battled through 11 innings to a 1-to-0 score. On such baseball the game grew into greatness; thence came its legends, its lyrics, its Olympians, its folk-lore and its history. Such baseball was the very stuff of drama, when almost every minute was packed with suspense, when climax and denouement hung ever in trembling, when wit, agility, daring and strategy staged a continuous duel through breathless afternoons. Along came Ruth, with his terrible bat, inaugurating the home run fashion, which the magnates with the "rabbit" ball, straitjacket pitching regulations and bandbox enclosures have established as a policy. Perhaps this bludgeoning baseball is what the public wants, but the game that was, when a home run was something Homeric and a tally was a crown jewel—well, "them were the days."

THE GALAPAGOS ISLANDS.

Gifford Pinchot, who recently explored the Galapagos Islands, is urging they be acquired by the United States as a wild life refuge. The Chicago Tribune commends the idea, adding that, aside from their enormous interest to biologists, the islands could be used as a meteorological station, and as a casual refuge for ships of war and peace. C. F. Kettering of General Motors and E. F. McDonald Jr. of Zenith Radio suggest a group of wealthy men might consider buying the islands from Ecuador and giving them to the nation.

Lying 500 miles off the coast of Ecuador, in the Pacific, the Galapagos archipelago has been so little frequented by man that its birds and animals will approach travelers fearlessly. It is said the only wild beasts there are dogs, cats, pigs, goats and donkeys which have been deserted on the islands by passing ships. The archipelago abounds in forms of life not found anywhere else: giant tortoises, flightless cormorants, curious varieties of finch, dwarf penguins and two types of iguana-like lizard showing many primitive characteristics. In a collection of 52 species of moth brought back by a recent expedition, half were new to science.

Gov. Pinchot's descriptions of the Galapagos, infused with that infectious enthusiasm for which he is famous, are arousing tremendous popular interest. But the islands have long been known to biologists, who consider them one of the most valuable reservoirs of scientific information in a world rapidly capitulating to the Machine Age and destruction of wild life. Charles Darwin, on the epoch-making voyage of the Beagle, visited the islands and found of particular usefulness for his "Origin of the Species" the Galapagos finches.

Surely this is a paradise which should be preserved unspoiled, and all lovers of nature, as well as all biologists, should lend their aid to Gov. Pinchot's proposal. If private funds are not forthcoming for the purpose, the purchase of the islands would be a splendid investment for the Government.

MEDIEVALISM IN GEORGIA.

The sovereign State of Georgia in a court of law next week will demand the lives of six persons—two white men, two white women and two Negro men. They are accused of no murder or other violence against person or property. Their offense is described as "attempting to incite to insurrection" a crime first defined in the State's "Code of 1861" and bolstered with the death penalty in 1871. The prisoners are held as an outgrowth of their efforts to organize Communist groups in Atlanta.

The actions of these men and women would scarcely bring charges of peace disturbance elsewhere, but they violated some of the most sacred taboos of the South, and Georgia is empowered to avenge this sacrilege with the electric chair. They are Communists, they sought to organize unskilled labor, they attempted joint meetings of whites and Negroes. For these reasons feeling runs high against them, and civil liberties groups declare there is danger that death sentences will actually be imposed.

The high crimes of the two white men lie in having charge of a meeting which police broke up. The women are said to have imperiled the foundations of the State by passing out Communist literature. One of the Negroes committed an alleged capital felony by making a speech denouncing industrial depression. Bail has been refused, and all have been held in Fulton Tower, Atlanta's ancient jail, for several weeks.

The amazing factor is not that Georgia harbors such medieval laws on its statute books, for many states have legal anachronisms, but that it has a Solicitor-General who stands ready to enforce them. His announcement that he will seek the extreme penalty indicates that human life has become very cheap in Georgia, when an orator of a minority party and a murderer face the same punishment. Prosecution of this sort, where constitutional guarantees of free speech and assembly are thrust aside, is shameful enough, but to seek the death penalty for purely political offenses savors more of Czarist Russia than of enlightened America.

MR. HOOVER'S SWORD.

The group of Japanese admirers who recently presented Mr. Hoover with a 425-year-old sword apparently thought he needed it, although a Quaker. If sharp enough and long enough, a good broadsword is indeed a useful implement for an engineer who falls among politicians. It might even take the place of the "big stick" which seems to have been permanently mislaid somewhere among the cobwebs of the White House attic. Conceding the pen to be mightier than the sword, Mr. Hoover should hasten to whet his gift blade to razor edge, since he seemingly does not intend to have the veto quill in his armory when he enters the lists for the tariff battle of the century. Or the subtle Japanese may have handed the rapier to him as a forecast of the political hara-kiri he seems fated to commit.

On the other hand, there is an ominous significance in the name of the organization which bestowed the gift. "Check-stub Claudius" Huston, loquacious lobbyist and national committee chairman extraordinary, has reason to tremble, for Mr. Hoover's lethal weapon is a gift of the Japanese Canning Association.

ALASKA'S WAR ON ITS BEARS.

Alaska, which once protected the brown bear on Kadiak Island and vicinity, now has not only lowered the bars on their slaughter but is sending out paid hunters to kill off these magnificent animals. The excuse is that these bears, known to naturalists as the last of the "great carnivores," are taking toll of salmon and sheep. This charge is refuted by the magazine, Outdoor Life, which points out that a great many myths prevail on the subject. Alaskan bears, classed as carnivorous, are in reality omnivorous, with a heavy leaning to vegetarian diet. Their raids on flocks are rare and the individual marauder, not the entire species, should be killed, just as an occasional sheep-killing dog is destroyed. Many a kill by predatory creatures of the cat family is attributed to bears.

The "brownies" are an attraction to the traveler who visits Alaska, and should be viewed as assets by that picturesque region. Their attacks on human beings are largely in the realm of fiction, or result when unskillful huntsmen wound and enrage the animal, then fail to stand their ground.

California has witnessed the extermination of her grizzlies, and Alaska is about to say good-by to one of the finest animals remaining on the American continent. Should the slaughter go on, the "brownie" will be found only in the sanctuary of the zoo.

THAT OZARK FEUD.

We are quite unmoved by the Homeric feud between Joplin and Springfield as to which city Horton Smith should be accredited as he strides along the fairways from conquest to conquest. The claims of both cities are saturated with casuistry.

Springfield asserts, with rhetorical flourish, that Horton Smith was born there, that there as a caddy he learned the rudiments of his profession, that his folks live there and that, therefore, he is a Springfield boy.

"Tut, tut," roars Joplin. "Who discovered this prodigy in the dim fringes of Sedalia, whither he had migrated from an unappreciative Springfield? Who engaged him as a 'pro,' poured wealth upon him for his tutorial services and sent him forth with a communal blessing on that triumphal adventure?" And Springfield is obliged to stammer that it was the idle rich of Joplin that did all this for Horton Smith.

Well, what of it? When a city plumes herself as the old home town of a celebrity she merely sticks a spurious feather in her bonnet. No man ever chose his birthplace. That event of biological chance may appeal to sentimentalists, but logicians spurn it. So, too, with Joplin's caveat. There was no freedom of choice in the economic compulsion that brought Joplin and the young golfer into conjunction. A pecuniary meeting of the man and the job—an affair of desideratum, without drama or divination.

Mr. Smith has allayed the storm by a diplomatic gesture—a silver cup to be contested for annually by the golfers of the two towns. Meantime Horton Smith might appropriate the crest of that other Smith whom King George made Earl of Birkenhead: Faber Meae Fortunae—the Smith of my own fortune. That's the kind of Smith Horton is.

THE BURDEN OF GRUNDYISM.

Highlands of the Ozarks

Coronado and De Soto, first explorers to visit Ozarks, sought gold but found 7-foot Indians; district among oldest geologically on continent, with caves dating back millions of years; days of adventure give way to peaceful pursuits; tourists throng in to fish and enjoy mountain scenery; dairying and farming now important.

F. M. Van Natter in National Republic.

BECAUSE of their blue hills and swift rivers, roaring springs and vast caverns, legends and romance of border warfare the Ozarks form one of America's most delightful corners. On crisp nights foxes bark. In the forests wolves pull down deer. Sometimes a panther sends his blood-chilling scream across the ridges to his mate. There are localities where men on horseback hunt wild hogs. As a people, the Ozark highlanders are generous and hospitable, many still living in hewed-log cabins. Their ancestors, half a century before the Civil War, trekked in by ox-team from Ohio and the mountains of the Carolinas, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, especially Tennessee.

Four hundred years ago the Spanish and French were anxious to possess the Ozarks. De Soto came from Florida, discovered the Mississippi and probably entered the highlands on the southeast; Coronado came from Santa Fe and entered on the southwest. Both Spaniards sought gold, silver and precious stones, but found instead Osage Indians, some of whom were about seven feet tall. De Soto opened a waterway from the Gulf of Mexico; Coronado blazed a trail across the plains from Old Mexico.

France, wanting a short passage to India, though never averse to gold mines, sought primarily an all-water route from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. One of her first subjects to enter the Ozarks was Du Tisne. Hearing that the Indians planned to scalp him, he snatched off his wig and displayed his newly shaved head. Then throwing the wig onto the ground, he dared any savage to touch a hair of it. He threatened to burn their forests and rivers. With a sunglass he set fire to dry leaves. He mixed brandy and water and fired the mixture.

The Indians preferred to worship a man who could scalp himself, pull fire out of the air and burn water. So they allowed the powerful god, Du Tisne, to plant the standard of France and take possession of the entire hill country. The French referred to a trading post on the Arkansas River as "Aux-arcs." The English phonetic spelling of these words became "Ozarks."

Here is some of the oldest land of the American continents. Geological ages ago it was a high plateau, which accounts for the characteristic level horizon line of today, a most unusual thing in a hill country. At that time sluggish rivers meandered over this elevated tableland, cutting through the softer areas while deflected at other places by flinty masses which today are towering bluffs. These rivers, now entrenched meanders, tumble and roar through most fascinating scenery, winding in loops and ox-bows until one may float down them 15 miles suddenly to find himself less than a mile across country from his starting place.

Enormous subterranean rivers have carved out fantastic caves in which candle light reveals graceful columns reaching far up to ledges and domes resembling the vaulted crypt of a Norman cathedral. Giant stalagmites and stalactites mutely tell of the millions of years that have passed since the Ozarks were an elevated peneplain. Frequently the damp, clammy air of these caverns is charged with the eerie sounds of bats. Some are known as dry-caves, maintaining throughout the year a fairly uniform temperature. In these limestone caverns people have lived, doing their cooking at the entrance.

Except in Scotland, few people can sing of a more sanguinary and adventurous border country than the Ozarkians. From 1855 to 1865, slave-owning Missouri was the great bone of contention. Fathers and sons were arrayed against one another.

Now the blue hills are peaceful. No longer are beacon fires lit on hilltops to summon baldknobbers. Tourists from North, South, East and West rush along seeking glimpses of the Ozarks' ever-changing beauty and the treasures of the health-giving climate. Floaters, in flat-bottom boats steered by entertaining native guides, drift down the looping rivers, especially the three-day float down the historic James and White rivers from Galena to Branson, Mo., through the Shepherd of the Hills country. The guides know where to cast for the sporting bass and jack salmon; where at night to put out a trot line for the juicy channel cat.

The fertile Ozarks are rapidly awakening. Resort clubs line the river banks. Dairy cattle graze in the rich blue grass valleys. Poultry raising has become a great industry. Sheep and goats dot the green hillsides. Vineyards and apple orchards are everywhere. Even the persimmon, winter ration of foxes and 'possums, is being made into marmalade and breakfast foods. A thousand pounds of white burley tobacco can be grown on one acre. Tomatoes yield vast returns. From 60,000 acres, Ozark farmers last year shipped 10,000 carloads of strawberries.

Eleven hydroelectric dams will soon create lakes for more summer resorts, permanently covering some farms with 82 feet of water. The electrical energy derived will supply the hill country with an abundance of cheap power. Of the estimated 600,000 horsepower electrical energy, 500,000 horsepower has been applied for by corporations.

The Hon. Dewey J. Short, member of Congress, says: "I take pride in the fact I'm a hillbilly from the Ozarks. Because I like the hillbillies. They are frank, candid and honest. Their generosity is unbounded, their hospitality sincere. They are genuine folks. If they like you they will die for you; if they dislike you they may let you die. Not all of them are over-industrious, because nature is bountiful, and it is rather easy to live in the Ozarks."

In this highland country the redbird and wren sing the year around and the kingfisher skims the rivers. In the fall wild ducks come, attracted by the mild winters. By the middle of February the robins have returned. Soon the columbine pokes its dainty head from the moss-filled rock crevices. By late April the Ozarkians are picking strawberries on Banjo Hill and carting them to market down Dollar Holler.

WASHINGTON, June 15.

THERE'S something a bit incongruous in the picture of Wesley Jones as the center of a controversy on the question of prohibition—or any controversy for that matter. For the senior Senator from Washington, who startled the country recently by announcing that if his constituency so decreed he would stand by a referendum on the dry law, is not the type of man who figures in sensations.

Out of the 96 men who sit in the Senate, it is doubtful if one could be found possessed of a more mild disposition, a more serious mien, or a more quiet reserve—a reserve which at times seems almost distant.

Senator Jones is as far removed from the familiar back-slapping, hail-fellow-well-met politician as one could imagine. There is only one loud thing about the man, and that is the flaming red cravats he wears.

IN THE Senate he sits quietly at his desk on the Republican side next to the aisle. Most of the time he is fingering books and papers stacked high on his desk. When he does arise to make a speech or join in debate, it is in a voice that scarce carries to the galleries. His tone is conversational and rarely does he depart from it. Gestures are few, if any.

Prohibition to him is a vital thing, born and nurtured in strong personal conviction. His announcement in regard to a referendum marked no surrender in his "personal conscientious views." He always has been a dry.

Facetiously dubbed "Five-and-Ten" Jones when his bill to tighten enforcement of prohibition was passed, such widespread publicity has come to him that his previous legislative accomplishments have been pushed into the background.

FEW remember that he sponsored the Mississippi flood control act of 1928 and put it through the Senate without a dissenting vote; that he has fathered numerous laws aiding soldiers and sailors; that he is for adherence of America in the World Court.

Born three days after his father died, from the age of 10 Senator Jones has made his own way. Until he was 16 he worked on a farm all summer that he might attend school in winter. He lived on 8 cents a day and slept on the office floor by the stove that he might read law in Chicago.

And at 26, "$11 worse off than nothing financially," with a wife, a child, plenty of pluck and good health, he moved to Washington. Ten years later he came to Congress as a Representative-at-Large, served 10 years, then ran for the Senate and has been here ever since.

WASHINGTON, June 15.

THERE'S something a bit incongruous in the picture of Wesley Jones as the center of a controversy on the question of prohibition—or any controversy for that matter. For the senior Senator from Washington, who startled the country recently by announcing that if his constituency so decreed he would stand by a referendum on the dry law, is not the type of man who figures in sensations.

Out of the 96 men who sit in the Senate, it is doubtful if one could be found possessed of a more mild disposition, a more serious mien, or a more quiet reserve—a reserve which at times seems almost distant.

Senator Jones is as far removed from the familiar back-slapping, hail-fellow-well-met politician as one could imagine. There is only one loud thing about the man, and that is the flaming red cravats he wears.

IN THE Senate he sits quietly at his desk on the Republican side next to the aisle. Most of the time he is fingering books and papers stacked high on his desk. When he does arise to make a speech or join in debate, it is in a voice that scarce carries to the galleries. His tone is conversational and rarely does he depart from it. Gestures are few, if any.

Prohibition to him is a vital thing, born and nurtured in strong personal conviction. His announcement in regard to a referendum marked no surrender in his "personal conscientious views." He always has been a dry.

Facetiously dubbed "Five-and-Ten" Jones when his bill to tighten enforcement of prohibition was passed, such widespread publicity has come to him that his previous legislative accomplishments have been pushed into the background.

FEW remember that he sponsored the Mississippi flood control act of 1928 and put it through the Senate without a dissenting vote; that he has fathered numerous laws aiding soldiers and sailors; that he is for adherence of America in the World Court.

Born three days after his father died, from the age of 10 Senator Jones made his own way. Until he was 16 he worked on a farm all summer that he might attend school in winter. He lived on 8 cents a day and slept on the office floor by the stove that he might read law in Chicago.

And at 26, "$11 worse off than nothing financially," with a wife, a child, plenty of pluck and good health, he moved to Washington. Ten years later he came to Congress as a Representative-at-Large, served 10 years, then ran for the Senate and has been here ever since.

German Officer's Story Reveals How Dreyfus Was Convicted Despite Absence of Actual Proof

Trial of French Captain, Later Was Exonerated on Charge of Selling Military Secrets, Was Unfairly Conducted Behind Closed Doors.

Political Intrigue Played Important Part in Courtmartial — Wrong Translation of Telegram Among Evidence Used Against Defendant.

By GEN. MAX VON SCHWARTZKOPPEN.

Military Attache of the German Embassy in Paris When the Dreyfus Case Began.

THE arrest of Captain Dreyfus had occurred on Oct. 15, 1894, but the Government, as well as the War Office, had succeeded in keeping it a secret until Oct. 31. However, after the newspapers had received the first information of this arrest, they commenced publishing suppositions concerning the reasons for it.

As the newspapers did not receive any explanation concerning the actual facts, they commenced to attack the embassies and military attaches in general, especially the German Embassy.

The German Ambassador, Count Munster, on my assurance that the Dreyfus affair was a mystery to me, that I did not know the Captain, or ever had heard of him, and that I could not understand how I could be brought into connection with him, had conferences with Foreign Minister Hanotaux, and later with President Casimir Perier, requesting them to contradict the antagonistic articles in reference to him personally as well as to his Military Attache.

Upon receipt of the news concerning the arrest of Capt. Dreyfus, a friend of mine, Col. Panizzardi, Military Attache of the Italian Embassy, called on me and stated that neither he nor his staff had any connection with Dreyfus and that he had no explanation for this strange occurrence. With a clear conscience I was able to state that the affair was as great a mystery to me as to him.

Few Secrets Kept From Col. Panizzardi.

A close friendship united me with Col. Panizzardi. I admired him, and we had few secrets from each other. I had informed him of a few items contained in the reports of Esterhazy, but did not disclose the source of my news prior to the time when I knew that by the publication of the facsimile of the so-called bordereau the identity of the author with whose handwriting Panizzardi was well acquainted, would become public. This did not occur until November, 1896. Until then my friend Panizzardi did not know the source of my information.

As already stated, Esterhazy had visited me on September 1, submitting to me three of the documents mentioned in the so-called bordereau. Esterhazy very often came unannounced and, not finding me, left his reports with the porter who put them into my open letter box in his lodge.

The bordereau addressed to me must have come to the Embassy in this manner during the time from Aug. 16 to Sept. 1, when it was stolen by a secret service agent, who handed it to Maj. Henry of the French Intelligence Service. In such manner the bordereau found its way to the Intelligence Office without my seeing it.

For some time the Intelligence Service Office had been aware that illicit information was brought to the German military attache by a certain party.

It was also known that so-called "plans directeurs," original plans of fortifications, had been delivered.

These came from a certain M. Dubois (as he used to call himself) and in the correspondence between the Italian and German military attache he was always mentioned as "D." Dubois was a civil employe of the cartographical department, who for some years had done a profitable business with these plans.

The bordereau being without signature, the situation became very embarrassing. Nothing remained but to try to identify the traitor by his handwriting. The bordereau was photographed and distributed among the chiefs in the War Office and the staff to find out whether one of their officers could be the author, for it was assumed from the contents that he could be no less than a staff officer.

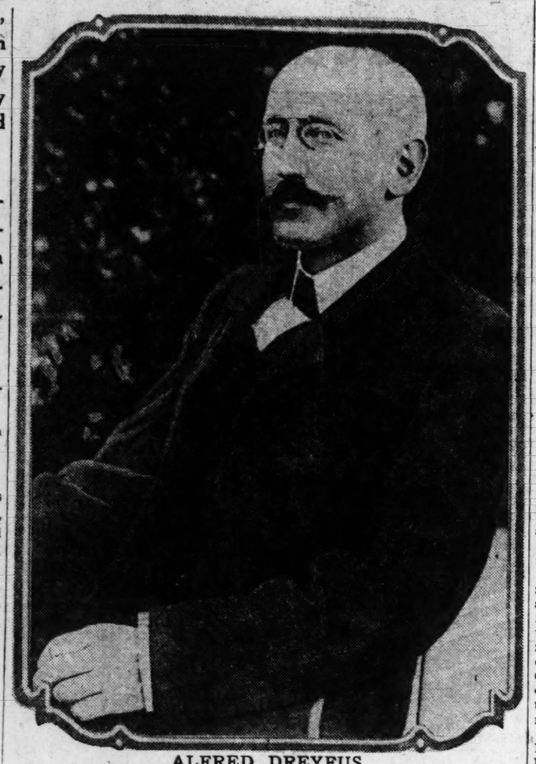
The doubtful glory of having discovered that the handwriting of the bordereau was very similar to that of Capt. Dreyfus, previously attached to the department belongs to Col. Fabre, Chief of the Fourth Department of the Staff.

Dreyfus Had Been an Intelligent Officer.

Fabre submitted his discovery to the Chief of Staff, Gen. de Boisdeffre, who immediately informed Secretary of War Mercier.

Dreyfus, an Alsatian Jew, appears to have been a very intelligent and ambitious officer, who, owing to his great curiosity, to his inclination to pry around, to his reticence and taciturnity and, last, but not least, to his origin, was somewhat disliked by his comrades, especially by his competitors on the staff.

Maj. du Paty de Clam, a relation of Gen. Boisdeffre, was intrusted with the preliminary inquiry. I made his acquaintance during the maneuvers near Toulouse in 1892, where he was attached to the Foreign Office, and we had maintained friendly relations.



ALFRED DREYFUS.

THIS is the second installment from the memorandum on the Dreyfus case by General Max von Schwartzkoppen, Military Attache at the German Embassy in Paris in 1894 when Captain Dreyfus was arrested and convicted of betraying French military secrets to Germany.

The incriminating letter, which Von Schwartzkoppen declared never reached him, really was written, as was shown later, by Major Count Esterhazy, another French army officer, who was negotiating with Von Schwartzkoppen to sell military information.

In last Sunday's installment Von Schwartzkoppen told of these negotiations by Esterhazy. Von Schwartzkoppen's version of his own activities at that period are presented herewith, together with his observations regarding the secret documents introduced by French military authorities against Dreyfus. Some years later the latter was fully exonerated and restored to his army rank.

General von Schwartzkoppen died of war wounds in Germany in 1917. His memorandum on the Dreyfus case of which the accompanying article is a part, was brought to light after his death. It is shortly to be published in Germany.

Du Paty de Clam was a dreamer, a scholar, with little appreciation of actual reality. It was certainly a misfortune that the preliminary inquiries in the Dreyfus affair were intrusted to him. I am convinced that du Paty directed the preliminary inquiries in good faith, but that he was fully convinced of Dreyfus' guilt, and that for this reason he left no means untried, not even unfair ones, to obtain a confession.

Later du Paty de Clam must have been convinced of Dreyfus' innocence, as was the case with his superior officers.

Everything until then that had been said against Dreyfus was bound to lead to an acquittal. This, however, was not in the interest of Secretary of War Mercier, whose star was beginning to fade and he tried to consolidate his position by discovering the spy. Neither was it in the interest of Maj. du Paty de Clam, because if Dreyfus were acquitted, the future of both officers would be spoiled.

The examination of the bordereau by experts did not have the desired success. Of five of these experts (Gobert, Bertillon, Pelletier, Teyssonnieres and Charavey,) two (Gobert and Pelletier) were of the opinion that Dreyfus had not written the bordereau.

Prior to the arrest of Dreyfus, Gobert only had been consulted, and as his judgment of the bordereau was in favor of Dreyfus, the well-known Bertillon was placed at the disposal of the staff by the President of Police.

Bertillon was no handwriting expert. After 10 hours of comparing the bordereau with private letters of Dreyfus he gave the following judgment:

"If one excludes the hypothesis of the document being forged very carefully, it is obvious to us that the same person has written all items submitted, as well as the incriminating document."

This, of course, was not a definite declaration that Dreyfus had written the bordereau, and it should have been believed that suspicion was not sufficiently established to cause the arrest of Dreyfus. But the military authorities, the Secretary of War, the Chief of Staff, the Sous-Chef and the Officer of the Investigation were so fully convinced of Dreyfus's guilt that the arrest of Dreyfus on Oct. 15 had been decided upon even before the result of Bertillon's examination.

Du Paty's Attempts to Obtain Confession Fail.

Du Paty's attempts to induce Dreyfus to make a confession during his imprisonment failed for the simple reason that it was not Dreyfus, but Esterhazy who had written the bordereau. The situation commenced to be disagreeable to Mercier, Boisdeffre and du Paty, owing to the non-existence of proof of Dreyfus' guilt.

No courtmartial would have answered otherwise than by fully acquitting Dreyfus in the absence of actual proof. It was too late for them to go back. Until that time news of the affair had not been published, but it was impossible to keep the arrest secret as too many people knew of it.

The Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Hanotaux, expressed his doubts concerning the further handling of the affair which was based solely on a document stolen from the German Embassy, whereby diplomatic difficulties were liable to arise. Mercier, however, absolutely decided to proceed, eagerly assisted by du Paty de Clam.

At the Intelligence Service Office of the Staff, then directed by Col. Sandherr, the latter had established a secret file containing all documents referring to espionage.

This file contained a certain letter from me, addressed some time before to Col. Panizzardi in reference to the supplier of the so-called "plans directeurs," M. Dubois. Dubois also had dealt with my Italian colleague but by useless deliveries and impudent demands had caused Panizzardi to sever all connections with him. After this he came to me trying to renew relations with Panizzardi by delivering plans of Nice. This was the beginning of my letter to Panizzardi:

"Enclosed 12 plans directeurs of Nice which this scoundrel "D" has submitted to me for you."

This document played an important part in the Dreyfus trial under the name of "Canaille de D." Investigation concerning the "Canaille D." had not met with success. Now, becoming aware of the futility of the evidence against Dreyfus, it was deemed advisable to use this document before the court-martial as the proof of his guilt.

(The letter "D," meaning Dubois, was assumed to mean Dreyfus.)

In addition a number of notes had been inserted in this secret file of the Intelligence Office, which allegedly had been given by a former military attache of the Embassy in Paris to a secret service agent for 1200 francs a month, and also to a member of the Intelligence Service Office, Maj. Henry. Those letter notes bear the character of forgery.

Another document of the secret file referred to the so-called telegram "Panizzardi." Col. Panizzardi, Italian military attache, had sent a telegram in cipher on Nov. 2, 1894 (after having learned of the arrest of Dreyfus from the newspapers), to the Italian Chief of Staff advising that a French Captain, Dreyfus, had been arrested in an affair of espionage, and that he never had had any connections with Dreyfus.

Should the Italian staff not have had relations with Dreyfus he would strongly advise expressing this openly, thereby avoiding unpleasant comments in the press. This telegram had been sent by the telegraph office to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, had been deciphered and read in the correct French translation:

"If Captain D. had not had relations with you, think it advisable, officially, to deny to avoid comments press."

The French Intelligence Service Office also received information of this telegram and, with the assistance of du Paty, had made an intentionally wrong translation as follows: "Dreyfus arrested. All precautions taken. Agent informed."

Papers Are Selected for Courtmartial.

Maj. du Paty de Clam was commissioned by the Secretary of War to select from the secret file such documents as might be of specific value to the members of the Dreyfus court-martial, and to write a so-called commentary stating all suspicions against Dreyfus. The commentary was written by du Paty, and the documents selected from the secret file were:

1. The document known by the name of "Canaille D."

2. The aforementioned telegram "Dreyfus arrested."

3. An unimportant document, subsequently known as "letter from Col. Davignon."

These were submitted to Maj. du Paty de Clam in a sealed envelope in the presence of the Secretary of War, Chief of Staff and Chief of the Intelligence Office to be handed at a suitable opportunity to the president of the court-martial.

The courtmartial assembled on Dec. 19, 1894. Although the Dreyfus family, the counsel for the defense, Demange, and a part of the press demanded full publicity, Gen. Mercier as well as his adherents had their reasons for having the proceedings behind locked doors. They were aware that at a public trial their futile suspicions surely would have influenced the public favor of Dreyfus, thereby endangering Mercier's position.

17 Officers Repeat the Accusations.

The witnesses for the prosecution, 17 officers, repeated the unconfirmed accusations made against Dreyfus during the preliminary inquiry. Mercier, Boisdeffre, Gonse, du Paty, and especially Henry, expressed their personal conviction that Dreyfus must have written the bordereau, and from the other three experts, summoned after the arrest of Dreyfus, two expressed themselves against one for Dreyfus.

Du Paty de Clam and Henry were afraid that, if Dreyfus' lawyer made the most of the situation the court surely would acquit Dreyfus for lack of proof.

Du Paty therefore thought it the right moment to acquaint the members of the court martial with the secret file prior to beginning the arguments. He therefore in a recess submitted the sealed envelope with the secret documents to the president of the court martial, requesting him to impart its contents to the other members.

The representative of the Government in his argument repeated in a few words the contents of the bill of indictment dictated by du Paty; Demange, Dreyfus's lawyer, argued that from technical and internal reasons Dreyfus could never have written the bordereau. He only talked about this document, since the documents contained in the secret file had never been submitted to him or to Dreyfus.

On Dec. 22, 1894, the members of the court martial retired to the council chamber, where the president opened the sealed envelope and made the members acquainted with the contents of the secret documents.

Even these documents could not prove Dreyfus guilty, because the name Dreyfus was not mentioned in the document, "Canaille de D." From the wrong translation of the telegram, "Dreyfus arrested," they could only deduce the fact of Dreyfus' arrest, but not his guilt.

Nevertheless, these documents, after the assertions of du Paty and Henry and du Paty's explanation, made such a strong impression on the judges, that after one hour's conference they unanimously gave the verdict, "guilty."

The secret file was returned to du Paty by the president in the presence of the Judges and du Paty in turn returned it to Sandherr.

The appeal Dreyfus and his lawyer, Demange, made on Dec. 23, 1894, against the judgment of the courtmartial was repudiated on Dec. 31, because there were no errors in law. The submitting of the secret file naturally was not known to the Court of Revision. The verdict thereby became legal.

Mercier, well knowing how weak the proof and how irregular the reasons for the condemnation of Dreyfus and who possibly was afraid of later reconsideration, tried again to induce Dreyfus to confess.

The Verdict—Du Paty Again Urges Dreyfus to Confess.

The day the verdict became legal he delegated du Paty to go to the cell of the condemned man, who was utterly broken down, and again urge him to confess. Although du Paty talked to Dreyfus for an hour, assuring him that he would leave nothing undone to make the coming deportation easier for him, Dreyfus continuously asserted his innocence, which he felt sure eventually would certainly be proved.

The continuous, genuine avowals of his innocence by Dreyfus made du Paty so perplexed that he exclaimed:

"If you are innocent, you will be the greatest martyr of all centuries."

The proceedings of the courtmartial having taken place behind closed doors, the press was not in a position to give the real proofs for the guilt of Dreyfus. One had to be content with the fact that seven French officers had been convinced of his guilt and this satisfied the general public.

Admiral Byrd Contrasts North and South Polar Regions

of its own far in from the sea. Here is a vast area as big as the United States and Mexico combined that has never sustained a human race, as far as we know.

One who flies over either of these desolate regions must bear these differences in mind. They govern the conditions of his flight and determine his type of plane and equipment. The altitude at which one must fly in the Antarctic also complicates matters exceedingly, and the uncertain weather adds to the manifold difficulties for any one who wishes to so conduct his flight that it shall have the maximum opportunity of success.

I have now had three experiences of flying in the polar regions and each of them has been very different. The first was probably the most difficult of them all, although less is known about that expedition than the two more spectacular polar expeditions.

I am referring to the McMillan expedition to Greenland, on which Floyd Bennett and I flew from the northernmost Eskimo village over the fjords and ice-capped highlands of Greenland and Ellesmere Land. We had single-motored amphibian planes and flew over districts where landing was impossible. We had never seen worse flying conditions. The failure of the motor would have meant disaster during most of our flights, and I think it was then we began to appreciate to the full the advantages of the multi-motored plane for flying over difficult territory. We have used such a plane ever since. At times we were buffeted by winds that tossed the plane like a leaf, and to keep control was a never-ending struggle. Below were ice-filled fjords, a sea filled with ice or the forbidding ice-capped land. It was a supreme test of the use of a plane in the polar regions and convinced me that polar exploration by air was not only possible but practicable and for quick geographical exploration the best means of transportation.

But on all these flights we were in touch with a land where there were living people and plentiful animal life. Our greatest danger was from a crash for once safely down it would not have been impossible to have made one's way to safety, living off the land, and we could possibly have reached the Eskimos. Even if we had traveled hundreds of miles, we would have a chance to find enough to eat. How different from the Antarctic, where one must take inland everything necessary to sustain life.

The North Pole Flight.

The next flight Bennett and I made was to the North Pole. That, again, was a different problem. Taking off from the water was the only possible way to get into the air on the Greenland flights, but on the North Pole flight we were able, by flying early, when it was cold enough, to use snow-covered land. That made possible the use of a different type of plane, a large three-motored plane on skis.

The flight was to be made over the ice-covered water of the polar basin from Spitzbergen to the Pole and back again. We were not troubled with obstacles such as mountains or swirling winds; it was only necessary to get the plane off with sufficient fuel to take us to the Pole and back. That seemed fairly easy, but we did not know as much about skis then as we do now, and, ours bent like barrel staves. The result was that we had difficulty in getting off with sufficient fuel, oil and emergency supplies. Once in the air, conditions were ideal, thanks to William Haines, our meteorologist. We were fortunate in our weather and had the sun all the way and could choose an altitude near sea level where the efficiency of the plane was greatest.

The hazard of this flight lay, of course, in being forced down on the ice. If that had happened I do not think we could have got into the air, and with only a rubber boat our chances of getting back would have been slim. Amundsen and Ellsworth were forced down near the Pole and got back, but it was only after three weeks of superhuman exertion by six men that they got one of their planes into the air again. Amundsen himself told me that there would have been no chance of walking back. Nansen, with one companion, lived on the ice of the Polar Sea for months, finally reaching Franz Josef Land, but succeeded only because of his astounding courage and physical strength and expert knowledge of the Polar Sea. But of course he had far more food and equipment than Amundsen and Ellsworth were able to carry in their planes. Both of these groups of men were fortunate. For us the hazard of landing a plane on the broken ice of the Arctic Sea would have been great. But aside from this contingency, which at one time, owing to an oil leak, seemed only too near, the flight was merely a matter of proper preparation, reliable engines and navigation. The weather was, of course, an important factor, and I will speak of that later.

Antarctic Realization.

When we prepared for the South Pole flight, however, we realized—only partly, however—that we were up against a very different sort of problem than we had faced before. Instead of flying over dangerous territory somewhere near tribes of natives, with plentiful food supplies, or flying at a low efficient altitude over the sea, we must this time do our flying at a very high elevation and over a country in which nothing lived. If we came down we would indeed be on land instead of drifting ice floes, but we would have to walk home hundreds of miles and pull our food after us over some of the most difficult trails in the world.

When we discovered a new mountain range to the eastward we flew over pressure and crevassed areas that it would have been impossible to walk over. We would have had to walk around to the southward. This would have made the distance so far that we could not have carried enough food to get back to Little America. We would be limited in what we carried on the plane for the South Pole flight by the height to which we must fly; in other words, our take-off load would be less than the capacity of the plane. It could not get off with more than it could take over the mountains. That was a new problem in long-distance flying, and what with the necessity of carrying much emergency equipment in case of a forced landing, we had to think a long time before deciding what was best to do. There were various alternatives, based originally on the use of two planes, but after the loss of one plane the first season we were limited to two or three plans.

The difference between these various flights came often to our minds during the weeks of preparation, and nothing did more to emphasize the contrast between the two polar regions. In one the shifting, grinding ice sheets over the sea, in the other a vast irregular continent, surrounded by a protective belt of ice which has so long defied attack in many places, a continent penetrated by vast shelves of ice over arms of the sea and rimmed with some of the most magnificent mountains in the world. The Arctic Ocean, monotonously flat, treacherous in its power and shifting surface, the Antarctic, immobile, appalling in its grandeur and silence, a mighty mausoleum for the dead land hidden beneath its snow.

The Antarctic Rampart.

I doubt if there is any mountain scenery in the world more splendid than that of the Antarctic. We had read of those mountains, we had talked of them and knew that they must be some of the finest ranges in the world, but all our paltry imagination, all the words of those who had described them, failed to bring to us the real majesty of the Antarctic rampart which guards the polar plateau. To one who penetrates the Arctic basin there is the thrill of combating ice floes and the beauties of the northern skies, but nothing in the Arctic can compare, I am sure, with the feeling of awe with which one first looks upon the mountains of Antarctica. Rising as they do from the sea or the flat plain of the barrier only a few feet above sea level, they leap into the air 10,000 to 15,000 feet. Most mountains are approached by foothills, not so many of these great peaks. They spring abruptly out of the plain and 150 miles away one can see them glistening in their jeweled splendor.

It was over these mountains that we had to fly. While we puzzled over figures, estimating load and plane performances, juggling the whole complex problem of how to make a plane do what it could not do, a sea level flight would have been easy. And yet I think every one of us rather looked forward to that struggle up the mountains and wondered what it would bring forth.

We were not willing to leave Capt. McKinley behind. With his great aerial camera, films, food and trail equipment, there was just enough extra weight to make the loading problem. But I would not be able to look my scientific friends in the face had we not brought back a pictorial record of every mile of that flight.

With all our calculations our passage over the mountains proved a tight squeak and I can still feel the plane slipping at the top of its climb and feel it rise as food was thrown over and the plane just topped the divide and straightened out toward the Pole.

Polar Weather.

Aside from these physical differences between the Arctic and Antarctic, which had so much to do with our flying in both regions, the other most important governing factor was the weather. We found that in both places the weather is clearer and flying more possible in the spring, before the warm winds of summer churn up the air and form fog and low clouds. When we went North on our second trip—the North Pole venture—we arrived there early in the spring, for the Gulf Stream opens up an avenue of approach to the Arctic Ocean such as does not exist in the South. In the latter part of April we were able to reach Spitsbergen, which corresponds roughly with the latitude of Little America in the South, without meeting any ice worthy of being called a pack. The weather was ideal, calm and clear. There, as in the South, we found that an upper air drift from the Arctic Ocean cleared the air. But as soon as the warmer weather arrived fog covered the sea. A few days after our North Pole flight was made atmospheric conditions would have blocked our attempt.

This condition of fog and low clouds also occurred in the south whenever there was a wind from the north off the sea, even though it might be high up. We went down there with the idea that the air flowed in toward the Pole several miles above the earth and then flowed out again, but the meteorologists soon found that this was not necessarily the case. Sometimes such conditions existed, but they generally were accompanied by clouds which obscured the horizon and kept the planes grounded. In the early spring, while it was still too cold to fly, the drift was almost steadily from the south and the air was clear. As the season progressed it was learned that flying could be done only when there was a drift from the southward several miles high, and as soon as it was checked, or the upper air was reversed, clouds again formed. So all flights were made early in the season and only when balloon soundings showed a high southerly drift.

On several occasions, both after the polar flight and the flight to the northeast, the sky was obscured by a shift of wind within a short time after the plane landed. To those who are used to flying over the dark surface of fields or woods, this obstacle of clouds may seem somewhat overrated, but in the polar regions, particularly in the Antarctic, where the surface below is white, clouds cause so much diffusion of light that the surface cannot be seen, the horizon is invisible, and one never knows except by the unreliable altimeter, which is subject to barometric change, just how far the plane is above the ground. So it can be seen that clear weather is of paramount importance in both polar regions when flying is being done, and in both places the clearest weather is early in the year.

This is the reason that it is necessary to stay in the Antarctic over the winter in order to do any extended geographical work by airplane, for in the early spring the land is inaccessible because of its rim of pack ice. By giving thought to polar flying and exercising patience, flights can be made with a reasonable chance of success. Of course an engine failure would nine times out of 10 be bad. But carelessness or slipshod methods in the south polar region are almost certain to end disastrously. The flying seems easy, but a lot of thought must go into each flight.

Haines' Great Part.

This calls to my mind the very great contribution William Haines made to four of our flights—the North and South Pole and the base laying and eastern flight of exploration in Antarctica. Polar weather conditions are tricky and Haine had no scattered weather stations to give him reports. Yet on all four of these flights we had sunshine all the way. Had Haines hesitated in making his decision those flights would have been failures and possible tragedies, for he selected the only periods where the weather was possible. So it will be seen that things were not so simple and certain as they seemed. All honor to William Haines. He had great responsibility. For example, should we arrive at Little America with that bowl of milk visibility that we so often got, we could not have landed without cracking up. With the same conditions at the mountains we could not have put down our base.

One can exist either in the Arctic or the Antarctic without much difficulty if sufficient preparation has been made. There is more fresh food in the Arctic, at least animal life exists there on the shores of the polar sea during the entire year, whereas in the Antarctic there is never any life beyond the shore line and the life that sojourns there during the winter months. But one can live in the Antarctic with security and health, in which respect it differs from the jungle, but it is not a place where one can tread without wariness and without adequate preparation. Like aviation, one small error may bring tragedy. Here again, if improperly prepared, death may be the penalty.

Little America Comforts.

We were less uncomfortable in the Antarctic than most persons seem to think. I have been constantly asked if we did not have trouble during the long night, whether some men did not break down under the strain, whether we had enough to eat, and how we stood the cold. It is impossible to answer such questions as those who ask them seem to desire. We had no trouble, we enjoyed the winter night as we had plenty of work to do, most of the men gained weight, and we seldom suffered from the cold when properly dressed, except at times when doing outside work and when on the trail in the early spring or late fall. Of course it is easy to freeze when on the trail if one is not properly equipped or if one does not know how to use one's clothes. I believe that by thought and care man can exist and travel anywhere on the face of the earth without too much hardship.

Martin Ronne, who had spent five winters in polar regions, four with Amundsen and one with us, the last when he was 68 years old, summed it all up one day last winter when he said:

"When I am home and read about the Antarctic, it seems very cold, but when I am here it doesn't seem cold at all."

Of course, Ronne did not have any outside work. And on another occasion Martin uttered the wise statement: "Work all the time, everything all right." That is the way to overcome the monotony of the long winter night.

Ross Ice Barrier.

I would be remiss not to mention the great Ross Ice Barrier that is peculiar to Antarctica. I know of no more interesting natural phenomenon than this great sheet of ice and snow. After living a year on it we find ourselves still puzzled by it. For hundreds of feet we tunneled the Barrier in all directions; we built snow rooms down beneath its surface; we traveled by dog teams for over 1000 miles over it and photographed 50,000 square miles of it from the air. And yet it still has for us that fascination that the unknown inspires. It is 400 miles long in an east and west direction, but from our airplane we saw that it extends on indefinitely to the east ward. Where does it go and what mystery lies at its end?

This great sheet of snow is largely water-borne. It is from a few feet to 200 feet high above the water, and in places must go at least 500 feet beneath the water. It is hard-packed snow down as far as the water, and from there on becomes ice. How was this great sheet of snow and ice formed? We think perhaps we can answer that. But why does it not break off in pieces from the attacks of the sea and float off in the form of icebergs? It does break off somewhat, of course, but apparently is not receding. We know that in one place it rests on the bottom of the sea. However, our camp at Little America was over 1500 feet of water.

There are a few things we can add to the knowledge our predecessors have gained about the Barrier, but then there are a great many things that we cannot tell the scientists. But 10 years from now we believe that our surveys and photographs will tell an interesting story.

Widely as the Arctic and Antarctic differ, in their geographical characteristics, they are one in their fascination and beauty. To have seen them both is a rare privilege, and the call to revisit them is almost irresistible. Icebound sea or snowy mountain-rimmed plateau, the polar regions are one in their appeal to all that is most adventurous in man.

TO ASSIST WET CANDIDATES FOR CONGRESS FROM MISSOURI

A plan to assist all Missouri candidates for the United States Senate and House of Representatives who favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment has been completed by the Missouri Association Against Prohibition with headquarters in the Security Building.

James W. Byrnes, vice president of the organization, has written each candidate who is favorable to the organization's views to send a copy of his opening statement so that it can be printed and mailed to voters in his district by the association before the coming primaries.

European Mail Closing Time.

50 SCOUTS TO TOUR THROUGH EAST BY BUS

Kansas City Group to Join St. Louis Boys on Trip to Historical Spots.

About 50 Boy Scouts and scout leaders from St. Louis and Kansas City will leave Lindell and Kingshighway boulevards at 7 o'clock next Saturday morning for a three-weeks' bus tour to Washington, Gettysburg, New York and other places of historical interest. The tour will be made in busses belonging to the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, which is sponsoring the trip as one of its annual Roving Camps.

The Roving Camp idea was introduced to scouting about five years ago, when a group of Irondale campers were taken on a short trip to Washington. Requests for another trip the next year were so numerous that a regular schedule of two tours a year was worked out. Later longer trips were added, to Yellowstone Park, the Black Hills, and Colorado. All these tours were primarily for St. Louis scouts, although one or two scouts from other cities usually went along.

This year, however, marks the first time another council has formally participated, Kansas City having made application for 13 places in the busses. The Kansas City scouts will come to St. Louis Friday by one of the busses sent from here for that purpose. They will camp on the outskirts of the city Friday night, and be brought to the starting point in time to meet their fellow travelers. The same bus will be used for their return to Kansas City after the tour is completed.

Different routes will be followed on the going and return portions of the trip. The former will lead through Indianapolis, Columbus, Wheeling and Gettysburg to Washington, while the latter will go through Atlantic City, New York, Niagara Falls, Cleveland and Dayton, and thence back to St. Louis. One night camps will be made at each of the places mentioned, except at Washington, where the Scouts will stay for four days, and at Atlantic City and New York, where two days each will be spent.

While in Washington the Scouts will visit the Capitol, the House of Congress, Mount Vernon, and other historical spots. Negotiations have also been opened to induce President Hoover to receive the campers, and perhaps to be photographed with them.

The tour will be under the direction of Charles H. Mills, activities director of the local council, who had charge of the tours last year. Mills will also conduct another Western tour, to Yellowstone, the Teton Hills, the Black Hills, and the Deadwood rodeo, after the Eastern campers return. This latter trip may be the last the council will take to the West.

Even should the Western tours be abandoned, however, those to the East have proved too popular to be discontinued. As evidence of this, only two of the 50 places on the present tour are as yet unfilled.

Troop Notes

West District.

Scoutmaster E. B. Langenberg and Assistant Scoutmaster Bruce Evans of Troop 2, of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, were presented with gifts by the scouts of the troop, in recognition of their service during the last year, at a meeting of the troop a week ago Friday evening.

Plans for a hike, to be taken next Sunday, were made at a meeting of Troop 70, of the Jewish Community Center, last Tuesday evening.

Fifty scouts were present at a banquet given by Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A., in honor of the troop camparall teams at the Y. M. H. A. a week ago Thursday evening. The banquet was given by Chairman J. Kleinhauser of the troop committee. Former Scoutmaster Meigner, who organized the troop more than 14 years ago, and was the first scoutmaster, spoke on the early activities. Committeeman Kleinhauser and Scoutmaster Goldsmith also spoke.

An entertainment for their parents was held by the scouts of Troop 46 of the Immanuel Baptist Church at troop headquarters in the church last Friday evening.

Twenty-six scouts went on an all-day bus trip to Koester Springs in St. Francois County a week ago yesterday. The trip was made in a council bus, obtained for the outing by Committeeman J. E. Hubbs.

The Panther patrol has been declared winner of an interpatrol contest conducted by Troop 246 of B'Nai Amoona recently. The Commanches took second place in the contest, which consisted of events in first aid, knot-tying, signaling and drill. Both Scoutmaster Charles Fischlowitz and Assistant Scoutmaster San Banet of the troop will be on the camp staff at Irondale this summer, while Assistant Scoutmaster Simon Becker will go to the camp each weekend to conduct religious services for Jewish scouts. In the absence of the leaders, the troop will be in the hands of Senior Patrol Leader Harvey Rudolph and Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Abe Gallant.

South District.

A Fathers and Sons meeting was held by Troop 247 of the Froebel School recently. The program consisted of scout demonstrations, songs, games and talks, the latter by Judge Hartmann, who spoke on Boy Welfare, and Field Executive Carl Laemmli, who talked on scouting.

North District.

Sixty-five scouts, fathers and mothers, were present at a picnic given for Troop 1, of the Benton School, by the Mothers' Auxiliary of the troop at Forest Park a week ago yesterday. The afternoon was spent playing games. In a contest between the scouts and their fathers, the scouts won. Mrs. R. B. Deason was chairman of the games and Mrs. William Otte chairman of the lunch.

Five visitors were present at the meeting of Troop 3, of the Grace Holy Cross Church, last Monday evening. They were Scoutmaster Hunt and Assistant Scoutmaster Wollberg of Troop 206, and Scoutmaster Kelly and Committeeman Knott and Joyce of Troop 205. Each of the visitors made a short talk. Scout Joseph Conrad passed tests in thrift and tracking, and the Flying Eagle patron won an interpatrol contest in second class work.

Nine scouts of Troop 19, of the Blair Howard School, attended a four-day Junion Officers' camp at the troop's new camp site recently.

Scout Burgette has been appointed quartermaster of Troop 69, of St. Elizabeth's Church, and Scout McGee scribe. Thirty scouts of the troop made a pilgrimage to Lincoln's tomb Memorial day. Scout Robert Green placed a wreath on the tomb and taps were sounded.

Troop 143 of the Elmbank Church, was reorganized under Scoutmaster Dan Miller and Assistant Scoutmaster Simpson at a meeting a week ago Friday.

A Troop Court of Honor, to award personal health merit badges to Scouts Jules Adder and Wylie Vale, and a second class badge to the former, was conducted by Troop 199, of the Nelson Presbyterian Church last Tuesday evening. More than 50 parents and friends, and 22 Scouts, were present at the court, which was presided over by the troop committee. The members were Chairman J. F. Small, the Rev. Mr. Beeding, Charles Lawson and C. E. Hampton. An entertainment was also given by the Scouts, the lion patrol demonstrating knot-tying, the the Eagles signaling, and the Moose first aid. Scout Walter Young played several banjo solos accompanied by his father at the piano. Field Executive Nusser gave a talk on "Scouting Objectives and Principles," and ice cream and cake were served.

Several one and two-week camps are planned for this summer by Troop 148, of the Hyde Park Congregational Church. Most of the camps will be held at the Wigwam, the troop cabin near the Chain of Rocks.

stable, so that the peace of the world is undisturbed.

Great Britain's Difficulties.

We understand very well indeed the difficulties which this project contains for the British Empire. Wickham Steed published in the Sunday Times a remarkable study of the Briand memorandum in which he explains very clearly the meaning of the memorandum and the possible consequences should the ideas contained therein be put into execution. He writes: "Although Great Britain is not part of the continent of Europe, she cannot be indifferent to European matters. The principal danger to Britain and Pax Britanica is war." F. Britton Austin, writing in the Sunday Pictorial places himself strongly in favor of the French proposition. And we must not forget the very strong speech on the subject of coal delivered at Geneva by Minister Graham. We sincerely desire to help England to solve its unemployment problem. Why should she not accept our offer of help and collaboration which we proffer in all sincerity? We Frenchmen are neighbors of England. We shall be happy to help her in her economic fight just as she has helped us in our battle with the enemy.

I was greatly impressed by the intelligent manner in which the Holland press discussed the memorandum. They are right in stating that Briand's memorandum is an event of great importance, for it is placed upon a plane of realities and ideas which hitherto has lain dormant in the minds of thinkers only. Let us thank particularly the Telegraef for having stated its opinion that the action of France in proposing this plan is entirely disinterested. We are simply seeking our part of the benefits which will accrue to everyone. We are ready to listen to objections and criticisms. We ask simply that other countries help us to rationalize and Taylorize Europe. (The reference is probably to the doctrinal system of Nathaniel William Taylor (1786-1858), professor of theology in New Haven, Conn., who held that virtue is the choice of the highest good of the universe.)

REAL ESTATE

OFFERS MADE FOR WRIGHT BUILDING, THIRD AND OLIVE

Structure on Southwest Corner Declared Real Estate Prize if Street Widening Is Accomplished.

BROADWAY PROPERTY REPORTED IN DEMAND

Insurance Firm Negotiating for Building at Northwest Corner of Grand and Windsor Place.

By Berry Moore

Reports of the week indicate revived activity in property on Third street, as well as on Broadway and on Fourth street in the downtown district.

Offers were disclosed yesterday for the property at the southwest corner of Third and Olive streets, owned by the Thomas Wright Investment Co. This holding fronts 86 feet on Olive with a depth of 26 feet on Third. A two-story building occupies the site, which is opposite the old sub-postoffice.

Guy H. Wright, president of the Wright Investment Co., said several offers had been made for the corner, which was wanted, he said, with the adjoining property, presumably for a large commercial structure. Negotiations were under way, he said, for a renewal of an option on the corner, given several months ago. A total frontage of 135 feet is sought on Third street.

A real estate prize is seen in the Wright holding, which would command one of the most important downtown intersections east of Fourth street, with the widening of Third street between Chouteau avenue and Franklin avenue, as is now proposed.

The project to widen Third street conforms to the plan for the opening of the upper deck of the Eads Bridge as a free public highway. Options, it is understood, are being obtained on property on both sides of Third street.

Broadway-Olive Offers.

Overtures are reported again for the former National Bank of Commerce Building and also for the Liberty Central Trust Building, at southeast and southwest corners of Broadway and Olive, respectively.

The ground floor of the former National Bank of Commerce Building, comprising a half block, forms imposing quarters for a life insurance company, or other large concern. With the exception of the ground floor, occupied by the National Bank of Commerce before it merged with the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co., the building is nearly all rented. The Northwestern Life Insurance Co., which occupies several floors of the building, has been regarded as a potential purchaser.

The ground floor and several upper floors of the Liberty Central Trust Building are being remodeled for the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., which will occupy them under a long lease, together with an adjoining quarters. This building, embracing a quarter of a block, was placed on sale following the merger of the Liberty Central Trust Co. with the First National Bank. It is nearly all under lease.

A reassuring development in this part of the city was the long lease taken by the St. Louis Southwestern Railroad (the Cotton Belt) of quarters in the Planters Building at Fourth and Pine streets for its general offices. The railroad, now occupying five floors in the Buder Building at Seventh and Market streets, will remove to its new quarters the latter part of this month. It will have two entire upper floors, and space on the ground floor and in the basement of the Planters building, which is to be known as the Cotton Belt Building.

Final papers have been passed in the sale to Claude E. Vrooman of the fee to the Rialto Building property at the southeast corner of Fourth and Olive streets. The sale was made subject to a 99-year lease, executed in 1891, providing for an annual net rental of $9,500. Vrooman is regarded as a likely purchaser of the leasehold, which would give him absolute control of the property.

Vrooman built the St. Regis apartments at Lindell boulevard and Kingshighway which he sold to the International Life Insurance Co. He has been prominent in apartment building operations in the West End for several years.

Grand Boulevard Activities.

Grand boulevard was an active center of negotiations involving both sales and leases as well as new building plans.

A life insurance company is concluding negotiations for the purchase of the four-story building at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Windsor place, owned by the Burdeau Realty Co., of which George T. Burdeau is president. The name of the insur-

Grand Boulevard Activities.

Grand boulevard was an active center of negotiations involving both sales and leases as well as new building plans.

A life insurance company is concluding negotiations for the purchase of the four-story building at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Windsor place, owned by the Burdeau Realty Co., of which George T. Burdeau is president. The name of the insurance company is withheld pending conclusion of the deal.

The building, which is of fireproof construction, fronts 40 feet on Grand with a depth of 125 feet on Windsor. Office rooms are on the upper floors and stores on the ground floors. The life insurance company has plans for remodeling the building for its local business.

This holding forms one of the most attractive investments in the Grand boulevard district, with great speculative possibilities. It was acquired by the Burdeau company, an operating company, a little less than a year ago in a trade with Washington University.

Real estate in this part of the city has reflected renewed activity, following the lease acquired of quarters at the northwest corner of Grand and Delmar boulevard, in the Pythian building, for the new Mercantile Commerce National Bank in St. Louis.

The new bank will occupy the corner part of the lower floor. The building is fireproof and was recently completed at a cost of $1,000,000, exclusive of the site. The stock in the bank will be owned entirely by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust company.

Many concerns and persons employed in this part of the city already have been enlisted as depositors of the new bank, which is expected to be formally opened July 10.

Plans are announced for a four-story building to be erected by Frederic A. Kehl, president of the Federal Brilliant Co., on the Washington-Grand cut-off, on the north side of Washington, east of Grand. It will be occupied by the Federal company with studios and the latest porcelain enameled furniture and equipment, together with an addition to the present glass tube plant for the purpose of creating new combinations in Neon gas and porcelain electric signs.

The building was designed by Aegerter & Bailey, architects, and is being constructed under the supervision of the H. O. Hirsch & Co.

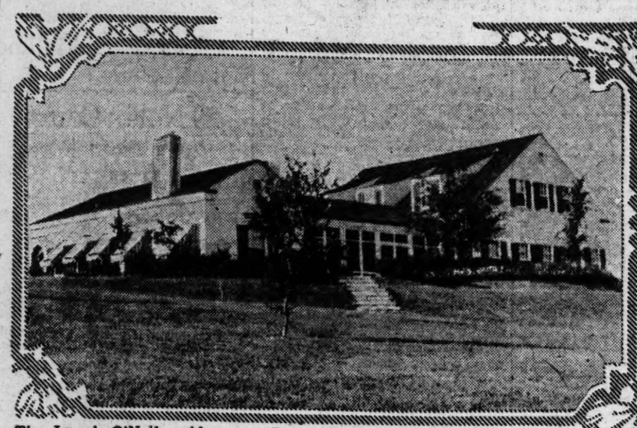
It is reported that the ground floor and basement of the Ranelagh apartment building at the northwest corner of De Baliviere and McPherson avenues, is wanted for a department store. The building has a frontage of 100 feet on De Baliviere. It is operated in connection with the Wilmar Hotel and Trellis Tea Room, adjoining on the north.

Both buildings, six and eight stories, respectively, are owned by Mrs. Minnie Housam, real estate agent and operator, and member of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

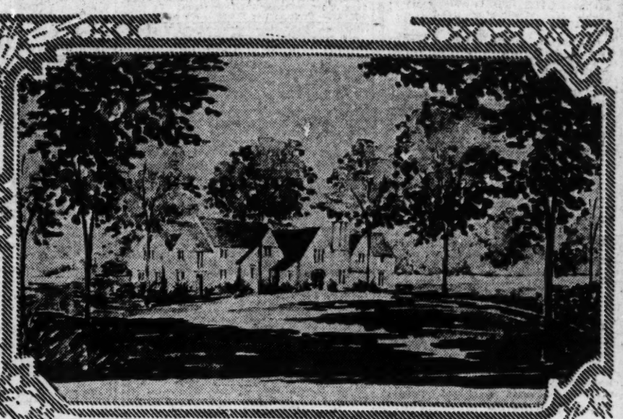
Flat at 4179 Castleman Sold.

The single flat, No. 4179 Castleman avenue, has been sold by the Erwin A. Koehler Agency to a client. The seller of this transaction was represented by Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., which has turned over the management of this property to the Koehler Agency.

Home of New National Bank and Residences in the Week's News



The Joseph O'Neil residence on Denny Road in the Village of Huntleigh sold to Duncan I. Meier through Cornet & Zeibig.



Residence for Mr. J. M. Nelson, Jr., being erected on Dromara Drive in McKnight Village, St. Louis County.

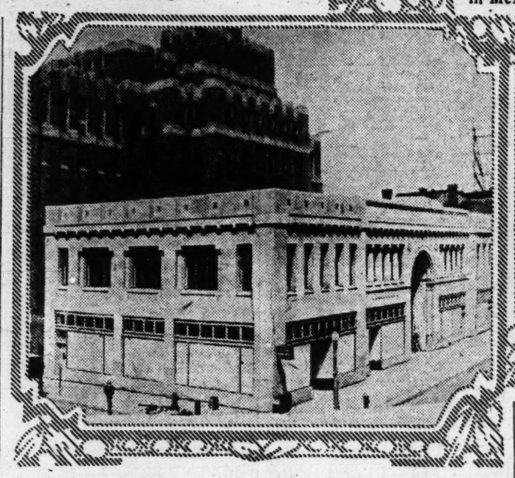
HARLAN BARTHOLOMEW BUYS IN BRENTWOOD

City Plan Expert Understood to Be Planning New Residence.

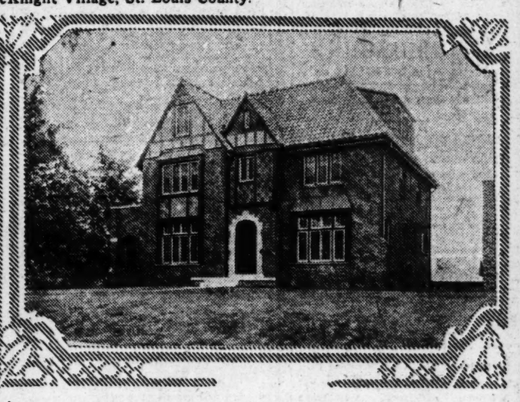
Harland Bartholomew, city plan expert, has purchased a lot in Brentmoor Park and plans, it is understood, to build a residence. The sale was negotiated by Noel Carpenter, sales manager of James M. Carpenter Co. The grantors were Dr. and Mrs. George W. Cale Jr., represented by Arthur W. Rehfeldt.

A site west of the St. Louis Country Club, just east of the Upper Ladue section, was prchased through Carpenter & Co. by Harold R. Morehead, who has plans for a residence, construction of which is to begin at once.

Carpenter & Co. also announces the sale of another site in the same section to Joseph C. Sanders for Joseph E. Doyle, who also has building plans, it is reported.



Quarters leased in the Pythian Building at the northwest corner of Grand and Delmar Boulevards for the new Mercantile-Commerce National Bank in St. Louis.



Residence recently completed at 7200 Kingsbury Blvd. by a client of the Chauncey P. Heath R. E. Co.

ST. LOUISAN TO TELL REALTY CONVENTION ABOUT PLANNING

Harland Bartholomew, St. Louis city planning expert, who has advised Washington, Los Angeles and 60 other American cities, will discuss the possibility of making dilapidated areas active and useful at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Toronto, Canada, July 9, 10 and 11. He will suggest what realty dealers can do to revitalize their districts. He will speak on "Can Blighted Urban Areas Be Rehabilitated?"

How the modern subdivider must understand city planning and how he can co-ordinate his work with that of the city will be emphasized at the sessions of the Home Builders and Subdividers. Jacob L. Crane Jr., Chicago, engineer, town planner and landscape architect, will speak on "The City Planner and the Subdivider."

Reduction in the costs of homes and home sites which are made possible by corresponding reductions in the expenses involved in selling real estate will be described by L. T. Stevenson, Pittsburg, Pa. Stevenson believes that one of the important factors in insuring that the home purchaser gets the home which fits his needs and which he is able to buy is the salesman who knows his real estate thoroughly and who is capable of studying the individual needs of each client. He will discuss the development of sales personnel and selling costs.

How the subdivider can use his advertising budget to get the most in returns from it will be explained by Hugh Potter, Houston, Tex., developer of River Oaks. Potter is chairman of the Association's special committee on real estate advertising.

George P. Ellis, Chicago, consulting accountant for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will speak on "The Developer and the Income Tax."

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange delegation of 75 has arranged for a special train to Toronto over the Wabash and Canadian Pacific. The group will leave Monday evening, July 8, and will arrive in Toronto Tuesday afternoon.

What the State real estate associations can do to help real estate owners obtain more equitable taxes on their properties; how State associations can best co-operate in the establishment and enforcement of real estate license laws to protect the public from the uninformed and unscrupulous real estate seller; how the educational work of the State real estate association can be co-ordinated with the State University curriculum in making available the best course in real estate—these are some of the many subjects which presidents and secretaries of State real estate associations have suggested for discussion at the meeting of the states council of the convention. The states council, whose members are presidents and secretaries of state real estate associations, will meet July 8.

An increase of 2.7 in real estate activity for April over March is reported by the National Association.

10 HOMES BUILT AND SOLD IN TESLA PLACE, WEBSTER

James C. Morfit reports all but a few lots sold on Olive Court and Locust Court in Tesla place, Webster Groves. Ten homes have been built and sold. One new stone residence of the early American farm house type is near completion. Two more houses are to be started shortly. Tesla Place is three blocks from the car line, two blocks from the Missouri Pacific and the Frisco stations, and is near the Westborough and Algonquin Country Clubs. It adjoins Sherwood Forest and Webster Hills.

THREE APARTMENTS SOLD BY SHELP FOR $120,000

W. B. Shelp & Co. report the sale of three apartment buildings for $120,000—755 Heman avenue, University City, containing six apartments of six rooms each, sold for Fred D. Harris to William H. Hopmeier; 6630 Clemens, corner of Syracuse, containing six apartments of seven rooms each, was sold for John F. Luebke to Armandine C. Alphonse; 5931 Washington, containing six suites of five rooms each, was sold for a client to Roy Gringinger. All parties were represented by Shelp, and the properties have been placed under Shelp's management.

HEMMELMANN - SPACKLER CO. SELLS 3 HOUSES AND FLAT

Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

May Building Awards Off 5 Per Cent in 37 States

Value of Projects Put at $457,416,000 by F. W. Dodge Corporation—$482,876,700 in April.

May awards for new building and engineering projects in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains totaled $457,416,000, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a decline of 5 per cent from the total of $482,876,700 for the preceding month. The last month's record was 22 per cent below the May, 1929, total of $587,765,900. For the first five months of the year construction contracts totaled $2,037,439,900. This was a decline of 18 per cent from the total of $2,485,655,700 for the corresponding period of 1929.

For the fifth consecutive month public works and utilities were the most important of all classes. This group totaled $134,913,100, or 29 per cent of all awards in May. Residential building amounted to $116,568,500, or 25 per cent of the total; contracts for commercial buildings amounted to $73,340,200 or 16 per cent; and industrial structures totaled $54,566,400 or 12 per cent. All other classes of non-residential buildings were 18 per cent of the May total.

Contemplated new work of all kinds reported in May amounted to $643,405,900, compared with $954,618,300 for the previous month and $847,156,600 for May, 1929.

St. Louis Territory.

The St. Louis territory (Southern Illinois, Eastern Missouri, Northeast Arkansas, Western Tennessee and Northwest Mississippi) reported larger construction contracts than in the preceding month but showed a decline from May, 1929. The May total amounted to $21,882,800 as compared with $18,622,000 for the previous month and $26,331,600 for May of last year. For the first five months of the year construction contracts awarded in this territory reached $79,549,100. This compared with $111,970,000 for the corresponding five months of 1929.

Public works and utilities totaled $9,975,500 in May or 46 per cent of all awards. Residential buildings were next in importance with $4,318,800 or 20 per cent; commercial structures totaled $2,766,700 or 13 per cent, and educational buildings amounted to $2,100,700 or 10 per cent. All other nonresidential construction was 11 per cent of the May total.

Contemplated work reported in May totaled $24,553,900 as against $30,313,200 for the previous month and $23,945,900 for May of last year.

Kansas City Territory.

May contracts awarded in the Kansas City district (Western Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska) amounted to $15,898,700 and compared with $23,993,000 for the previous month and $24,578,500 for May a year ago. For the year to date construction contracts let in this area amounted to $122,034,100. This was a gain of 17 per cent over the total of $104,892,300 reported for the corresponding period of last year.

Commercial buildings showed the largest contract total for the month with $4,746,700 or 25 per cent of all awards reported during May. Public works and utilities amounted to $4,305,300 or 23 per cent; residential buildings aggregated $3,970,700 or 21 per cent; and educational buildings amounted to $2,432,600 or 13 per cent. All other classes of non-residential buildings were 18 per cent of the May total contract record.

Contemplated work reported in May amounted to $22,032,400 as against $41,663,400 for the previous month and $40,883,800 for May, 1929.

Chicago Territory.

Awards for new building and engineering work in May in the Chicago territory (Northern Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Eastern and Southern Wisconsin), aggregated $59,468,200 as compared with $64,758,800 for the previous month and $102,912,200 for May, 1929. For the year to date construction contracts in this territory amounted to $254,923,100 as against $395,923,400 for the corresponding five months of 1929.

About one-third of the month's new construction awards was for public works and utilities. This class totaled $19,453,600. Residential buildings amounted to $15,649,700 or 26 per cent of the total; commercial buildings aggregated $7,871,100 or 13 per cent; and industrial building $7,828,300 or 12 per cent. All other non-residential buildings were 16 per cent of the May awards.

New construction reported as in the contemplated stage in May amounted to $113,158,100. This was a large gain over both the preceding month's total of $77,443,000 and the May, 1929, figure amounting to $93,258,000.

MODEL HOME BUILT OF BRICK OPENED IN WENZLICK PARK

A model home has just been opened for inspection in Wenzlick Park. This home has been built with the idea of proving to prospective home owners that a home dsigned by an architect, complete in every detail, can be built to sell for less than $10,000.

This model home is built of matt brick, has hot-water heat, vitrolite walls in the bathroom and kitchen, cut-stone fireplace and many other features not generally found in a moderately priced home.

Month's Sales $217,100.

H. A. O'Rourke, Inc., announces the sales of 27 properties in May, aggregating $217,100 in value.

Monthly Payment Loans

Monthly principal payments of $5 per $1000. Loans for periods of from 5 to 16 years, privilege of prepayment without bonus. Interest 6%, reduces monthly as principal payments are made.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART TEN — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 15, 1930. — PAGES 1—4F

And Now for "Desert Song"

Romberg's Stirring Robin Hood Operetta of Colorful Morocco, Third Offering of the Municipal Opera Season, Opens Tomorrow Night in Forest Park With Leonard Ceeley and Margaret Carlisle in Leading Roles and With Several Newcomers in Large Cast.

"THE Desert Song," Sigmund Romberg's fine operetta, opens tomorrow night in Forest Park, with a special cast headed by Leonard Ceeley who had the leading role of "The Red Shadow" in the New York company, and which includes Edna Torrence who created, in the original Broadway production, the exotic character of Azuri, the Oriental dancing girl whose love and jealousy do much to motivate the stirring dramatic story. "The Circus Princess," second opera in Municipal Opera's repertory this season, sings its charming romance of tanbark and tinsel for the last time tonight.

Sun-drenched Morocco, with its fanatical Riffian tribesman, its conquering French soldiery, its strange and lovely women, forms the background of the romantic Robin Hood story of "The Desert Song," which Otto Harbach has based upon the recent conquest of the Riff by the French, and for which Sigmund Romberg has provided a musical setting which is filled with rousing song and fairly sparkles with strange dancing rhythms. The spirit of song and story will be reflected it is reported, in the bold, bizarre brilliance of the stage settings and costume investiture which Milton I. Shubert and his artist-aides have especially created for Municipal Opera's stage. Rugged mountain scenes, barbaric splendors in the native settlements, and the spirit of Moorish architecture in the French headquarters will pass in succession upon the revolving stage and come to a climax in the great hall of the Shiek Ali Ben Ali. Against that background move the French soldiers in smart and brilliant uniforms mingling with the natives in their great burnooses.

The spice of adventure which speeds the romance of "The Desert Song" has made it one of the outstanding hits among modern American operettas. For a year and a half it ran at the Casino, Imperial, and Century theaters in New York. There were 14 months of success in London, where it played at time-honored Drury Lane; Chicago saw it for nine consecutive months without tiring of its colorful story and its tingling tunes. It ran entire seasons in Los Angeles and San Francisco and a entire summer in Detroit and has been presented in Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Australia. So successful was its first day at the Shubert Theater here in St. Louis, it was brought back for a second visit some months later.

WITH speed in action upon the stage there develops to rousing choruses a lilting songs, the story of Pierre Birabeau, a young officer in the French Colonials who, resenting the harsh treatment of the natives by their white rulers, is forced to resign from the army. With youthful enthusiasm he dreams of becoming a modern Robin Hood among the mountain tribesmen and, concealing his identity behind a hood and mask, gathers about him a band of fearless warriors and harasses the disciplinary forces of the French and Spanish militia. As The Red Shadow he becomes a thorn in the French War Office which finally selects Gen. Birabeau, the father of Pierre, to go to Morocco as Governor of the province in which the mysterious outlaw is operating, with instructions to wipe out the dreaded leader and his band. Of course, the General is not aware of the fact that the Red Shadow is his son, and Pierre, by many ruses, manages to continue his dual activities, posing as a ne'er-do-well son at home and devising plausible excuses for his absence when he rides out on one of his punitive expeditions.

Complications develop when Margot Bonvalet, a girl whom Pierre has loved in Paris, comes to Morocco as a guest in his father's home. The girl is young and romantic, with ideas of sheiks and desert lands derived from popular novels, and failing to find romance in the orderly life of the Governor's mansion, becomes fascinated by the stories of the mysterious Red Shadow. Pierre, unable to disclose his identity to the girl he loves, watches her slipping from his grasp and about to be married to Captain Fontaine, of the Foreign Legion. In desperation he abducts Margot and carries her off to the palace of Ali Ben Ali, a Caid of the Riffs.

Azuri, a native dancing girl, who has been ordered from Gen. Birabeau's home because of her infatuation for Capt. Fontaine, and who has learned the secret of The Red Shadow's identity, plans to revenge herself on the Governor by leading him to the palace of Ali Ben Ali and maneuvering a duel between father and son for the possession of Margot. Of course, Birabeau does not recognize his son in the cloak and mask of The Red Shadow and he goads the young man on to mortal combat. Rather than cross swords with his father, however, Pierre gives the girl permission to return to her home, and brings upon himself the tribal punishment of the Riffs for failing to uphold his leadership. He is unarmed and unhorsed and sent out in the desert, presumably to a certain death.

OF COURSE, all the complications are finally straightened out, Pierre's life is spared, circumstances make it possible for him to return to his father's home in his true colors, and he wins the girl he loves.

Laughter mingles with the romance, for interwoven with the adventures of the Red Shadow are those of Benjamin Kidd, society correspondent of the Paris Herald, and Susan, the General's ward with whom he is in love and with whom he sets forth intrepidly to interview the bandit chieftain. The resultant fun is convulsing in its hilarity.

Leonard Ceeley, playing The Red Shadow in the New York production, made one of the distinctive hits of his Broadway career. Edna Torrence, astonishing in agility and dazzling with her acrobats, achieved a memorable characterization as the dancing girl Azuri in the Broadway production and won herself many St. Louis admirers in the same role here. Margaret Carlisle, already by reason of lovely voice and personal charm a local favorite, is cast as Margot, the young Parisian who, fresh from a convent, has adventured to Morocco to see the world, and John Clarke, who has been a successful Capt. Fontaine, will make his singing debut upon Municipal Opera's stage in that role. He is an English tenor who graduated from grand opera into the light opera field where he has been a success both in England and the United States.

Jack Sheehan, whose comedy has been a feature of the two Municipal Opera productions this year, is cast as the correspondent of the Paris Herald and has the help of Doris Patston, who seconded his

DANCE AND GROW THIN

By Edna Torrence
Municipal Opera Dancer.

EVERYBODY knows about the apple and the doctor. But if I had my way I would change the old slogan. Like this: "Dancing each day keeps the doctor away." Not that I have anything against doctors. Except professionally. I knew too many of them that way when I was a child.

The doctor passed out of my life when the dance came in. Somebody had told my mother about dancing as a body builder. If anyone needed that sort of thing I did. I had been a weakly, puny child. Then, when I was 12, rather hoping against hope, my mother sent me to a dancing school. It was good-bye doctor.

And I haven't anything against women. But sometimes when I look about me I see veritable travesties of my sex, lazy, overdecked, self-indulgent rolls of fat who sit near me in the hotel dining room, and sadly make a meal on grapefruit loudly proclaiming that they are "reducing" now. And I see them looking forward to their 18 days of torture, the while I eat with a relish my rich, rare roast beef, my peas and potatoes and salad, and finish off with a pastry as gooey as any shop-girl's lunch. I feel like dancing over to my grapefruit girl, not because I am vain, but because I want to help. I want to show her what she could eat—and do—if she would only dance.

I weigh—it so happens—118 pounds. And I eat everything. Roast beef, rare, and steaks, of course, for strength. Very little other meat. All the vegetables. I don't have to think of starch and all those things. Yet, let me stop my dancing for a week and I will gain five pounds. It would be easy for me to get slow and sluggish—if I didn't dance.

ANY other exercise might do as well, perhaps. I don't know. Swimming, riding, walking, calisthenics. But to me they lack the lure of dancing. I can understand how a swimmer delights in conquering an element to which he was not born, triumphing over the difficulties of swimming's technique. Or a rider's delight in the comradeship of a good horse. Or a walker's pleasure in the things he sees along the road—when that road is not overrun with motor cars. But to me the dance is not only an exercise—it is an expression.

In childhood, as I said, I was a weakling. We lived in Los Angeles, my mother, my brother, myself. When mother turned to the dance to help build my body she fortunately chose a fine teacher.

My spine was curiously limber. It was easier for me to bend backward and touch the floor than not to touch the floor when I bent back. My teacher noted that peculiarity. After I had the foundation technic she advised that I study acrobatic dancing. And so I went to New York. That was hard work. But thanks to my training I had grown strong and could stand it, thrive at it.

Then I went back to Los Angeles. I was like every other girl who has determined on a stage career. For of course that had been settled upon when I went in for acrobatic dancing. I had begun to dance in order to live. I should continue to dance—now that I was strong—for a livelihood. And so I volunteered to dance at every benefit I heard about. And finally there was a Christmas benefit at the Philharmonic attended by the manager of the Hill Street Theater in Los Angeles. He engaged me, and launched me in vaudeville.

MY brother John is a young violinist. I took him with me into the act and we have been together ever since. He and I and my mother. Even when, for two years I was playing Azuri in "The Desert Song," John went with me, continuing his studies on the violin, with the concertmaster of the company's orchestra.

I had reached New York in vaudeville and was playing at the Hippodrome. A certain man had a little daughter, who had a birthday. He took her to the Hip, and to the Toyland below. Incidentally he "caught" my act, as they say in vaudeville. That night I had an offer to play Azuri. He was the producer of "The Desert Song."

My dream was realized. I was on Broadway, dancing in a great operetta, a great success. I opened Monday—and I was numb, and dumb. Dazed, like one in a dream. Yet I went through my part perfectly. When people said something to me about it I just looked at them. I wasn't elated. I wasn't excited. I was just dumb.

Then, at the Wednesday matinee I woke up. I realized what it all meant. I could sense that here was my future—in the hollow of my hand. To make or mar. And I was paralyzed. I couldn't get a single cue. I couldn't remember my lines. I couldn't even get on the stage. Alan Waterous, who was then playing Capt. Fontaine, once that afternoon walked over to the wings, picked me up and carried me bodily on the stage. I had been too paralyzed to walk on. That passed, of course, and there followed two solid years as Azuri.

OF course I take care of myself. I don't drink. I don't smoke. I don't stay up at night. After the show a lunch—I am almost ashamed to tell you how hearty a lunch—and then straight to bed. As I see it I have a career, and I can't afford to throw it away on parties. As a dancer I need to be in the best of health. I have to stay that way. I eat, as I say, anything. But I always eat my dinner sufficiently long before my performance to permit it to thoroughly digest. That is essential before any strenuous exercise. Recently in Chicago a troupe of acrobats played on the same bill with us. It was a holiday and there were four shows that day. The acrobats tried to grab a lunch between the shows. One had eaten heartily. He died immediately after his act, back stage, in my brother's arms.

As a family, of course, we live in hotels. We see all about us women who live in them. So many trying the 18-day diet. Women who lie abed late, breakfast and play bridge, take the air in their closed cars, can't walk four blocks without exhaustion, and whose dinner is preceded by cocktails, as their evenings are finished with highballs. No wonder their bodies grow stagnant, sluggish, unhealthy, that they themselves grow nervous, temperamental, hypochondriac.

Shubert Reopens For a Showing of "All Quiet" Film

THE widely heralded picturization of Erich Maria Remarque's epic of the World War, "All Quiet on the Western Front," had its premiere in St. Louis last night at the Shubert Theater.

The local engagement is incidental to the simultaneous presentation of "All Quiet on the Western Front," as an attraction in "legit" theaters around the country with openings on the same night in Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Toronto. Other openings are to follow as rapidly as the theaters can be reconditioned for the purpose. The Shubert was wired especially for this engagement.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" is a literal screen transcription of Remarque's record-breaking book, sales of which have exceeded 2,000,000 copies. The Universal Film Company presents the production as a "super" picture produced and directed with the aim of carrying the story of the book over to the screen without color or bias.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" will be shown daily at 2:30 and 8:30, all seats being reserved.

Cinema Price War Begins

Loew's Announces It Will Meet Fox Cut in Admission Charges and Even Go the Grand Avenue House Ten Cents Better—Skouras and St. Louis Sitting Tight for the Present, but Missouri Will Hurry Stage Show — Olsen and Johnson for Films.

By NIE.

MOTION picture theater history is being made—or unmade—in St. Louis today with the ears of every big cinema palace manager in the country extended to hear the figures on the amount of business done at the Fox house on Grand Avenue this afternoon and tonight. The cash customers, too, have a decided interest in the matter for the outcome may bring about a reduction in the price of admissions throughout the land.

For the local Fox theater, starting last Friday, made a pretty drastic cut in the incoming tax on patrons. Fox houses in Brooklyn and Detroit had already done the same thing and were rewarded immediately with record breaking crowds. If St. Louis follows suit the same reduction will be put in effect throughout the country.

So far only one St. Louis theater has followed the Fox lead. In an advertisement today Loew's announces that starting next Friday it will slash prices—and while it is doing it will cut under the new scale at the Fox house with a 40-cent top admission charge instead of putting it at a half dollar.

The Skouras boys are undecided as to what to do but, first of all, they will hurry up the new stage show policy at the Missouri, which will be the chief sufferer from the Fox cut across the street. Probably when the stage show is ready the Missouri will come out with a new line of prices, too. There is likely to be no change at the Ambassador and the St. Louis is not considering, at the moment, a reduction being convinced that its RKO vaudeville with feature pictures will still be worth what has been asked in the past.

Any way the war is on and the customers can afford to sit back and laugh and enjoy themselves while the magnates wonder where it all will end.

THE St. Louis situation is complicated in several ways, that is from the manager's standpoint. The city is terribly overseated to begin with. Then, in the summer, the Municipal Opera takes from four to six thousand dollars a night from potential movie patrons. And, on top of this a new menace has sprung up in the pee-wee golf courses which have grown like mushrooms over night. The immense popularity of this new amusement device is amazing. One of the pasture pool parks is reported to be taking in $500 a day and every one of them in the city is making big money. They are packed nightly with several thousand young people, all of whom might be at the movies if they had no other place to go.

There is still another complication which is likely to benefit movie goers in the end. The neighborhood theaters playing Fox pictures have already begun to complain that a reduction in prices in the big first run house will ruin the following runs in the smaller theaters. They are demanding a cut in the rental prices of films so that they can reduce their own admission charges.

If the Missouri and Ambassador—with their Paramount, First National and Warner films come down in price the neighborhood show places will have further cause for complaint. They will be in the same fix when Loew's with its Metro films, cuts the charges.

It may be, therefore, that the film makers, who also own the first run theaters, may be forced to step in and put an end to a price cutting war but while it lasts things will be pretty good—for the patrons.

WHILE the price war is on both the Fox and Loew's are going to shoot with some big pictures to help bring the crowds in and the Missouri and Ambassador will depend upon their best films, some of which they intended to save for cool weather in the fall, to hang on to their patrons. The first star and picture to be seen at Loew's under the new price policy will be Lillian Gish in "One Romantic Night," to be followed by "The Big House," "Blushing Brides," "The Sea Bat," "The Unholy Three," "Let Us Be Gay," "March of Time" and Gloria Swanson in "What a Widow."

George Fitzmaurice, who made the picture, "The Bad One," Dolores Del Rio's first talkie, which is at Loew's this week, earned his reputation as one of the screen's foremost pictorialists through his ability to blend beauty and romance with vivid emotional action. One usually searches for backgrounds in the case of successful men. Fitzmaurice was a painter, plying his ancient art in the ateliers of Paris, and later in some of the celebrated art repositories.

He was born in Paris of Irish parents, inheriting their native romanticism and aestheticism. From the French of his early youth he owes his ability to express himself.

From the very beginning he wanted to be a painter and consequently he apprenticed himself to various teachers of the art. His education in this direction was interrupted once when his parents took him for two years to India. On his return, however, he resumed his schooling and before he had reached his maturity was earning his own livelihood from his brush and pencil.

That training manifests itself today in the charm which invariably suffuses his dramatic compositions for the screen. It is said that no director in Hollywood, with the possible exception of D. W. Griffith, is more expert in dramatic grouping than Fitzmaurice.

Finding opportunity limited in France, he sailed for New York, but there he discovered that Americans were too commercial as a whole to spare sentiments and sympathy for a budding artist. Forced to earn a living at something else, he wrote a scenario which was accepted. That was in 1914.

Dick Arlen

In "The Border Legion," at the Missouri.

A student at heart, he studied motion picture production in all its phases and his diligence at this was rewarded later when he was given the direction of, "Stop Thief" for the Kleine Productions. Pathe secured his talents next, and for that pioneer organization he made "Arms and the Woman," "The Iron Heart," "The Mark of Caine," "Common Clay" and "The Japanese Nightingale."

In 1918 he joined the directorial staff of Paramount, making "The Society Exile," "To Have and to Hold," "Idols of Clay" and "Peter Ibbetson," with Wallace Reid and Elsie Ferguson, one of the most beautiful pictures ever shown on the screen.

His most recent productions are "Lilac Time," "The Barker," "His Captive Woman," "The Man and the Moment," all for First National; "Tiger Rose," for the War-

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

By Robert Littell

NEW YORK, June 14.

THE theme of this lecture, ladies and gentlemen — and won't you please take your seats quietly, is the Forn Draymah, as exemplified by the season which is even now sinking, to the tune of a certain amount of despair, behind the foothills of New Jersey. I have arbitrarily separated the Murrican from the Forn plays, and the former were neatly packed up, sealed and labeled a week ago.

Such a distinction is purely a convenience, since, in the course of holding the Dramah's or Drayma's, or Drammer's pulse, day by day, it is impossible, and also unwise, to distinguish between the native and the alien blood corpuscles. For art is international, etc., and knows no boundaries, etc., etc., and if our drama is any good, which on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays it seems to be anything but, that is because of the admixture of blood from beyond the water, where sister nations are also worshiping that great goddess, that fair Muse, etc., etc., etc.

To make a few other arbitrary distinctions, I shall divide the immigrants into those which we have seen before and those which are new to us; into original plays and revivals. Thereby delaying my shouting and hat throwing for the finest play of the year—barring Shakspeare, and how often I feel like barring him because of the way he is presented to us—one of the few really fine plays of modern times, Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya," until we have dealt with such more virgin timber as "The Apple Cart," "Topaze," "Red Rust," and "The Silver Tassie." Which foursome, speaking of them as plays only, seem to me by far the most interesting importations of the season of 1929-1930.

SEAN O'CASEY'S "The Silver Tassie," a strange mixture of abortive symbolism, biting tragedy and inappropriate humor, and certainly one of the few war plays worth reckoning with, was so badly performed by the Irish players that it was impossible to say how much of its failure to rise above flashes of extraordinary talent was due to them and how much to the author. I still regard it as a play I have read but not seen.

In "Red Dust" the Theater Guild, through its younger studio group, showed to America, 12 years after the October revolution, the very first play it has seen from Soviet Russia. A chaotic, floundering, burning document, woven clumsily of raw melodrama and living people. A play that I did not enjoy, but that I found strangely exciting and worth thinking about afterwards. But as performed by Herman Biberman and his young company, very uneven, crude and noisy.

Mr. Shaw's political extravaganza, "The Apple Cart," is very good and rather flimsy fun. An armchair, irresponsible piece, compared with such things as "Androcles" and "St. Joan." Any Shaw play is of course one of the events of the year, but by comparison with the rest of the crop "The Apple Cart," in which there is so much padding along with the verbal brilliance, seemed more of an event than perhaps it was.

M. Pagnol's "Topaze," largely because of the delightfully shaded and well imagined performance of Frank Morgan, I enjoyed as well as "The Apple Cart." A malicious frivolously dangerous play, very French but not too local for New York audiences (whose taste is nearly always better than managers assume) to have liked it for many more weeks than seemed possible.

AND here ends the woefully short list of the foreign plays which can hold their eyes and ears above the rising waters of forgetfulness. There were a number of others which for one reason or another stick to one's memory, but in a very short time they will be a blank. There was a fine, romantic idea in "Death Takes a Holiday," but the Italian author cheapened as well as did not exploit it, and except for Philip Merivale and Rose Hobart it was badly done. Mr. Irvine's amusing and curiously old-fashioned comedy, "The First Mrs. Fraser," very well acted, ranks high as entertainment. There were moments of simple charm and poetry, and of a remote, unplay-like originality, in Monckton Hoff's "Many Waters." A. A. Milne gave us some nice sentimental pinks and grays, and a well contrived and exciting second act, in "Michael and Mary." A brilliant and slightly poisonous murder mystery, with some admirable moments of suspense, make "Rope's End" rise high above the common herd.

Those good-humored, charming saunterers down Spanish Main streets, the Quintero Brothers, contributed one delightfully mild comedy, "The Women Have Their Way," and one that was merely mild only, "Papa Juan," or "A Hundred Years Old." That piece of traditional, conventional Viennese fluff, "Candlelight," had a very amusing first act, and practically nothing else. Of the Guild's many importations, "Karl and Anna" was ungainly chloroform, and Romain Rolland's "The Game of Love and Death" empty and stilted. For this the Guild production can share the blame fifty-fifty with the authors. The dramatization of two fine books, "Jud Suss," and "Tents of Israel," were the palest warmovers. About "The Middle Watch," "Dear Old England," "The Round Table," "The Infinite Shoeblack" and "Out of a Blue Sky" the less said the better.

COMPARED to the best of these, the best of this season's many Russian revivals is mountain among molehills. And a far more interesting feature of this season, or of the last two seasons, than most of the new plays from abroad, is the discovery by our producers and actors of the most gifted and poetic of modern playwrights, Anton Chekhov. Within two years we have had one or more presentations of "The Cherry Orchard," "The Three Sisters," "The Seagull" and "Uncle Vanya."

This year saw a new "Seagull" at the Civic Repertory, a new "Three Sisters" at the Laboratory, and the high point so far in Chekhov on the American stage: Jed Harris' production of "Uncle Vanya," which to my mind is also the deepest and truest and most beautiful of Chekhov's four masterpieces.

I have already spoken my piece about this, and will say no more, unless it be to suggest that the American scene if full of people and of subjects that would lend themselves perfectly to an American playwright who was also a country doctor and knew how to put living human beings and their moods and feelings and troubled heart into three acts.

The Guild, which for some inexplicable reason, has scorned Chekhov for the 10 years of its existence, went to his predecessor and exhumed for us Turgenev's charming "A Month in the Country," a strangely lovely flower of psychological realism to have bloomed in the Victorian desert. But the Russians were decades ahead of anyone else in their artistic understanding of human nature.

And still the list of Russians is not exhausted—there was an interesting though very uneven attempt at Tolstoy's "The Living Corpse" at the Civic Repertory, and a stirring revival of Gorky's underworld play, "At the Bottom," admirably directed by a former member of the Moscow Art Theater, Leo Balgakov.

Abendmusic Club in All-Wagner Program

ON Tuesday evening the Abendmusic Club will hold the last program meeting of this season at the home of Miss Agnes Kichmer, 1127 North Park place. An interesting feature of the meeting will be a presentation of the great Wagner operas, Tannhauser, Lohengrin, Mastersingers, Flying Dutchman and The Ring. Antonia Kotthoff, Mildred Begole, Mrs. Tumlati, Dora Rubin and Edith Schroeer will tell the stories of these operas, and illustrate them by playing or singing the principal themes and arias.

The club announces that the second public concert will be given early in the fall and will consist entirely of music by German composers.

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

Miniature Golf Links Now Have The Movie Stars Busy

HOLLYWOOD, June 14.

MINIATURE golf courses have quite taken Hollywood by storm. There are said to be 165 of them in greater Los Angeles, with 30 more under construction. The craze is becoming a greater deterrent to efficient business than was the stock market last year. Actors forsake their grease paint and lipstick in favor of the niblick at the slightest opportunity. Directors and executives fill their pockets with sandwiches and speed out at lunch time for a little vacant lot hockey. Tourists form the gallery. And imagine their delight at seeing Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Ben Lyon or Richard Dix slicing, hooking and saying "fudge" when some opponent sinks a mean one for a birdie!

Laura Lee is a laughing Lorelei, a slim and peppiful little blonde with enthusiasm that bubbles inexhaustibly without getting on one's nerves.

LAURA LEE

Nothing so far has daunted her galloping spirits, and she tackles work and long hours with as little reluctance as a starving chorus girl attacking a filet mignon.

When a weighty microphone fell and hit her in the ribs, she only caught her breath and proceeded with her song and dance.

That's the sort of trouping Laura began learning when she went on the stage at the age of 12, as a bona fide Gus Edwards discovery —every other actress or so in Hollywood is supposed to be one.

Anyway, she and her mother asked Edwards to give her a job, and she got a featured spot in his revue.

THAT led to vaudeville in New York, where Earl Carroll saw her and engaged her for his "Vanities."

Next came a three-year contract with the Shuberts, and then her call to Hollywood to play opposite Joe E. Brown in "Top Speed."

Since then she has been signed on contract, and is now making her third talkie, all opposite Brown.

And in "Top Speed," at least, she all but steals the picture from the big-mouthed comicwho is himself one of the most notorious picture-stealers hereabouts.

Not a real beauty, she photographs beautifully, but it is her singing and dancing, and her ability as a comedienne, that may make a movie star of her ere long.

Laura was born in Brooklyn nearly 20 years ago, one of five sisters.

Checkers is her favorite indoor sport, and outdoors she flies, being qualified to pilot her own plane if she had one.

During a show in Milwaukee she caught the thrill of the air and on her next vacation she returned to study aviation.

EDDIE FOY JR., made a quiet entrance into Hollywood last week, unnoticed and unsung. No fault of the RKO studio. Marc Anthony could not have expected a more enthusiastic kiss from Cleopatra than was prepared for Eddie, who is to lend his seductive presence and talents to the filming of "Leathernecking." The studio band, photographers in bevies (not b. v. d.'s) and those mysterious individuals known as studio executives were on hand to give him the Hollywood key-ring. The band struck up a spirited march—probably the "Maine Stein Song." The photographers feelingly poised their cameras. But no Eddie. He had disembarked at Pasadena and motored to Hollywood.

IT is reported that Mary Pickford has scrapped "Secrets," an adaptation of "Forever Yours," after spending $250,000 upon same, and is to remake the entire film. Mary plans a story revision, an almost entire new cast, etc. She just did not consider the picture up to her standard. So even stars of her magnitude have their little heartbreaks in this tear-drop town.

STANLEY SMITH, the singing juvenile, and his mother live in separate apartments but they always breakfast together, in hers.

R. William Neill, director, uses a rocking chair on the set, while Eddie Cantor seldom sits down between scenes.

ALEXANDER GRAY

Maybe the others haven't thought of it, but Thornton Freeland is the only director ever seen wearing dark glasses to ward off "klieg-eyes."

Clara Bow, looking thinner, seems more like her old self now. She sings, in a voice that's far from bad, in her new picture—but she's behind a food counter again, as in "True to the Navy."

CHROMATICALLY, Gray predominates in the movies' acting ranks, with Alexander, Lawrence, Gilda, Arnold and Gloria, while two Greys, Zane and Johnnie, are writers. There are eight Browns, Joe, Johnny Mack and Joe E. being actors. Harry and Mitzi act for the four Greens. There is no Black, and only two important Whites, Alice and Marjorie, though four or five others are non-actors. Monte alone is Blue.

And the Smiths, while on the subject, have it all over the Jones, of which there are four. Buck the cowboy being the only actor. Of 11 Smiths, three are actors—Stanley, Al and Oscar—the latter's avocation, incidentally, being the blacking of boots.

Irving Berlin's first movie production will star Bebe Daniels, who will be "borrowed" for the occasion soon after her wedding to Ben Lyon. The title is "Reaching for the Moon."

FRANCES DEE is here with a contract to prove that trying again after failure may pay. While playing extra, the little brown-haired girl was given a screen test. It was during a pause in shooting, on the set, and she went through the ordeal while the rest of the cast stood around and stared. Nervous and embarrassed, she failed to "register."

But time came for another test. This time, with only the necessary workers about, she was composed and free, and made a hit.

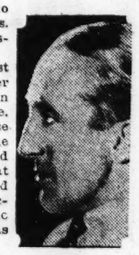
THE success of Claude Allister in the talkies must give pause to many a newly arrived English actor, and suggest to each a paraphrasing of Hamlet's noted predicament:

"To be or not to be—a silly ass. That is the question."



CLAUDE ALLISTER

Allister is almost ready to answer that question in the affirmative. For it is because he played the "empty-headed English fop" that he has secured parts in 14 pictures during the 15 months he has been here.

The actor came to films from the English stage after four years on Broadway.

His first role in talkies, in "Bulldog Drummond," was comic, a coincidence because in London he played the title role with much success.

Subsequent roles with a few exceptions in which he has stood out in straight character parts, notably those of the aged butler in "In the Next Room," and of the spruce gangster heavy in "Czar of Broadway," have all been similar.

His two latest, in "Floradora Girl" and "Monte Carlo," have been of this type, and if they click as he hopes, he expects to resign himself almost wholly to comedy.

That will be a sacrifice in a sense because, like most actors, he finds more interest in variety. But the business sense behind such an attitude is obvious.

WILLIAM AUSTIN, for instance, the nearest approach to Allister's fops, has scored in picture after picture because audiences have come to expect a laugh, and get it, whenever he appears.

Off-screen, of course, the movie fan probably would be disappointed in Allister's appearance.

He wears no monocle, carries no cane, and (most unforgivab. in a comedian) possesses a delicately chiseled profile.

In costume for one of his stage plays, wearing the powdered wig and silken trappings of another day, he compares favorably in appearance with most of the screen's present-day heroes.

PORTRAIT of an athletic star, told me by his son, Douglas Fairbanks Jr.:

Work to him has become an obligation, not a desire. He would rather play—golf or practical jokes or games. He likes fishing but hates to take the fish off the hook. He drives his car recklessly, 60 and 65 miles an hour.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

He must have a sun bath daily. Even on cloudy days he invents a technical reason to take a sun bath. He likes to debate for the sake of matching wits. Mickey Mouse is his favorite movie star.

He has no fear, but once was scared ill after an airplane ride—with Lindbergh, over the scene of the Mexican revolution.

He has a forceful personality and radiates good will. He usually is in good humor but at times he has fits of depression. When he plays golf he often loses his temper and throws his clubs away. Gambling holds no fascination for him.

He is an enthusiast and delights in selling someone on his ideas. He is not a careful business man, but has been fortunate in hiring men who are. He is careless in some things, his speech notably, but is extraordinarily meticulous in his dress.

HE would like to spend all his time traveling. Work, however, is his chief love while he must do it, with his home taking second place.

He likes to pick friendly fights and settle them by boxing. He always has been an excellent boxer. He still bears a small red scar on his nose, the result of the only fight he was ever whipped in. A stage doorkeeper, half his size, did it 20 years ago.

He averages six hours' sleep a night. But he always finds time to take a nap in the middle of the afternoon. He always has tea at 5 o'clock. He smokes incessantly, lighting one cigarette off the other.

His constant exercise and physical care make him look much younger than he is. He is always tanned and in mid-summer he looks like an Indian.

In informal photographs he has been mistaken for the waiter because of his color.

He never makes snap decisions, carefully pondering every proposition.

FERENC MOLNAR'S play "Olympia," now being made into French and German talkies with separate casts for each version, will not be made in English. The John Gilbert talkie, "His Glorious Night," bore that title during production.

Gilbert, by the way, is all ready to attempt a come-back in talkies, fortified by vocal training which may rectify the voice deficiencies which were so evident in "Redemption" and "His Glorious Night."

And who should have a large hand in preparation of his next vehicle, "Way of a Sailor," but Jim Tully, "hobo author" and one-time fistic opponent of John?

HOLLYWOOD is the last frontier for the American cowboy. Cattle-raising, still a thriving industry in the West, has succumbed to modern methods, and the "open range" is a thing of the past except in a few picturesque sections. One cowboy is now employed where 10 worked once. Fences make the difference.

A big share of the surplus punchers are in Hollywood, according to Jack Moore, former cowman and ranger of Arizona and New Mexico. Moore is himself foreman of the Paramount 3000-acre ranch near Hollywood. He says there are more then 500 real cowboys in the film city, and, of this number, more than 100, he says, were range riders in the lawless days when it paid to be quick on the "draw."

The temporary passing of Western pictures, due to a lack of outdoor sound recovering apparatus, brought lean days to the small army of riders and ropers in Hollywood. Some coiled their lassoes, packed their saddles and headed back to the remaining strongholds of cattle land. Others stuck.

With the revival of interest in outdoor pictures, signalized by the popular reception given "the Virginian," Paramount rounded up scores of these experienced cow hands. In "The Border Legion," Zane Grey's story of the Western badlands, many of them found employment. Headed by Richard Arlen and Jack Holt, star of many a gripping Western thriller, they ride and rope and fight on the plains again.

Scenes for "The Border Legion," which is at the Missouri now, were filmed on location, in historic spots, famed for their outlawry in the days of the pioneers. Otto Brower, maker of many of Zane Grey pictures, directed "The Border Legion." Fay Wray is the girl in the cast, and Eugene Pallette, the famous Sergeant Heath of the S. S. Van Dine murder mysteries, has another role, similar to the one he played in "The Virginian."

THE St. Louis Theater—to get back to the price-cutting war—will depend upon some big vaudeville acts to keep its patrons in line. This week the house is topping its stage bill with Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, two "nut" actors, who have risen from performers getting $50 a week to a salary that is among the topnotchers and who are emulating other well-known performers by doing a "farewell tour." However, this farewell of Olsen and Johnson has the appearance of being on the level, since they have just signed a three-year picture contract with Warner Brothers. In fact during the past 10 weeks they have completed their first full-length feature. Their presence in St. Louis is accounted for by the fact that they had a certain number of unplayed weeks on their original RKO contract and since the men who run this circuit are primarily business men they saw to it that the boys took enough time from their picture making to complete their agreement.

Olsen and Johnson met while students at the University of Chicago. They became associated in amateur college theatricals, Olsen at the violin and Johnson at the piano. They thought out a little vaudeville skit and it was not hard for them to get a route. Since then they have played nothing but vaudeville and have advanced steadily to one of the foremost positions in the world of hokum comedians.

There are two St. Louis products with Olsen and Johnson. One is "Red" Pepper a "hot" cornetist, who is playing his first season with them, having played with Meyer Friedman's orchestra in the theater pit; likewise the piano and accordion artist, Leo Artega, hails from this city.

antics in "The Circus Princess." Frederic Persson plays the Moroccan Shiek again in the Forest Park cast, which includes also, in the role of Clementina, the Spanish "lady," Betti Davis, who sang the part with one of "The Desert Song" road companies.

IN the score of "The Desert Song" are included the rousing "Song of the Riffs," "The Desert Song," "One Alone," "One Flower in Your Garden," "It" and "Romance," some of the greatest song hits Sigmund Romberg ever conceived. The lilting lyrics and the fascinating story of the book are the joint work of Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II and Frank Mandel.

Immediately following "The Desert Song" Monday night, June 23, the Municipal Opera will present another hit, "The New Moon," with music once more by Romberg, Guy Robertson, Leonard Ceeley, Margaret Carlisle and others of this season's favorites will be in the cast, and the scenic settings will make the utmost of the possibility for beauty in the backgrounds of Colonial New Orleans, a pirate ship and a Carribean island.

Church Class in Play.

"June-Time," a three-act comedy by Sally Shute, will be presented by the Philathea Class of Kingshighway Methodist Episcopal Church, Kingshighway Park and Colorado, next Thursday and Friday. This class presents a play annually, the proceeds of which go to the church building fund.

Grace Terhune in A Recital Tuesday

GRACE TERHUNE, a well-known local soprano, will be heard in a song recital at the Artists' Guild Tuesday night, with Estle Rucker at the piano. Miss Terhune has had years of study with some of the most eminent teachers of singing and coaching in America, among whom are Sergei Klibansky, Richard Hageman and Margaret Chapman Byers. She is a graduate of Illinois Woman's College and holds a Bachelor of Music degree from the Chicago Musical College.

Miss Terhune was soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in November, 1928. She won the Federated Music Clubs contest in Missouri and in the Southwestern states.

Yiddish Art Players In New Play Tonight

TONIGHT the Yiddish Art Theater Players, with Jacob Ben-Ami, will appear in their last performance at the Odeon. They will offer a modern comedy drama from the pen of the youngest among Yiddish playwrights, I. D. Berkowitch. The play is entitled "Out of the Beyond."

The play is a realistic treatment of a vital problem of the present. It is not in manner to be mistaken for a mystery play, or on one dealing with the supernatural, but tells the story of two young Jews, who landed in this country prior to the war. Following "Jew Suss" and "Green Fields," this play will reveal the versatility of these players and local playgoers may witness the many-sidedness of the talented Ben-Ami.

Mme. Carter to Give A Recital Saturday

Mme. Christine Nordstrom Carter will give a recital next Saturday afternoon, at 2:30, at Vandervoort's Auditorium, which will be free to the public.

Among those taking part will be Miss Mae Green, a former member of the Casey Stock Co. at the Orpheum Theater, who will be heard in a number of French and Tax Recommendations by State Commission Get Special Study.

A study of the tax recommendations contained in the report of the State Survey Commission has been undertaken by the Tax Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, headed by John F. Green, lawyer. Seven subcommittees have been named by Chairman Green to study various phases of the recommendations and, on the basis of their report, the committee will go on record formally with respect to this phase of the Sunrvey Commission's report.

Other phases of the Survey Commission's report also are being stundied by the State Legislative Committee of the Chamber, of which Forrest C. Donnell is chairman.

Bernard Greensfelder has been named chairman and Walter B. Phemister and George H. Moore members of a subcommittee to study the proposal for a graduate individual income tax mounting as high as 4¼ per cent.

A. B. Frey has been appointed chairman of a group to study the proposal not to have any bond issues. On this committee are Richard E. Eckert and Eugene J. Mudd.

A committee to consider the proposal to reduce the local district school tax to 20 cents consists of W. Scott Hancock, chairman; Dr. I. Lippincott and Louis S. Haslam.

A group headed by Judge Fred L. English and including N. A. Doyle and Joseph S. Calfee will go into the proposal to increase the corporation income tax to 2½ per cent and to increase the corporation franchise tax from 1-20 of 1 per cent to 1-10 of 1 per cent.

The proposal for luxury taxes on admission tickets, tobacco and beverages will be studied by a committee consisting of Carl Barker, chairman; J. L. Hawkins and W. Harvey Perkins.

The proposal for no property tax to intangibles will be considered by a group headed by W. W. Butts and including Harry T. Ferris and Sidney Maestre.

Inventory of Estate of Widow Whose Husband Founded Fortune on $21,000, Is Filed.

The estate of Mrs. Sophia Franz, former St. Louisan, who died at Long Beach, Cal., last April is valued at $2,095,905.26 in an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday by G. A. Buder, executor under her will and co-trustee of the $14,000,000 estate of her husband, Ehrdhardt D. Franz, who died in 1898.

Mrs. Franz's estate was bequeathed to her seven living children and the two survivors of two deceased children. It consisted of corporation stocks valued at $872,968.75; bonds, $293,400; collateral loans, $300,500; unsecured notes, $290,000; deeds of trust, $216,050, and cash, $122,986.51.

The stocks included 17,500 shares in the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., listed at $836,718.75, their market value on the day of her death, but worth about $150,000 less at the current price.

Also listed were 500 shares of the American Press, publisher of the St. Louis Times, at $35 a share, and 350 shares of the Westliche Post Publishing Co. at $25 a share.

As has been told, Franz, a St. Louis grocer, founded his large estate on a $21,000 investment in 1836 in stock of a predecessor of the Burroughs company.

25 YEARS IN PRISON FOR HOLDUPS IN PARKS

Jury Adds 10 Years to Sentence Previously Imposed on Harry Nash.

Four men faced juries in the criminal divisions of Circuit Court last week, three of whom were acquitted and one convicted. The conviction was of Harry Nash, 20 years old, who was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary for violation of the Henry law, robbery with a deadly weapon. Nash now has a total of 25 years in the penitentiary to serve for his participation in a series of park holdups, a jury in a previous trial having assessed a 15-year penalty.

Two companions of Nash, Kenneth Kramer and Robert Frayne, are serving 10-year sentences for the same offenses. They entered pleas of guilty when arraigned. Nash elected to stand trial. He still has a case pending against him.

Those who escaped punishment were John Mackey, 20, charged with robbery in the first degree; Charles Wurtz, 26, charged with murder in the second degree for shooting his wife, and Leon McGee, charged with burglary and larceny. In the latter case an instructed verdict of not guilty was ordered by the court at the end of the State's case, following the filing of a demurrer.

Four men received penitentiary sentences during the week on their pleas of guilty to major crimes. Among them was Edward Dunbar, 31, a former convict, charged with two violations of the Henry law and with being a habitual criminal. He elected to take concurrent sentences of 25 years on the robbery charges rather than stand trial as a habitual criminal and face the court's peremptory instruction for life imprisonment. William Clark and Arthur Rue, Negroes, pleaded guilty of second degree murder and accepted sentences of 10 and 18 years' imprisonment, respectively, while Jesse Franklin, charged with attempted robbery, accepted a sentence of two years.

Those charged with major crimes who pleaded guilty and who were permitted to take less than penitentiary punishment were: William Stanley, driving motor vehicle while intoxicated, six months in workhouse; Benoval Bryan, carrying a concealed weapon, 90 days in workhouse, paroled to report in six months, and Rudolph Faiders, obtaining money by false pretenses, one year in workhouse. A case against Charles Freeze, charged with possession of an unregistered revolver, was nolle prossed for insufficient evidence, and like action was entered against William Humphries, charged with assault to kill, because the State was unable to produce necessary witnesses.

TELLS OF $1500 OFFER TO QUIT ARKANSAS RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Judge Sheffield Accuses Lieutenant-Governor, Former Governor and Others.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 14.—A former army Major, County Judge John C. Sheffield, Helena, one of four candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, today charged, in a demand to the Circuit Judge for a special grand jury session in Phillips County, that Lieutenant-Governor Lee Cazort, former Gov. Tom J. Terrall and others had sought to induce him to withdraw in favor of another candidate, the young Brooks Hay, Little Rock.

Both Cazort and Terrall issued denials, the latter declaring the charges a falsehood and the former asserting that, while he had conferred with friends of Judge Sheffield in Helena this week, during which some of the friends suggested Sheffield should be reimbursed for his campaign expenses if he withdraw, he had made no promises nor offered any bribe.

The Phillips County (Helena) "Sheffield for Governor" Club backed up Judge Sheffield's request to Circuit Judge W. D. Davenport for a grand jury investigation of his charge that he was offered $1500 and a high State office if Hays were elected, to withdraw from the race.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

FORTY YEARS of SILENCE for CHEATING at CARDS

DEATH Ends the Long Social Exile of Sir William Gordon-Cumming Who Sacrificed Friendship of Prince, His Army Commission and His Good Name in Winning $75 He Didn't Need, in England's Greatest Card Scandal.

A LONELY old man with riches and a great ancestral estate in Scotland died in the seclusion of his manor May 20 and passed from the silence of 40 years of ostracism to the greater silence. With all his possessions and patrician lineage, he had been since 1890 a social outcast.

His name meant nothing to the younger generation when there came the perfunctory announcement of his death. The younger generation had scarcely heard of him or his exile. The older one had almost forgotten it. But there was something about that name—Sir William Gordon-Cumming—that had a familiar ring. It stirred memories and started them to work. It called up scenes and recollections of the early nineties when the Victorian Age was shaking off its inhibitions and merging into the naughty Mauve Decade. It recalled the debonair Prince Albert. It brought back to mind a hodge-podge of ancient newspaper headlines and expressions—"The Baccarat Case," "Scandal of Tranby Croft," "The Prince Who Perjured Himself Like a Gentleman." Then all came back.

Sir William Gordon-Cumming. Why, of course. He was the man who cheated the Prince of Wales at cards. He was the foolish nobleman who had all the possessions that heart could desire—an honored name, powerful and high-born friends, a grand estate of 85,000 acres in Elgin, a commission of lieutenant-colonel in the dashing Scots Guards, citations for gallantry in war—who had all these things and yet invited life-long disgrace by fleecing his best friends at baccarat, fleecing his host and hostess and his fellow house guests to win a few extra pounds which wouldn't have bought him a new set of shirt studs.

Sir William was 81 when he died the other day. He had outlived most of that little group of notables whose names figured so much in the news along with his. But age had not removed the shadow which haunted him. Neither had wealth. To the day of his death he carried the stigma which the Victorian Age placed upon the man who had been caught cheating.

THEY had "taken of his buttons off and cut his stripes away." He had been publicly dishonored, disgraced, cashiered, cast out of Her Majesty's Army. Of what avail was wealth and forgetfulness against such penalties as these? Not much is known of his life since his ostracism, but it is highly probable that he spent most of the last 40 years wishing he had fallen at the head of his regiment in the Egyptian War.

The Baccarat Case of Tranby Croft was the most famous card scandal the Kingdom ever knew. The sum of money involved was trivial. Indeed, in the whole course of the affair the amount Sir William won illegally was never brought out, nor was it referred to as a matter of importance. But the case involved persons so conspicuous, and involved such delicate points of honor and hospitality that it came to dominate the conversation in every corner of the world where ladies and gentlemen assembled.

It became likewise one of the most famous court cases in the history of English jurisprudence. It got into court as the result of a slander suit filed by Sir William Gordon-Cumming against his host and hostess, who had detected him cheating. Having got into court, it brought with it the most distinguished array of counsel, the most illustrious group of witnesses, including the Prince of Wales himself, and the most brilliant gallery of spectators ever seen in an English courtroom.

For seven days the trial continued. Ostensibly it was the trial of a slander suit, but everybody knew it was really something else. It was really a trial of Sir William on a charge of cheating. A verdict for the plaintiff in the slander action would mean, in substance, acquittal of Sir William—exoneration. A verdict for the defendants, on the other hand, would mean his conviction on one of the most serious charges it was possible to bring under the unwritten code of social behavior. The verdict, therefore, was awaited with the same air of suspense and foreboding that might have characterized a trial of the man for his life, for all were aware that a verdict against Sir William would mean a fate which, for an English gentleman, would be worse than death itself. And when the verdict finally came, the demonstration which followed bore evidence of rabid partisanship and personal bitterness.

THE space devoted to the case by the newspapers of the time is a good index to the interest with which it was followed by the public. One finds now in brown and crumbling files the story as it was dragged out in all its sensational ramifications. The London Times printed solid pages of it. Every line of the court stenographer's record was seized upon and printed without a summary. Every word uttered in court by Judge, jurors, lawyers, plaintiff, defendants and witnesses found its way into type. The Illustrated London News sent artists to the trial to make pencil sketches of all the principals. Fashion magazines sent style experts to write about what the grand ladies wore when they sat in the witness box. American newspapers were almost as eager for news of the case and presented it daily under big headlines on page one. Even newspapers as far away as the St. Louis Post-Dispatch carried full accounts of the proceeding and ran caustic editorial comment about it. The Prince of Wales was raked right lustily for getting himself mixed up in such a scandalous mess. All things considered, it was the greatest newspaper story of a trial prior to the Thaw case.

The reader finds a bit of orienting is necessary when he goes back to follow the running accounts of the baccarat case. It is a chapter out of the past. Celebrated figures of a former generation pass in review. The '90s were just coming in. Women were still wearing bustles and lifting their long skirts when crossing dusty streets. Men were shaving off side whiskers. William McKinley was running for Governor of Ohio. Victoria was reigning sovereign of Great Britain. Edward VII was still Prince of Wales.

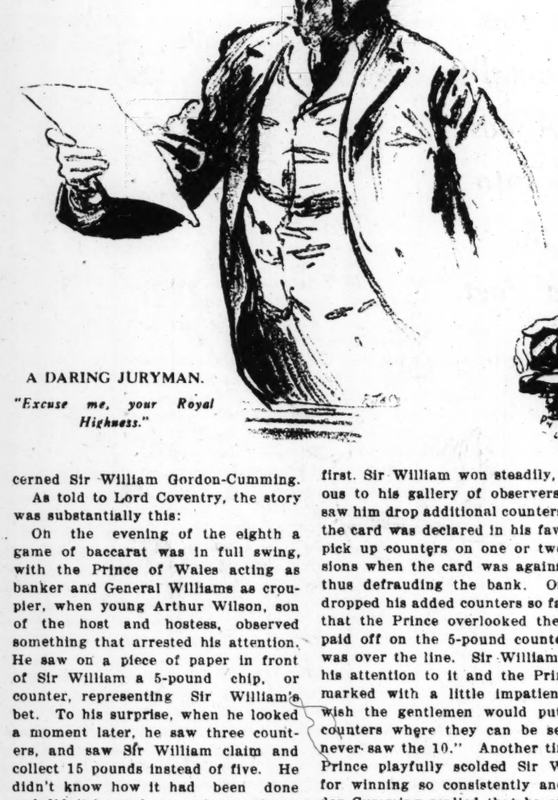
A rather gay Prince he was, too. He carried on the cavalier tradition. He was 50 and already a grandfather, but there were often whispers of intrigues with lovely ladies. He had another weakness besides his weakness for women. He liked baccarat. It was his favorite game at house parties. For the most part, his gambling escapades were kept out of public print, but everybody knew and winked at Jolly Prince Albert's human frailties, although some stern observers did remark that if women didn't get him in trouble baccarat would. As it happened, baccarat did. And it got a good many others in trouble at the same time.



A DARING JURYMAN.
"Excuse me, your Royal Highness."

"You knew that your own brother officer was one of the accusers. Did you ask to be confronted with him?"—"I asked to be confronted with nobody."
SIR WILLIAM GORDON-CUMMING.

AMONG those who counted themselves fortunate in being able to entertain the Prince as a house guest now and then were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson. The Wilsons had been cutting a figure in British society for only a short time, but they were extremely wealthy and maintained, besides their London home, a country place, Tranby Croft, near Doncaster, in York. Even though they were still regarded as belonging to the "nouveau riché" class, many persons of high rank partook of their hospitality at Tranby Croft. One such occasion was a house party given by the Wilsons during the Doncaster races in September, 1890.

Tranby Croft witnessed at this party one of the most distinguished rosters of guests in many seasons. Besides the Prince of Wales, who was ordinarily enough to assure the success of any social festivity, there were the Earl and Countess of Coventry, the Earl of Craven, Lord Edward Somerset, Lady Brougham and Vaux, Lieutenant-General and Mrs. Owen Williams and Count Henry Lutzow. There was also, among others, Sir William Gordon-Cumming.

Sir William was regarded as a welcome addition to anybody's house party. He was an intimate friend of the Prince of Wales, and had been for 20 years, or longer. Moreover, Sir William was invested with a certain military glamour. He had served with distinction in the Zulu War of 1879, and in the Egyptian War of 1882. He was rich, a baronet, member of an old family and was a man of distinguished appearance and considerable culture. A touch of romance was added by the fact that there had just been the announcement of his engagement to a beautiful young American heiress, Miss Florence Josephine Garner of New York.

On September 8 and 9, after the races, the party spent the evenings playing baccarat, as that was the Prince's favorite game. The bets were moderate and nobody thought much about the winnings or losses. The party seemed to be coming off very well. On the evening of the tenth, however, a shocking story had begun to find its way stealthily around among the guests. The story concerned Sir William Gordon-Cumming.

As told to Lord Coventry, the story was substantially this:

On the evening of the eighth a game of baccarat was in full swing, with the Prince of Wales acting as banker and General Williams as croupier, when young Arthur Wilson, son of the host and hostess, observed something that arrested his attention. He saw on a piece of paper in front of Sir William a 5-pound chip, or counter, representing Sir William's bet. To his surprise, when he looked a moment later, he saw three counters, and saw Sir William claim and collect 15 pounds instead of five. He didn't know how it had been done and didn't know for sure it was cheating, but it caused him to watch Sir William's play more closely. Nobody else had noticed it, apparently, for it was a friendly game, in which people did not watch each other suspiciously.

A FEW minutes later young Wilson saw the same thing happen again. This time he saw Sir William held extra counters in his hand and, after the card had been declared in his favor, dropped three more to his original bet, increasing the amount to 20 pounds.

"Who is cheating?" asked Levett. "Sir William Gordon-Cumming? Good heavens, man, you must be mad."

"Look for yourself," whispered Wilson.

Levett looked and saw Sir William add two 5-pound counters to his original bet of 5 and claim 15 pounds after the banker had declared the coup.

The next evening, September 9, Sir William was unconsciously giving an exhibition of cheating before about half a dozen observers, who were watching every move he made. Young Wilson had told his parents and his brother-in-law and sister of what he had seen. They, together with Lieutenant Levett, had agreed to say nothing to him or to the other guests, but to watch him carefully through another game.

The second evening's session proved to be quite as illuminating as the first. Sir William won steadily, oblivious to his gallery of observers. They saw him drop additional counters when the card was declared in his favor and pick up counters on one or two occasions when the card was against him, thus defrauding the bank. Once he dropped his added counters so far back that the Prince overlooked them and paid off on the 5-pound counter that was over the line. Sir William called his attention to it and the Prince remarked with a little impatience: "I wish the gentlemen would put their counters where they can be seen. I never saw the 10." Another time the Prince playfully scolded Sir William for winning so consistently and Gordon-Cumming replied that he couldn't help winning with such a run of luck. In the course of the two nights' play he won 225 pounds.

Apprised of these proceedings, Lord Coventry was frankly thunderstruck. He said he had never heard of such a thing. The idea that Sir William Gordon-Cumming would stoop to the tactics of a steamboat gambler to rob his best friends was incomprehensible. He consulted General Williams as to what steps should be taken and then had Lycett Green, who had told him the story, repeat it in the presence of General Williams, Lord Somerset, Captain A. Somerset and young Wilson. Wilson verified Green's statements and added that the others who had watched were prepared to swear as to what they had seen.

FINALLY, when it seemed that the evidence was incontrovertible, the Prince was informed of what had taken place, and it was decided that for the sake of all concerned and for the sake of society at large, the story should not be allowed to get outside the circle which already knew it. An expose, it was pointed out, would mean a horrible public scandal. But as a condition of that silence, Sir William Gordon-Cumming must be made to sign a pledge that he would never play cards again for the rest of his life.

Confronted with the charges, Sir William was indignant and vehemently denied them, but he was told by the Prince that denial was useless in the face of so much evidence. There was nothing to do but sign the pledge, so Sir William signed it, with full understanding that his signature, as Lord Coventry explained to him, would be a distinct admission of guilt. It was then signed by other members of the party who were acquainted with the facts and the crestfallen nobleman went away, hoping against hope that nothing more would be heard of it. As it turned out, he never ceased to regret that he had signed that document.

LORD COVENTRY and General Williams continued to meet him on the old, familiar basis and addressed him as "Dear Bill," as though nothing had happened. That was part of the scheme of secrecy, they said afterwards. Anyway it was apparent that Sir William was suffering much agony and they did not wish to aggravate it by changing suddenly to a more formal style of address. But in spite of their caution, the story leaked out, as it was bound to do. In desperation, months later, Sir William wrote to Lord Coventry that the story was in everyone's mouth and that nothing remained for him to do but to explain the case personally to all the officers of his regiment and stand or fall by their verdict. Soon afterward, he filed suit for slander, naming as defendants Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Lycett Green, young Arthur Wilson and Lieutenant Levett.

The case came to trial on June 2, 1891, before Lord Coleridge, Lord Chief Justice of England. Sir Edward Clarke, Solicitor-General, was chief of counsel for Gordon-Cumming and Sir Charles Russell, assisted by Mr. Asquith, represented the defendants. It was a gala occasion. The brilliant assemblage which filled the courtroom daily looked like a select opera crowd rather than a group of spectators and witnesses in a law court. Great ladies wore their daintiest gowns and trained their lorgnettes on each witness who took the stand. The Prince of Wales was on hand daily. Lady Coleridge, wife of the Chief Justice, sat beside her husband on the bench.

The testimony of the Prince, of course, was eagerly awaited. The prospect of seeing the heir to the throne sitting in the witness box and being grilled by cross-examiners was a novel one indeed. But there was scarcely less interest in Gordon-Cumming himself.

ALL THROUGH the trial there seemed to roll a wave of sympathy for this unhappy man. The issue for him was social life or death and he faced it like a gentleman. With the odds heavily against him, he stood unflinchingly before the fire of the most deadly cross-examiner in England as he might have stood before the enemy guns on a battlefield. Leaning easily upon the rail, his gray-gloved left hand resting lightly on his bare right, perfectly dressed, self-possessed, he answered questions in firm and equable tones. His deep tan of African campaigns marked him as a soldier, and there was even more of the soldier about his manner. He made an excellent witness.

He seemed far more at ease than did the defendants. The Wilsons particularly were nervous, and there was abundant reason for this. In the popular mind the Wilsons had not covered themselves with glory in this Tranby affair. Granting that cheating at cards was contemptible, the average observer felt that it was even worse for a host and hostess to conspire to trap one of their guests in their own house. It grossly violated every accepted principle of hospitality. It was unspeakable. The Wilsons shrank under the stony stare that was fixed upon them. There was even a feeling of hostility toward the Prince of Wales. When Sir Edward Clarke made his opening speech in behalf of Gordon-Cumming and directly attacked the conduct of the Prince, there was a burst of applause and the Lord Chief Justice had to rap for silence and remind the spectators that they were witnessing a trial and not a theatrical performance.

In spite of popular sentiment, however, Gordon-Cumming was fighting an uphill battle. There were nine witnesses for the defense, including the Prince himself, and five of these witnesses testified they had seen Sir William cheat repeatedly. They gave details so exhaustively that to doubt their story was out of the question. The testimony of the Prince was more of a formal character and shed no great light upon the point at issue, but his appearance in the witness box was naturally the outstanding feature of the trial. He made a good witness, too. He testified with frankness and dignity. The cross-examiners addressed him as "Sir" and "Your Royal Highness." Observers said that sounded queer—a witness in court being addressed as Your Royal Highness.

It remained for a juror to elicit from the Prince his most important bit of testimony. He had been excused from the stand and was turning to leave it when a daring juror arose and asked whether he might ask the Prince two questions. The Prince turned and awaited his inquiry. The juror asked whether the jury was to believe that the Prince had acted as banker and yet had witnessed no act of foul play.

"It is difficult for the banker to see the play," the Prince replied, "and, moreover, at the house of a friend you are not likely to suspect foul play."

"What was your opinion at the time as to the charges made?" asked the juror.

"The charges were made by so many witnesses and with such unanimity," replied the Prince, "that I felt no other course was open than to believe what I had been told."

This reply was caught up by the newspapers of the time and one smart magazine delivered itself of a famous line in remarking that the Prince "perjured himself like a gentleman," the inference being that although he might not have believed the story, he was too much of a gentleman to doubt the word of his hostess or repudiate her testimony.

The jury retired and after 10 minutes' deliberation brought in a verdict in favor of the Wilsons—a verdict dooming Sir William Gordon-Cumming to everlasting disgrace. But it was an unpopular verdict. The jurors were hissed and the Wilsons were subjected to so many withering glances that they were glad to retreat.

AFTER the trial, Sir William's first act was to write a note which he sent to Miss Garner, his fiancee. It read:

"I cannot possibly ask you to unite your youth and beauty with a dishonored name. I release you from every promise."

The American girl never flinched. She sent back the following reply:

"I decline to be released. I love you and believe in your innocence absolutely. I beg you to hasten our marriage. Let it be at once and let all the world know I love you and trust you and confide myself and my life to you."

They were married quietly the next day in the fashionable Holy Trinity Church at Chelsea. Only 12 persons were present at the ceremony. They went away then to live their lives of social exile on Sir William's great estate, Altyre, in Scotland. On the same day appeared this paragraph in the Gazette:

"War Office, June 12, 1891.—Scots Guards—Major and Lieutenant-Colonel Sir William Gordon-Cumming, baronet, is removed from the army, Her Majesty having no further occasion for his services."

Sir William and his bride lived happily in the seclusion of their manor, according to all reports heard of them afterwards. That is, they lived as happily as the bitter memory of the Tranby Croft affair would permit. They spent 31 years together, Lady Gordon-Cumming dying in 1922. Even under the blight of ostracism, it was said, their romance continued to the end.

UPON the arrest on May 12 of Abbas Tyabji, first successor to the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi, imprisoned leader of the nationalist movement, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, by command of Gandhi, inherited the task of directing the campaign of civil disobedience which is stirring all British India.

Her leadership was brief, ending a short time ago when she was arrested and sentenced to nine months' simple imprisonment for her activities. She will be treated as a Class A prisoner, a prisoner of the most favored kind. Short of duration as was her leadership, it raised her to the position of one of the outstanding feminine figures in the world today.

I first met this fiery prophet of a civilization which is almost impenetrable to Western minds at a tea in the New York studio of a distinguished painter, on the occasion of her visit to this country two years ago. She wore a crimson sari heavily embroidered in gold, long gold earrings and a necklace and brooch of massive design. On her forehead was the mark of the Brahman, the highest, the sacerdotal caste of India, into which she was born.

What she wore, however, seemed of little consequence to this impassioned worker for a nation's freedom, and she found annoying the prick of American levity when a guest laughingly remarked: "Ah, madame, we all hope that you will stay a long time, so that we can learn how you put on your sari!" The black eyes flashed. "I have come thousands of miles not to teach Americans about saris," she retorted, "but about quite other matters."

HOWEVER, this was a tea, and Mrs. Naidu did not wish to talk then of these "other matters." During the afternoon she revealed herself as a poet. From the three volumes of her English verse, "The Bird of Time," "The Broken Wing" and "The Golden Threshold," she read with great beauty for more than an hour.

These poems were written in English, which to her is as familiar a tongue as her own. They show not only a complete mastery of the language and its prosody, but also an affinity with Western emotional experience. The range is extensive. Some poems are exquisite, others exotic; many are aflame with patriotic fervor. There are paeans to great men and hymns to a comprehensive and nonsectarian religion, such as her "Ode to H. H. the Nizam of Hyderabad," who is a Mohammedan:

"Beneath your sway concordant dwell
The peoples whom your laws embrace,
In brotherhood of diverse creeds
And harmony of diverse race.

"The votaries of the Prophet's faith,
Of whom you are the crown and chief,
And they who bear on Vedic brows
Their mystic symbols of belief.

"And they who worshipping the sun
Fled o'er the old Iranian sea:

It remained for a juror to elicit from the Prince his most important bit of testimony. He had been excused from the stand and was turning to leave it when a daring juror arose and asked whether he might ask the Prince two questions. The Prince turned and awaited his inquiry. The juror asked whether the jury was to believe that the Prince had acted as banker and yet had witnessed no act of foul play.

"It is difficult for the banker to see the play," the Prince replied, "and, moreover, at the house of a friend you are not likely to suspect foul play."

"What was your opinion at the time as to the charges made?" asked the juror.

"The charges were made by so many witnesses and with such unanimity," replied the Prince, "that I felt no other course was open than to believe what I had been told."

This reply was caught up by the newspapers of the time and one smart magazine delivered itself of a famous line in remarking that the Prince "perjured himself like a gentleman," the inference being that although he might not have believed the story, he was too much of a gentleman to doubt the word of his hostess or repudiate her testimony.

INDIA'S JOAN of ARC

Woman Revolutionist, Who Succeeded Gandhi in the Leadership of the Nationalist Party and Who Was Almost Immediately Thrown Into Jail, Was Born in the Highest Caste and Is a Poet.

UPON the arrest on May 12 of Abbas Tyabji, first successor to the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi, imprisoned leader of the nationalist movement, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, by command of Gandhi, inherited the task of directing the campaign of civil disobedience which is stirring all British India.

Her leadership was brief, ending a short time ago when she was arrested and sentenced to nine months' simple imprisonment for her activities. She will be treated as a Class A prisoner, a prisoner of the most favored kind. Short of duration as was her leadership, it raised her to the position of one of the outstanding feminine figures in the world today.

I first met this fiery prophet of a civilization which is almost impenetrable to Western minds at a tea in the New York studio of a distinguished painter, on the occasion of her visit to this country two years ago. She wore a crimson sari heavily embroidered in gold, long gold earrings and a necklace and brooch of massive design. On her forehead was the mark of the Brahman, the highest, the sacerdotal caste of India, into which she was born.

What she wore, however, seemed of little consequence to this impassioned worker for a nation's freedom, and she found annoying the prick of American levity when a guest laughingly remarked: "Ah, madame, we all hope that you will stay a long time, so that we can learn how you put on your sari!" The black eyes flashed. "I have come thousands of miles not to teach Americans about saris," she retorted, "but about quite other matters."

HOWEVER, this was a tea, and Mrs. Naidu did not wish to talk then of these "other matters." During the afternoon she revealed herself as a poet. From the three volumes of her English verse, "The Bird of Time," "The Broken Wing" and "The Golden Threshold," she read with great beauty for more than an hour.

These poems were written in English, which to her is as familiar a tongue as her own. They show not only a complete mastery of the language and its prosody, but also an affinity with Western emotional experience. The range is extensive. Some poems are exquisite, others exotic; many are aflame with patriotic fervor. There are paeans to great men and hymns to a comprehensive and nonsectarian religion, such as her "Ode to H. H. the Nizam of Hyderabad," who is a Mohammedan:

"Beneath your sway concordant dwell

And they who bear on Vedic brows
Their mystic symbols of belief.

"And they who worshipping the sun
Fled o'er the old Iranian sea;
And they who bow to Him who trod
The midnight waves of Galilee."

Mrs. Naidu belongs to a family of scholars, noted in East Bengal as patrons of Sanskrit learning. Her father, Aghorenath Chattopadhyay, took a B. S. from the University of Edinburgh and was a brilliant student at Bonn. In his native city, Hyderabad, he founded Nizam College. His large family, of whom Sarojini was the eldest, were all taught English from infancy. Her father intended to prepare her for a mathematical and scientific career and at 12 years of age she matriculated at Madras University and became famous throughout India.

One day, however, she had difficulty in solving a problem in algebra, and in her distress broke into verse. This was the beginning of a prolific literary output. Between the ages of 13 and 15 she wrote a long poem in imitation of "The Lady of the Lake," a drama 2000 lines in length, a novel, and some other serious works. Her mother, Bundari Devi, was a lyric poet and evidently made a large contribution to the talents of Sarojini.

About this time Sarojini became greatly interested in Dr. Govindurajulu Naidu, a scholar and member of an old and honorable family, but not a Brahman. Because of the difference in caste both families opposed the marriage and Sarojini was sent unwillingly to England. There she studied at King's College, London, and at Girton, and became a favorite of Edmund Gosse, the critic and poet, who encouraged her to write verse and urged her to express her Oriental emotions and faiths. She had become too English when she poured out her heart in the meters of her foster country.

She was not, however, altogether favorably impressed by her fellow students. "Beautiful worldly women of the West," she cried, "so consciously attractive in their brilliant toilettes, in the brilliant coquetries of their manners! I find them a little incomprehensible. Are these incalculable frivolities and vanities and coquetries a part of their charm?"

Finally she returned to Hyderabad, and married Dr. Naidu. The experiences of marriage and motherhood are richly recorded in her verse.

WHEN, on the afternoon of the tea, she laid down the volumes in which were recorded the most profound moments of her life before the great events in the India of this dramatic era to which she returned, she invited me to call at her hotel on the following morning.

"I love the English people," she declared, "but I do not love the British rule in India. I oppose it not because it is British but because it is foreign. I see no path to that universal peace which we all desire except through the abolition of subject nations. A public dinner was given for me a few days ago. The banquet room was decorated with the flags of many nations, but for my country there was no flag. The West formulates peace pacts and denies a flag to a country of 300,000,000 inhabitants."

Caustic wit burning into what she appraises as insincere and hypocritical is an essential quality of Mrs. Naidu's nature.

I inquired whether it was not going to be difficult for India to join the march of what the West calls progress so long as India's religions make necessary the practice of customs opposed to Western ethics. For instance, would not caste have to be obliterated; child marriage prohibited (this, of course, was before the recent law raising the age of consent); and certain sanitary reforms, contrary to religious dogmas, initiated?

Mrs. Naidu at once perceived that many of my impressions were drawn from Katherine Mayo's "Mother India," and as this nationalist had come to the United States, or so I believe, largely to overcome the impressions created by that work, she was at once on the warpath.

CASTE, she maintained, was misunderstood in the West, and did not involve the persecutions which we accredited to it. In defense of child marriage she quoted some of our state laws, obsolete as to practice yet still existent, permitting marriages at ages almost as early as those in India, where, she claimed, climate and customs were their justification.

I suggested that with us these matters were contradictions of our purposes and usual conduct, matters which we all agreed were in need of correction, whereas the practices in India to which I had reference appeared to me to be rooted in the religions of that country. She continued to counter every allusion I made to what seemed to me undesirable social and hygienic conditions in her country by references to the many abuses of moral and civil law perpetrated by the West.

When I asked if there were any organized feminist movement in India, Mrs. Naidu replied that she hoped not; that she was opposed to conflict and comparison between the sexes and found that despite all that Western women have obtained, they were still positively hysterical on the subject of sex equality. She said that the immense households of India, where many members of several generations live together, gave women enormous influence and opportunity within the domestic sphere.

Of course, she deplores the fact that so small a percentage of India's women are literate, but she does not believe that it is desirable to attain education at the cost of having it supplied from without by the foreigner. To be valuable it must, she is convinced, develop from within, as an organic growth instinctively interpreting the national mind.

"Are not such methods," I asked, "as the promotion of hand spinning and weaving, and the opposition to all manifestations of our industrial civilization voiced by the Gandhi, too medieval to be really effective?"

"The innumerable hand looms," she replied, "which the Gandhi has set up in the villages are proving themselves effective agents against dire want and depressed faith and hope. They are arousing a sense of nationalism, and while the shuttle weaves its patterns in the textile, the pattern of Indian thought is also taking form in a renewed national consciousness. Moreover, by means of weaving the unspeakable poverty of our villages and agricultural workers is in some measure mitigated."

"Might it not be better mitigated by the installation of modern agricultural machinery?" I asked. "Why does not India invest her money from her exports in such machinery instead of hoarding it in gold?"

"We shall at last build up our own culture," she said. "We do not want that of foreign nations. What is today, tomorrow is not. The industrial age, is it eternal?"

MRS. NAIDU believes as much in the power of the poet as in that of the politician. When she told me of being offered the mayorship of Bombay, she exclaimed: "But why should I be merely a Mayor? I am a poet and I must work all over India." However, in 1926 she was elected President of the India National Congress at Cawnpur, the first woman to hold such an office. It proved to be a stormy one, but her control of the situation was an indication, if that were needed, of her competence to assume the leadership of the present uprising.

"I do like your America," she said as she bade me good-by. "It has no petty fault. It is full of aspiration and idealism. Look at its architecture! No, I do not find America materialistic. How could a nation be great if it were fundamentally materialistic?"

From Saloon Porter to POET LAUREATE

John Masefield, Who Left School Before He Was 14 and Worked at Odd Jobs and as a Sailor, Brings a New Kind of Background to the Distinguished Post Which Dates Back to Chaucer—His Emoluments Will Include a Butt of Sack and About $350 Annually.

LONDON.

A MAN who consecrated himself to write "Not of the princes . . ." but of ". . . the scorned —the rejected . . . The men with broken heads and the blood running into their eyes . . . the dust and scum of the earth" is now the official poet to the most eminent of princes, the King of England. And England is wondering how this singer of lowly people, this former saloon porter and laborer, will use his muse as Poet Laureate.

Will John Masefield, in his new estate, continue to find his chief inspiration in pity for suffering humanity? Will he be able now to see grandeur in worldly pomp and power and make verses on the glory of empire? Will he comment in poetry on the vast political and economic disturbance in India? If the Prince of Wales should marry, what kind of rhyme would Masefield make on the occasion—supposing he made any?

Any number of such questions are suggested by the previous work and personal history of the man recently placed at the head of English letters.

Of course there is no external compulsion in these days about what the Poet Laureate writes. He can turn out poems on royal marriages and deaths and other events of national interest or not, just as he likes. His position is an award rather than a job. But the earnestness of Masefield and his concern with plain people and their pursuits, his closeness to life as it is lived, have aroused an interest in his future creative output that hardly was excited by the elevation of his more aloof predecessors.

The men who have held the post before him were educated formally and thoroughly in universities—erudite, scholarly men. Masefield quit school before he was 14 and was educated by rough, bruising contact with the world, and by solitary reading.

Born in Ledbury, in the west of England in 1875, John Masefield went to sea when still a boy; some say he ran away from home, others that his father sent him aboard ship because of repeated truancies from school. He spent several years on sailing ships, as cabin boy, cook and seaman, visiting the far places of the earth.

JOHN MASEFIELD.

From the drawing by T. Martine Ronaldson in the Illustrated London News, by permission.

One day in the 1890's, the young sailor left ship in New York and set out to see America. He became a hobo, in that he was itinerant and worked only sporadically. He tramped about the country, stopping briefly to work as a farm hand or at most any other kind of a job, when it became necessary to earn some money.

Back in New York, after two months on a farm, Masefield moved into a garret in Greenwich Village with two friends and began to look for work. He wore a red shirt and dungarees and an old slouch hat with a broken brim, and employers didn't seem to want his services. His friends were equally unsuccessful in their hunt for jobs and for a time the three were very much on their uppers. They did their own washing, drying their clothes out the windows. One slept on the floor as there was only one bed in their garret. Once, according to a letter Masefield wrote to a friend in London, the three companions in adversity went out on the street and sang, hoping to collect a little money, but were driven in by rain "before the citizens had time to get out an injunction."

AT LAST the young seaman got a job. It was as porter in the barroom of the Colonial House on Sixth avenue, operated by one Luke O'Connor. Masefield had been going there for a glass of beer at noon, attracted chiefly by the free lunch.

For $10 a month and board and room, Masefield washed glasses, looked after the free lunch, carried drinks to tables in the saloon and rooms in the hotel, kept ice packed around the piping through which the beer ran, kept the icebox filled, polished the brass footrail and swept floors. He took his meals with the boss' family at their flat and slept in the hotel attic. Occasionally he looked after the O'Connor baby. And in his scanty leisure he read the "Morte d'Arthur."

Luke O'Connor is dead now, but before he died his former chore boy had become famous. A few years ago, when the poet was visiting New York, he looked up his old employer and talked with him about the days of their association.

After a few months at the saloon, Masefield went to Yonkers to work in a carpet factory for $1 a day. And it was there, as he told later, that he definitely decided to become a writer. Out of his wages he managed to buy some books and one of them was Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales." That book decided him. Before that he had had some idea of studying medicine, but after reveling in the rich, meaty verse of old Geoffrey, seeing what could be made from the language and the lives of common people, he determined to see what he could do in that line.

He returned to England in 1897. Encouraged by Jack B. Yeats, artist and brother of the poet, he sold prose and verse pieces about the sea and book reviews to newspapers, notably the London Daily News and the Manchester Guardian. The wanderer settled down to a career of writing. In 1902 he published a book of sea poems, "Salt Water Ballads," filled with verses such as:

"I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by,
And the wheel's kick and the wind's song and the white sail's shaking,
And a gray mist on the sea's face and a gray dawn breaking."

OTHER books followed in the next few years: "A Mainsail Haul," "Ballads," "Poems and Ballads," "William Shakspeare." In 1903 he married Constance de la Cherois-Crommelin of Antrim County, Ireland.

In 1911, Masefield joined the literary world with his rough, plain-spoken, powerful narrative poem of a man's wickedness and redemption, "The Everlasting Mercy." Critics deplored some of its coarse language and uneven workmanship, but acclaimed it, generally, as a work of art. And common people of the sort unaccustomed to poetry read this poem and relished it. Masefield became famous rather suddenly.

The next year appeared "The Widow in the Bye Street," which some consider his best work. In 1913 came "Dauber," which others think contains the finest product of his poetic genius in its dramatic account of a sailing ship's battle with wind and wave in rounding the Horn. With these poems he was established as one of the great poets, almost unsurpassed in dramatic, narrative verse.

The World War interrupted Masefield's literary work. In the early days of the conflict he entered hospital service in France, acting as stretcher-bearer and orderly. Then he was sent to Gallipoli to help look after the wounded. After a serious illness he was sent back to France as one of the twelve historians of the British armies, and in that capacity observed some of the most bitter fighting of the war, sometimes going into front-line trenches for the purpose. He wrote a long preface to the history of the battle of the Somme and called it "The Old Front Line." As a result of his experience at the Dardanelles he wrote another war sketch, "Gallipoli."

TWICE in the course of the war Masefield visited America on lecture tours, once in 1916 and again in 1918. In an interview on the second visit he said: "Some sort of international league to prevent recurrence of this thing will have to come out of the war. . . . Germany will have to come into this league."

When he visited Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex., on this tour, the poet was taken for an airplane ride and entertained by the officers. Grateful for the hospitality he had received, he sat down in the commandant's office and wrote a poem about his visit for publication in the Kelly Field paper. He said it was the first verse he had written for eighteen months.

Since the war, Masefield has devoted himself principally to fiction and drama, although one of his most highly-esteemed poems, "Reynard the Fox," appeared in 1919. Fiction and drama were not new fields for him. Among his earlier books were two novels, "Captain Margaret" and "Multitude and Solitude"; and the plays, "The Tragedy of Nan," "The Tragedy of Pompey the Great" and "Philip the King" belong to the pre-war period. Of his later work, the novel, "Sard Harker," abounding in strength and beauty but with a ridiculously melodramatic ending, and the drama, "The Trial of Jesus," which some people thought at first had been written by George Bernard Shaw, have attracted considerable attention.

EVIDENCE of an intense spirituality may be found through the writings of Masefield, and a deep religious feeling—even if there is wonder, at times, at the hard lot of many of the children of God. The poet evidently believes also in a series of earthly lives for one spirit, as witness "A Creed," in the first verse of which he says:

"I held that when a person dies
His soul returns again to earth;
Arrayed in some new flesh disguise
Another mother gives him birth.
With sturdier limbs and brighter brain
The old soul takes the roads again."

Masefield has two children now, a son and a daughter, and the family lives at Boar's Hill, about six miles from Oxford. In his garden is a private theater, and there the village people give several plays a year—poetic dramas. The poet's daughter makes the costumes, his wife helps with the business management and he directs the actors, occasionally taking a part himself.

Recent interviewers have found the shy, earnest man with the schoolboy bang down his forehead very happy over his appointment as Poet Laureate. He has received a good many honors, of course—praise of critics, honorary doctorates from Oxford and the universities of Manchester and Aberdeen, literary prizes, and such things. But to be made Poet Laureate of England, successor to Southey, Wordsworth, Tennyson—it's quite a step from reefing a sail under the sulphurous command of a bucko mate, sweating behind a plow, and scrubbing spittoons in a barroom.

As to one of the interesting emoluments of his new office, a butt of sack each year, Masefield expects to follow the example of his immediate predecessors and take it in cash—about $100 annually. He says he stopped drinking alcoholic liquor twenty-five years ago; stopped smoking, too. In addition to his allowance for wine from the Lord Steward, the Poet Laureate also receives about $350 a year from the Lord Chamberlain.

While Chaucer might be said to have been the first Poet Laureate because of his allowance of wine from the King, the office of poet attached to the royal household was first held by Ben Jonson, the position being created by Charles I in 1617, but not with the title of Poet Laureate. This title was first conferred on Dryden in 1670 by letters patent.

When Robert Bridges, the late Poet Laureate, died early in the spring, there was much speculation as to who his successor would be, with due regard for the fact that a Labor Government held sway in England. Kipling was one of those most frequently mentioned. And the old story that he had deeply offended the ruling family of Great Britain by his poem, "The Widow at Windsor," referring to Queen Victoria, was revived. It was widely felt, also, that Kipling's imperialistic trend of mind would not suit Premier MacDonald, whose right it was to recommend someone. A. E. Housman, Alfred Noyes and Sir Henry Newbolt were among other possibilities discussed.

That Masefield was chosen is not greatly to be wondered at. In the first place, he is a poet whose quality is recognized throughout the world. In the second place, much of his writing has been of English things—English ships and men, the life of the English countryside and the beauties of the English scene. And in the third place—what must have appealed especially to the Labor Government—his work has ever shown his profound feeling of kinship for men who work with their hands.

WHEN he was a boy in Cleveland, Willie Walter showed promise of becoming, with time and practice, a pianist. They even went so far as to hope that some day he would be a concert pianist. But a millstone intervened—a very literal millstone in this instance. This millstone had been cast off in the belief that it would never do any more good in the world and had been left leaning against a fence. Willie used to play around it. One day it fell over on Willie's left hand and gave him a convincing excuse for refusing to practice. Thus, he relates now, that worn-out millstone whose usefulness was supposed to be ended saved the world from having to listen to one more very bad pianist.

Some 10 years later young Walter went to the University of Michigan. He specialized in Latin and Greek, with every intention of becoming a teacher of classical languages. Upon graduation he had some very good offers, too. But something intervened again. This time it was a stubborn mental disorder popularly called the "newspaper bug." He had worked on the college weekly, which is an almost certain source of infection. So, having been infected, he could do nothing but get a job as a reporter and let the disease run its course, as it was bound to do anyway. The result was, the world was spared another bad teacher. "Damned bad teacher," I think he said when he told me about it.

So it went. One thing or another saved the world from having to put up with William E. Walter in some role for which he was not fitted, and in time he recovered on his own power from the bite of the newspaper bug. By that time his course was cut out for him. It led in a roundabout way to the discovery that he had a peculiar genius for doctoring run-down symphony orchestras and putting them on their feet. He was somewhat late in getting around to it, but he became eventually a symphony orchestra doctor. He is manager of the rejuvenated St. Louis orchestra now; has been for three years. That's why it is rejuvenated—rejuvenated from an artistic standpoint, anyway. He has a way of putting new life into symphony orchestras and making the most of what is there already. "Doctor" is a more appropriate term in his case than manager. That is what they call him in the East, where he made his reputation in this pursuit—symphony doctor. At symphony doctoring he is hard to match. But his acquaintances say it was a "break" for everybody when Providence or whatever it was steered him away from pianism and teaching.

WHETHER William E. Walter looks the part of a symphony doctor I am unable to say. He is the first one I ever saw. But he doesn't look either like a concert pianist or a professor of classical languages. He is rather too jovial in appearance and manner and too well-fed looking. He is a short, stout man of 60, who appears to be at least 10 years younger; who laughs readily, talks volubly and never looks worried. He was evasive when I asked him if he attributed his disposition to the fact that he had remained a bachelor. He likes good food and is celebrated for his ability to procure it in hotels and restaurants where its presence is scarcely suspected by the average diner. The secret seems to be in knowing just what to tell the waiter to tell the chef. He likes good books, too. His suite at the Coronado Hotel contains a library of extraordinary proportions. He likes Balzac and Zola especially. He likes good music, likes to travel in Europe. He likes Paderewski.

He can talk for hours about the famous Polish pianist and statesman. He regards his association with Paderewski as the brightest spot in his life, brighter even than his three years on the staff of the old New York Sun under Charles A. Dana. The friendship had its beginning in the early nineteen hundreds, when Walter was engaged to travel ahead of Paderewski on an American tour and organize concerts for him. It continued through the years of the pianist's popularity on the American concert stage, and when Paderewski became Premier of Poland after the war Walter remained with him in Warsaw for several months as his American secretary. He got to know the Polish genius as few other

Of his later work, the novel, "Sard Harker," abounding in strength and beauty but with a ridiculously melodramatic ending, and the drama, "The Trial of Jesus," which some people thought at first had been written by George Bernard Shaw, have attracted considerable attention.

EVIDENCE of an intense spirituality may be found through the writings of Masefield, and a deep religious feeling—even if there is wonder, at times, at the hard lot of many of the children of God. The poet evidently believes also in a series of earthly lives for one spirit, as witness "A Creed," in the first verse of which he says:

"I held that when a person dies
His soul returns again to earth;
Arrayed in some new flesh disguise
Another mother gives him birth.
With sturdier limbs and brighter brain
The old soul takes the roads again."

Masefield has two children now, a son and a daughter, and the family lives at Boar's Hill, about six miles from Oxford. In his garden is a private theater, and there the village people give several plays a year—poetic dramas. The poet's daughter makes the costumes, his wife helps with the business management and he directs the actors, occasionally taking a part himself.

Recent interviewers have found the shy, earnest man with the schoolboy bang down his forehead very happy over his appointment as Poet Laureate. He has received a good many honors, of course—praise of critics, honorary doctorates from Oxford and the universities of Manchester and Aberdeen, literary prizes, and such things. But to be made Poet Laureate of England, successor to Southey, Wordsworth, Tennyson—it's quite a step from reefing a sail under the sulphurous command of a bucko mate, sweating behind a plow, and scrubbing spittoons in a barroom.

As to one of the interesting emoluments of his new office, a butt of sack each year, Masefield expects to follow the example of his immediate predecessors and take it in cash—about $100 annually. He says he stopped drinking alcoholic liquor twenty-five years ago; stopped smoking, too. In addition to his allowance for wine from the Lord Steward, the Poet Laureate also receives about $350 a year from the Lord Chamberlain.

While Chaucer might be said to have been the first Poet Laureate because of his allowance of wine from the King, the office of poet attached to the royal household was first held by Ben Jonson, the position being created by Charles I in 1617, but not with the title of Poet Laureate. This title was first conferred on Dryden in 1670 by letters patent.

When Robert Bridges, the late Poet Laureate, died early in the spring, there was much speculation as to who his successor would be, with due regard for the fact that a Labor Government held sway in England. Kipling was one of those most frequently mentioned. And the old story that he had deeply offended the ruling family of Great Britain by his poem, "The Widow at Windsor," referring to Queen Victoria, was revived. It was widely felt, also, that Kipling's imperialistic trend of mind would not suit Premier MacDonald, whose right it was to recommend someone. A. E. Housman, Alfred Noyes and Sir Henry Newbolt were among other possibilities discussed.

That Masefield was chosen is not greatly to be wondered at. In the first place, he is a poet whose quality is recognized throughout the world. In the second place, much of his writing has been of English things—English ships and men, the life of the English countryside and the beauties of the English scene. And in the third place—what must have appealed especially to the Labor Government—his work has ever shown his profound feeling of kinship for men who work with their hands.

A NEW FEATURE OF THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE

WHEN he was a boy in Cleveland, Willie Walter showed promise of becoming, with time and practice, a pianist. They even went so far as to hope that some day he would be a concert pianist. But a millstone intervened—a very literal millstone in this instance. This millstone had been cast off in the belief that it would never do any more good in the world and had been left leaning against a fence. Willie used to play around it. One day it fell over on Willie's left hand and gave him a convincing excuse for refusing to practice. Thus, he relates now, that worn-out millstone whose usefulness was supposed to be ended saved the world from having to listen to one more very bad pianist.

Some 10 years later young Walter went to the University of Michigan. He specialized in Latin and Greek, with every intention of becoming a teacher of classical languages. Upon graduation he had some very good offers, too. But something intervened again. This time it was a stubborn mental disorder popularly called the "newspaper bug." He had worked on the college weekly, which is an almost certain source of infection. So, having been infected, he could do nothing but get a job as a reporter and let the disease run its course, as it was bound to do anyway. The result was, the world was spared another bad teacher. "Damned bad teacher," I think he said when he told me about it.

So it went. One thing or another saved the world from having to put up with William E. Walter in some role for which he was not fitted, and in time he recovered on his own power from the bite of the newspaper bug. By that time his course was cut out for him. It led in a roundabout way to the discovery that he had a peculiar genius for doctoring run-down symphony orchestras and putting them on their feet. He was somewhat late in getting around to it, but he became eventually a symphony orchestra doctor. He is manager of the rejuvenated St. Louis orchestra now; has been for three years. That's why it is rejuvenated—rejuvenated from an artistic standpoint, anyway. He has a way of putting new life into symphony orchestras and making the most of what is there already. "Doctor" is a more appropriate term in his case than manager. That is what they call him in the East, where he made his reputation in this pursuit—symphony doctor. At symphony doctoring he is hard to match. But his acquaintances say it was a "break" for everybody when Providence or whatever it was steered him away from pianism and teaching.

WHETHER William E. Walter looks the part of a symphony doctor I am unable to say. He is the first one I ever saw. But he doesn't look either like a concert pianist or a professor of classical languages. He is rather too jovial in appearance and manner and too well-fed looking. He is a short, stout man of 60, who appears to be at least 10 years younger; who laughs readily, talks volubly and never looks worried. He was evasive when I asked him if he attributed his disposition to the fact that he had remained a bachelor. He likes good food and is celebrated for his ability to procure it in hotels and restaurants where its presence is scarcely suspected by the average diner. The secret seems to be in knowing just what to tell the waiter to tell the chef. He likes good books, too. His suite at the Coronado Hotel contains a library of extraordinary proportions. He likes Balzac and Zola especially. He likes good music, likes to travel in Europe. He likes Paderewski.

He can talk for hours about the famous Polish pianist and statesman. He regards his association with Paderewski as the brightest spot in his life, brighter even than his three years on the staff of the old New York Sun under Charles A. Dana. The friendship had its beginning in the early nineteen hundreds, when Walter was engaged to travel ahead of Paderewski on an American tour and organize concerts for him. It continued through the years of the pianist's popularity on the American concert stage, and when Paderewski became Premier of Poland after the war Walter remained with him in Warsaw for several months as his American secretary. He got to know the Polish genius as few other persons have known him. "A man of really true nobility," he says of Paderewski. "A man of stupendous knowledge, in every sense a gentleman."

In his capacity, at various times, as music critic, press agent, concert organizer, symphony orchestra manager, he also got to know many other great artists, as well as innumerable lesser lights of the concert stage. He knew all of that galaxy of opera stars who shone so brightly in the nineties and early nineteen hundreds. Homer, Sembrich, Melba, Eames, Nordica, Calve, Caruso—the list is a long one. That period was a sort of golden age of singers. It produced great instrumentalists, too. But Paderewski, he declares, was the greatest personality of them all and is the greatest personality in music at the present time.

"All great artists," he asserts, "are great for something besides their music. Unless they are they seldom become great artists. They must create for themselves a rich background either of culture or character. Paderewski has both. He is a great musician who is many-sided. He has the mind of a philosopher."

Next to Paderewski, the subject William Walter likes best to talk about is the old New York Sun. What a newspaper the Sun was! How newspapers have changed since the days of Charles A. Dana! Reporters had to dig for news in those days and write it themselves. There was no such thing as a rewrite man. There was hardly such a thing as a typewriter. Dana wouldn't have them in the office. They made too much noise. Reporters had to come in and write their stuff in longhand with purple ink on yellow paper.

And what stuff they could write! Of course, no old-timer of the Sun staff would ever concede now that a modern reporter knows how to get a story or to write it.

WILLIAM E. WALTER.

WALTER worked three and a half years for the Sun. Before that he worked for two years on the staff of the Cleveland Press. Before that—but I may as well go back to the beginning. He was born in Cleveland in 1869 of New England stock. He was—and is—the elder of two brothers, the younger being no less a personage than Eugene Walter, the distinguished playwright. William finished a four-year high school course in three and went to the University of Michigan.

After two years his money ran out and he appealed to an uncle, Prof. Edward L. Walter of Michigan, for aid Uncle Edward said William was too frivolous and would have to show evidence of realization that life was something besides a succession of cocktails. So William dropped out and went to work polishing windows and doorknobs in a Cleveland drug store. After a year of that Uncle Edward was convinced and sent for William to come back to school. William went, and by way of further demonstrating his seriousness of purpose, proceeded to win admittance to Phi Beta Kappa. He was graduated in the class of 1892. It was at this point that the deadly newspaper bug got in its work and William became a reporter. He fell downstairs getting to the office when the Cleveland Press offered him $15 a week.

"I used to read the New York papers regularly," he relates, "and, like most young reporters of the time, finally decided that life wasn't worth living unless I could get on the Sun staff. I finally got to New York and about the first thing I saw was the gilt dome of the New York World Building. Right there I almost forsook the Sun for the World. I went on to the Sun office, however, and to my surprise they hired me.

"As an experienced reporter, I got $15 a week to start, and eventually was put on space rates, which made it possible to earn at least $35 a week. Columns were columns then, set in unleaded nonpareil type. It took a lot of digging to fill one. I got to be regarded as a 'bright young man,' but so far as I can remember now, about the only permanent contribution I made to journalism was the invention of the word 'peepul.' I once reported a speech Henry Clay Sulzer made from a cart in Mulberry street, and in writing my story spelled everything phonetically. 'Peepul' was the only word that caught hold."

The transition from a space-rate newspaper reporter to a symphony orchestra manager is quite a transition any way you look at it, but in Walter's case it was so gradual that it appears now to have been a logical and natural development. About 1898 he became deeply interested in music. He refers to that as the time when he started to "get foolish." He went over to the New York Commercial Advertiser as music critic and stayed there six years.

WHEN a newspaper reporter becomes a music critic he is already entering into a transitional phase of some kind, though it's usually hard telling what is going to emerge from the transition. Walter emerged an opera press agent. He worked for Henry W. Savage, who was producing "Parsifal" in English. Pretty soon came the tour with Paderewski and Walter then found he had saved $1000, a discovery which he celebrated by going to Europe and staying there until he had spent it all. It fastened upon him the horrible habit of going abroad every year.

After that his summer address was always Paris or Berlin or Vienna or some other continental city. For some 13 years a job as press agent for the Boston Symphony Orchestra made that possible. It had other advantages, too. It enabled him to learn the delicate technique of arranging symphony programs, making up annual deficits and handling temperamental performers. It brought about his intimate acquaintance with a number of famous artists. One valuable friendship was that with Dr. Karl Muck, whom Walter regards as the greatest symphony conductor ever to wield a baton.

WALTER liked Boston. He says he stayed there too long. It was the war that took him away. He was unable to get into a combatant branch of service, so went along with the Y. M. C. A. to do concert organization work on the western front. That was in 1918. Producing entertainments for soldiers immediately after the war, he got to Paris every now and then and saw a great deal of his old friend, Paderewski. Paderewski had come to Paris as one of the Polish delegates to the peace conference. When he returned to Warsaw as Premier of Poland he took Walter along with him.

"As secretary, I wrote a few state papers," Walter relates, "and watched the wheels go round in Polish politics. That was a lean but interesting year. We were never hungry but were frequently cold. Czecho-Slovakia controlled the coal supply and hated Poland. As a result, there wasn't a hotel in Warsaw that was heated on both sides at the same time. I would have enjoyed staying longer in Warsaw, but the invading bolsheviki were getting close to the city and I was sent to conduct a trainload of women and children to Paris. There I got a cablegram asking me to come back to New York and take charge of the affairs of the old National Symphony Orchestra. I was flattered and accepted before I thought. So here I am, a symphony orchestra manager."

The years since then have been more profitable in a financial sense. But he looks back with greater fondness on those hectic and exciting months in Europe during and following the war. He had during that period several glimpses of the soul of Paderewski under circumstances that stamped them in his memory.

"I remember particularly the night of July 31, 1914," he relates. "It was a tragic night. The war had begun. Nobody knew where or how it would end. I had left Brussels on the night of July 29 for Switzerland, to be present at a fete to be given at Paderewski's home in Morges. As it turned out, I traveled on the last through train that went out of Brussels until after the war. Swiss soldiers in uniform were hastening to the border to go on frontier duty the next day. War was in the air. I was one of many Americans caught in Europe and wondering how I was going to get out. The scene at Paderewski's home was one of both comedy and tragedy. Four distinguished pianists were there, and all were playing jazz—four playing at once on two pianos—Ernest Schelling, Josef Hofmann, Opienski and Stowjowski. I never saw such a sight. An air of hysteria seemed to reign. In the next room were Paderewski, David Jayne Hill, former United States Ambassador to Germany, and several French, English and Swiss diplomats. They kept the telephones busy all night talking to Rome, London and Paris. Paderewski seemed unusually calm and serious. The war clouds had affected him deeply. I shall never forget the picture he presented when at dawn he stood on the terrace with a group of statesmen and musicians around him.

"'GENTLEMEN,' he said, 'the time of reckoning has come. I don't know whether it will be six months or six years. But, believe me, gentlemen, Germany is beaten and Poland will be free.'

"Incidentally, it was through Paderewski and his influence that President Wilson incorporated the freedom of Poland among his famous Fourteen Points.

"There is another incident I won't forget. It happened in Morges in the spring of 1920. Paderewski's finances were in a shocking condition. He had sacrificed everything—time, money, effort—for Poland. He had abandoned music in the spring of 1918 to devote Dr. Brinkley at his desk, and the microphone which he uses in broadcasting.

A Kansas Doctor who Did Something New with Radio— and Raised a Storm

TOPEKA, Kansas.

MORE than 10 years ago, in the little town of Milford, on the Kansas prairie, a Dr. John R. Brinkley started a private hospital, the Brinkley Hospital by name. His patients came to him from the surrounding wheat fields and pasture lands, either on the advice of their neighbors or by circulars, issued by Brinkley, that came to their hands. The Brinkley Hospital was just another small, private institution.

Then came radio. Upon the institution's grounds blossomed a radio station and its attendant aerials, a jazz orchestra was added to the station's staff, comedians and "old fiddlers" stood before the microphone, singers did their stuff—and between times Dr. Brinkley spoke on health, answered questions that came to his "medical question box" and sent a story flying over the air to listeners in Kansas and Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma, of his famous "compound" operation, which, involving the transplantation of goat glands, brought to the old and aged rejuvenation and the attributes of vigor.

Soon Dr. Brinkley was getting hundreds of letters a day. Of the 400 or more persons in Milford, 125 came upon the doctor's payroll. He built apartments for his workers; he donated some $50,000 to build a Methodist church. Men went to his hospital and paid $750 for the luxury of having set within their bodies the glands of goats from the Arkansas Ozarks. And Dr. Brinkley, so the story goes, out here in Milford, on the Kansas plains, reaped a fortune.

BUT the American Medical Association, which is, of course, the most important body in American medicine, condemns self-exploitation. In its code of ethics there is no place for the advertising medico.

That was one of the reasons the body looked askance at Brinkley and his radio station, KFKB. For another reason, there seemed to be considerable doubt in the minds of the American Medical Association's leaders that Dr. Brinkley, or anybody else, could take the glands of a goat, put them in a human being and thereby achieve rejuvenation.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the society's publication, wrote an editorial in which he took Dr. Brinkley severely to task.

The Kansas State Medical Association made a complaint to the Federal Radio Commission of Dr. Brinkley's aerial activities, charging that Brinkley, by way of his Milford station, had broadcast matter which they considered objectionable to the ethics of their profession, for Dr. Brinkley had prescribed by radio and the society considered this unethical.

The Kansas Medical Association also took action at home. And Dr. Brinkley has been cited to appear before the Kansas Medical Board. That board has the power to revoke the physician's license, although the physician may appeal the board's action to the courts.

BRINKLEY, however, has not remained on the receiving end of the official procedure. He has started a legal offensive. It is a suit for damages, naming Dr. Fishbein and Dr. William S. Yates of Junction City, Kansas, hard by Milford, as defendants. Brinkley charges that Dr. Yates circulated copies of what Dr. Fishbein wrote.

Has all Kansas lined up with the American Medical Association? Not so you can notice it. Brinkley, mixing sermons and hymns, jazz music and medical advice, has gathered a large following on the plains of Kansas.

The medical advice, according to Dr. Fishbein, is not as ethical as it might be. This medical advice is distributed by way of the air during those periods when Dr. Brinkley takes his place at the microphone during his "medical question box" half-hours.

For instance, Dr. Brinkley might announce, "Here I have a letter from Mrs. So-and-So of Hastings, Nebraska, in which she complains of being weak and unable to do her housework. I advise her to get my prescription Number 12."

But where does Mrs. So-and-So get prescription No. 12? Or prescription No. 10 or 46, or whatever Dr. Brinkley might advise? She may very well get it in her own home town. For numerous druggists all over the Middle West have Dr. Brinkley's prescription guide. If Mrs. So-and-So comes in and asks for No. 12, the druggist looks up No. 12, fills it, gives it to the lady, and she in turn pays him for it. And the druggist in turn sends a part of the fee to Dr. Brinkley. It is customary, all over the world, for doctors to be paid for their prescriptions.

Dr. Brinkley defends his indirect system of fee collection. He contends that he uses the money he gets from such fees toward the upkeep of KFKB.

Dr. Brinkley has brought certain druggists in Kansas business. It is not surprising that many of these men are strong for him, standing behind him. At the same time the official organization of the medical profession in the State is against him tooth and toe-nail. Dr. Brinkley got his license to practice medicine in Kansas in 1916. Before that he had been licensed in Arkansas, and at that time there was a reciprocity agreement between the medical boards of the two States whereby a physician licensed in one could obtain a license in the other by merely applying for it. That is what Brinkley did.

The complaint of the Kansas Medical Association, made through its president, Dr. L. F. Barney of Kansas City, Kansas, casts reflections upon Brinkley's early education. On the other hand, Dr. Brinkley sticks by his guns and says his education was entirely up to the legal requirements.

According to the Kansas Medical Association and newspapers who are campaigning against Brinkley, the patients who go to Brinkley for goat gland operations go away disappointed and unaided.

Brinkley replies: "They laughed at everything new since the history of the world. But we have airplanes and radios today because someone was willing to be laughed at. Maybe the good doctors of the American Medical Association cannot perform the compound operation, but I can, and I defy an impartial jury of surgeons to deny that I can make good my claims."

AT THE hearing before the Federal Radio Commission at Washington, Dr. Hugh H. Young of Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore testified that in his opinion the broadcasting of prescriptions by physicians for unidentified patients was a "great public danger."

It was Dr. Young's opinion that it would be practically impossible to make a scientifically accurate diagnosis without a physical examination and that he personally would never be willing to give "long distance" treatment for individual cases.

Dr. James Stewart, State Health Commissioner of Missouri, also testifying at the hearing, said that the medical profession considers it unethical for a doctor to prescribe treatment for a disease by way of radio.

Counsel for the complainants produced a mass of evidence purporting to show the failure of Dr. Brinkley's treatment. And counsel for Dr. Brinkley introduced a mass of evidence purporting to show the success of the Brinkley treatment. The pro-Brinkley attorneys offered affidavits of 1200 listeners of KFKB testifying to the high character of Brinkley's talks and the general popularity of the station.

Several women, who said they had paid their own expenses to Washington from places in Nebraska and Kansas, told that Brinkley's prescriptions had greatly benefited them.

The hearing before the Federal Radio Commission was to determine whether the license of Dr. Brinkley's station should be renewed.

Commissioner Robinson, who presided at the hearing, clearly indicated that he thought the possession of a radio station by a doctor who operated a hospital gave to that doctor an extraordinary influence.

He said that he doubted whether it would be proper for the Radio Commission "to allow the American Medical Association, or even the Mayo Hospital, to use a broadcasting station, primarily to promote their own interests."

Licenses for broadcasting stations are issued for three months and the usual action of the Commission is to refuse to renew a license at the time of its expiration, if the Commission holds the station should be silenced.

LEPROSY DROPS to in Korea

Where a Fourth Once Lost Their

By HERBERT ADOLPHUS MILLER

"UNCLEAN, unclean!" How the world has shuddered at that word down through the ages! There is no better synonym for loathesomeness and incurable horror than leprosy. Yet most of the people whose emotions are most deeply aroused by the thought of leprosy are living in countries far removed from the part of the world where it is most common, and have no real knowledge of the nature of the disease.

When you sail to Honolulu, the first Hawaiian island that you see is Molokai. You either remember, or have just read in descriptive circulars on the ship, that there is located America's most famous leper colony, though you later learn that there is a very much larger one in the Philippines.

If you are old enough, you remember that it was here that Father Damien dedicated his life to work with lepers, with no other idea in his mind, or in the mind of an awed and admiring world, but that he would inevitably catch the disease and die of it. The whole world was thrilled by his heroism.

Times have changed with regard to leprosy, as with most other things. Governor Farrington of the Territory of Hawaii today shows no more horror nor self-consciousness about Molokai than if he were speaking of the export of sugar. He has visited the colony regularly as part of his official duty, and tells many new things about the disease.

On the train from Nikko, north of Tokio, I fell into conversation with a genial Scotchman, who disclosed that he was from Korea. After a time I suspected that he was a missionary and asked him if he were a teacher.

He smiled and said: "Not exactly. I have charge of the leper colony." I felt a shock, but I was ashamed to run away, so I tried to look unconcerned, as though meeting leper doctors was as ordinary as meeting missionaries.

He was Dr. J. N. McKenzie of the Scotch mission, who for 18 years had been in charge of a colony of 330 lepers at Fusan, in the southern part of Korea. When he was taking his theological course he had also studied medicine.

An American, Dr. Robert M. Wilson, born in Arkansas and schooled in St. Louis, also has worked for the lepers in Korea. His colony is at Kwangju.

AFTER Dr. McKenzie and I had arrived at our destination, I put away prejudice and boldly invited him to the hotel to breakfast with me, and got from him the story which I pass on to others, who, I know, are generally as ignorant as I was.

Horror of leprosy is instilled into the minds of children from Sunday school days, and for those who have not read the Bible there are traditions and literary references. The impression of horror comes from descriptions of disfigurement by the disease, its contagiousness and its incurability. For those who have seen it, both in Biblical times and in the present, the horror comes from sight. Its method of transmission is vaguely understood, and popularly thought to be immediate and inescapable.

Science approaches leprosy, as other diseases, without emotion, and it has learned things that should both modify our attitude and wipe out the scourge. To begin with, leprosy is not nearly as contagious as tuberculosis. Of all the hundreds of people who have worked with lepers only a very few have been known to contract the disease: Father Damien, for instance, who thought contagion inescapable and took no precau-

To begin with, leprosy is not nearly as contagious as tuberculosis. Of all the hundreds of people who have worked with lepers only a very few have been known to contract the disease: Father Damien, for instance, who thought contagion inescapable and took no precautions. The old saying that you may sleep with a leper, but not with a man with the itch, stands the test of science.

Formerly leprosy prevailed over Europe, but now has been nearly eradicated on that continent. In England many old churches still have "squint slits," through which lepers could see and hear the service.

In Japan it is estimated that there are between 50,000 and 60,000 lepers out of a population of 60,000,000. This is about the ratio which holds for the total population of the globe. India, some parts of Africa and China are the worst areas. It is estimated, by taking sample areas and counting the lepers, that there are between two and three million altogether, or one in 1000, more or less.

Louisiana has the only real colony on the mainland of the United States, and it is not large. For some reason its inmates are mostly white, though the fact that the disease prevails widely in Africa would lead one to expect to find it cropping out among the Negroes. The United States Government's hospital for lepers at Carville, Louisiana, has about 300 leper inmates at the present time.

The other American colonies are in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Until recently the only method of treatment known was segregation until death released the victim. Among the Hebrews, cleanliness was a ceremonial requirement, and, while there was no segregation, there was exclusion. Since there was no scientific diagnosis, all skin diseases were probably classified as leprosy. The evidence from the Bible indicates that the marks of leprosy were white, now they are prevailingly red.

Lepers have been outcasts through the ages. Only 55 years ago the Mission to Lepers was founded in London to raise money for lepers; the religious urge to bring comfort to the hopeless and save their souls being the only things known to do. That they were incurable was taken for granted.

Before science came, it was necessary to have a religious motive to make one live with the scourge. Now that science has taken it up, medicine and religion are working together, but the impetus to scientific investigation and application still comes mainly from missionaries, whose primary interest had been to carry religion to the heathen, and comfort to the afflicted. Even in the Government hospitals in Japan, Christians are freely welcomed, and make many converts.

A friend of mine was traveling in Palestine more than 25 years ago. He fell on the deck of the ship and got a bruise which did not heal quickly, and he suffered weeks of agony in fear that he had leprosy. He should have known that if it had been leprosy he would not have felt it, and that if he had contracted it recently it would have been years perhaps before it would have manifested itself.

The germ of leprosy was first identified in 1874 and closely resembles the tuberculosis germ, but it has proved impossible to develop a culture from it. Only about a year ago in Molokai it was found that the parent is a fungus and does not resemble its offspring in the slightest degree. In this respect it is like the germ of the hookworm.

The manner of its transmission from one person to another is not yet known, nor the time of incubation—any time up to 10 years—in one case it was clearly shown to be more than 10 years.

THERE are three stages of leprosy: the incipient, not yet contagious; the virulent and the "burnt out," when it ceases to be contagious. There are also two types, nerve and tubercle; generally they are found together. The most common nerve to be affected is the one running up inside the wrist, which draws the little finger up, and the rest follow. Eventually the fingers drop off. There is no pain connected with this, though there are periods of active fever when the patient is sick. The eyebrows fall out and numb spots appear on any part of the body.

The germ of the tubercles dies in 20 minutes when exposed to the sun. The dropping off of parts of the body and the tubercle spots appearing on the face are what has given the popular feeling of horror at the sight of a leper, which has been handed down to us as a traditional feeling, even if we haven't seen lepers.

All the world heaved a sigh of relief when the news flashed around it that a cure had been found for leprosy. It had been known for a long time that chaulmoogra oil, which comes from a nut resembling the Brazil nut, had a beneficial effect, but when taken through the mouth in sufficient quantity to get results, it made the patient sick. It was not until the method of injection into the blood was adopted that cures were possible. And it was not until Dr. V. G. Heiser of the Philippines found that camphorated oil mixed with chaulmoogra would be absorbed, that its use was practical. It was then found that after the seventh injection progress was apparent.

No one yet claims that the cure is absolute, because there has not yet been sufficient time since its discovery, but there seems to be no doubt but that the fight is on the point of being won. During this period of doubt about the cure one of the tragedies is that the returned patient is greeted with suspicion and fear, and his community is practically closed to him.

One use to which such "cures" are put is in work among lepers. Dr. McKenzie has a doctor, nurses and helpers who all are cured lepers. For the cure it is important that the patient keep active, and so a colony must be a community which carries on its own work. Before entering a colony the leper's life has been so hard that he is happy when inside. At Molokai escape is difficult, but they say no one wants to leave. At Fusan and the other colonies in Korea there is no inclosure, but those who are in count it such a privilege that they do not try to run away.

The application of the treatment is so simple that it has been proposed that "treatment centers" be established, but both Governments and medical authorities have objected, first, because the traveling of lepers to the centers would be hard to handle, and, secondly, because any place chosen would object to being known as a leper center, and lepers would be likely to settle around them.

Apparently climate has no relation to the disease, though most lepers are now found in warmer climates. In both Japan and Korea they are found only in the southern parts. The reason is that, being outcasts, they find living easier where it is warm.

LEPROSY does not seem to be hereditary. At Molokai babies are taken from their mothers at birth, and Governor Farrington said that not yet had a single case appeared in the child. Dr. McKenzie has found it so difficult to dispose of the children that he lets them stay with their mother until two years of age, and he has had the same results as observed in Hawaii. Young children do not contract it.

There are between three and four times as many men as women lepers in the world. The explanation is not yet clear. It may be due to an organic difference, or to the fact that in general men have more contacts, because in most of the countries where leprosy prevails women live in relative retirement.

Both in ancient times and now lepers are largely beggars. This does not

IF YOU CARE for CACTUS

By Clara Wallace Overton

"IT'S a great country if you care for cactus." Preston Vallance was leaning on the gate of the small corral that adjoined the office of the Bar Flying W. Beside him stood his aunt, a tall, middle-aged, sunburned woman in riding breeches, wind-breaker and broad-brimmed hat. She was watching the half-dozen horses in the corral, but her nephew's gaze was on the sharp line of mountains that made a rugged blue boundary to the brown hills stretching 30 miles away.

Miss Blanche Watkins made no direct reply, and Preston went about the business of a cigarette. His little remark was as near as they ever got to any discussion of their reason for being here.

Rather suddenly, the late afternoon hush was broken by the sounds of an ancient motor making the last grade before the gentle drop into the mountain cup where the ranch lay.

"That must be Jim, with Mrs. King and her daughter," said Miss Watkins, and went to meet the car when it pulled up.

Val did not follow her. He felt that he knew every type of dude that would ever alight at the Bar Flying W. With all their wealth of variation, they fell into two classes—those who had been on ranches before, and so were most elaborately at home from the moment of arrival, and those who timidly tried to feel at home by asking questions. In this first class were city business men, who self-consciously took their West every year and often brought their wives and daughters. In the second were the half-sick.

"Is this a spree or a sinus?" Val asked indolently when Miss Watkins, her tortoise-rimmed glasses far down on her nose, had peered through the mail and announced that a Mrs. King and her daughter, Fern, had written to inquire about reservations for February.

"They don't ask any of the usual sort of questions about health conditions, so I think it's a spree." Miss Watkins was more certain as the big, battered, open car stopped at the side of the brown adobe office.

Jim climbed out by sticking one long leg over the door and then the other and began setting out the luggage. It was the luggage that confirmed Miss Watkins in her surmise. Two square dressing cases in smart cloth covers. Overnight bags. A hat trunk. Two enormous flat cases. A duffle bag. A pliable leather bag. Last, a closely-woven, French willow dog basket, with a grilled iron door, through which an interested Sealyham viewed his new surroundings.

"Darling Toofie," murmured Mrs. King, handing him over to Jim, and stepped out of the car. Miss Watkins took in the long, tailored mink coat and the smart shoe buckle on her patent-leather pump.

Behind Mrs. King another tall, slender figure in a raccoon coat descended.

"My daughter, Fern," said Mrs. King, in a successful, slightly-weary voice.

ABOVE the collar of the raccoon coat, the widest and reddest lips that Miss Watkins had ever laid eyes on up to that minute parted in a smile. Fern extended a slim hand, in its beige-colored glove.

"How do you do," she said, and at the sound of her voice Preston Vallance turned from the gate to look at the owner. It was a satin voice, but ever so casual.

Jim was gathering up the bags at her feet, billowing his long arms as he caught the pieces under them, and over his head Fern's eyes had already traveled to the only other man in her vicinity. She smiled, and Val moved toward the little group to be introduced.

"Where do these things go, Miss Blanche? Up to the patio house?" asked Jim, standing upright once more, tall and good-looking in spite of his load.

Miss Watkins nodded. "The double room. Light the fire." She turned to Mrs. King. "Would you like a cup of tea before you go to your room?"

Mrs. King was lifting an active Toofie from his basket cage into her arms. She raised dark eyes, like her daughter's in coloring, but their expression was that of a woman who had no further curiosity about her particular universe.

"Oh, my dear Miss Watkins, I shouldn't like to put you to that trouble. Fern and I are prepared to be very severe with ourselves out here. We came to be just relaxed and enjoy this lovely simplicity. Life is so very full at home."

Toofie stopped his mistress' speech by setting up a series of short, excited barks over her shoulder. "Go away, Bob!" Miss Watkins commanded the fat old collie dog.

"Oh, no, don't send him away." Mrs. King stooped with the frantic Toofie. "He and Toofie will be such playmates. See, Toofie loves him already. He always tries to chew the ear of any dog he loves."

Fern had finished a first appraisal of the slender man whom Miss Watkins had introduced as her nephew, Mr. Vallance. He was not good-looking but very interesting, she decided. Everything was very interesting. There was that good-looking boy who had met them at the train and driven them up. She wondered if he were still lighting the fire in their room.

"Mother, don't you think we had better go up and unpack?"

"Yes, dear. But haven't you a telegram to send off?"

The curve of Fern's red mouth changed.

"I'm not sending any, mother."

"Dearest, aren't you being a little hard?"

Fern said shortly, "No," turning in the direction in which Jim had made off with the bags.

Left alone, Val sat down on the low step of the office porch and watched his aunt take the slight rise of ground with a slow, easy stride. Beside her, Mrs. King moved with the incongruous air of being in the aisle of a theater.

"WE'VE had such a heavy run of wholesomeness," he thought. "This ought to be as refreshing as a strawberry in the desert."

Well, this was the desert.

Between him and those distant mountains, now purple in the last light, stretched miles of nothing but desert. The pasture around the ranch, with its niggardly feed, the stunted grass and brown hills, fell away to a great floor, visible from any rise, and on that floor there grew one thing—cactus.

The after-sunset chill enveloped him now as he sat on the porch step. He got up. For a man to have to run from cold air, take care of himself like a delicate plant, no cactus about himself, worse luck!

Val's mouth showed a bitter line oftener than he knew.

But by the time he reached the somewhat aloof brown building that was his own particular domain the line had disappeared. Every chimney in sight showed a feather of smoke, and the smell of pinon and cedar burning filled the air. It was the tiny interval of twilight before a lamp was lit. Far up the hill he heard the tinkle of the bell on old Chubb's neck as the horses went out to their night pasture. There were places worse than this, prisons more desolate.

He pushed open the door of his room and found it leaping with firelight. A girl stood there with an armful of towels. She wore a clean gingham dress and an old red sweater.

"Hello, Rose. Laundry home late again?"

"Yes, Mr. Val. I had to leave you short of towels this morning until Jim brought up the bundle from the station."

She said "Jim" as if it were a very special word.

The door was kicked open suddenly, and a tall figure stooped over and dropped an armful of wood noisily into the box beside the white-washed fireplace. Val said:

"Thanks, Jim."

"So's your old ancestor," said Jim, who prided himself on being original. He went out, clumping his wooden heels.

The girl with the pile of towels on her arm stood looking after him. When she spoke her voice was a little tremulous.

"You got all you want, Mr. Val?"

"Yes, Rose, thank you." And she left.

Val lit his lamp and began preparations for shaving, but his mind lingered on the little tableau he had just witnessed. How in the world could even the good-looking Jim compensate neat and gentle Rose for all the heartaches he caused her? One minute Jim's casual claim fell good-naturedly on the girl, the next, he showed complete heedlessness. Only that morning Val had overheard part of a conversation in the yard.

"Going to the dance Saturday night, Rose?"

"I dunno as I can."

"Sure. You can come along with me."

It had been Jim who had asked Miss Watkins in the first place to try Rose.

THAT was three months ago, and Val suspected that ever since, Rose's days had been unrelieved alternations of despair and hope. The Saturday nights when he drove to town alone. The days when he was sulky and scarcely spoke to anyone. The days when he was in too high spirits to notice her. His loud admiration of the new school-teacher over near the mining camp. And then the sudden note of possessiveness. The box of candy tossed carelessly into Rose's lap on Jim's return from town. And now, thought Val, Rose's little world had been darkened again by the arrival of this Fern girl; for Jim was not the one to imagine a woman who could find him anything but irresistible.

Val made a wager with himself about Saturday night.

The sun got over the hill behind the ranch house when the old dinner bell flung out its second call of the morning.

Miss Watkins never appeared at the breakfast table. She had a cup of tea in her own room, with a dry cracker or two, which she shared with her cat, Boots. Then she walked about the place.

Val, coming into the dining room a little after 8, found Mrs. Hurd and the two children. At the other end of the table sat Mr. Potter, a mild, gray, little man, whom Mrs. Hurd was holding at the point of her conversation.

There was no sign of Mrs. King or Fern. Val reflected that they probably breakfasted in bed. He was surprised, therefore, on going toward the office to see a slim girl in riding outfit, with an orange handkerchief knotted around her neck, perched on the rail of the corral fence. Jim was riding a half-broken colt. Again and again the little horse reared, to feel the sharp dig of spurs which sent him forward. At each wild bolt he brought up sharply.

"Perfectly marvelous," cooed Fern, showing her white teeth in their red curve of smiling lips. She took time to enhance the redness a little, smoothing the paste carefully with a white finger.

Jim dismounted and pushed back the heavy brown hair from a damp forehead. "She's going to be some little horse."

"But it was so wonderful of you to stay on."

"That wasn't nothing," he advised her modestly. "Wait till you see them rodeo ponies. They're the babies!"

"When is it?"

"About the twentieth. You going to be here then?"

"I most certainly am. I wouldn't miss it for worlds."

"You're going to ride a grand little pony this morning," he assured her.

A little later, from his chair by the office window, Val saw them galloping down the trail that led to the canyon.

Miss Watkins, working at her desk near by, moved her dried, sunburned lips mechanically. Forty-four, fifty-two; five to carry. Sometimes she tapped her teeth with the end of her pencil while she wrestled with some special difficulty. The eight-day clock ticked loudly. Old Bob, the collie, lay stretched in the oblong of sunlight before the door.

VAL finished his typing. His aunt rested from her calculations, taking off the heavy-rimmed glasses and rubbing her faded blue eyes.

"Well," she said, "we only ran behind $117.34 last month. The month before it was over $200. This month we may break even. We've got booking nearly full up from the fifteenth on."

Looking at this homely, middle-aged woman with the thin, faded, brown hair, the complexion that would never again know freshness, the bony and wrinkled hands, Preston Vallance felt a wave of tenderness rise in his breast. It was she who had staked the most in this joint venture, and she who bore the brunt of the daily mischances; the braver in the face of disaster. Miss Blanche Watkins had sold her lifetime's home in Montreal and had taken most of her capital to put with her nephew's into this ranch, which could never pay as a cattle ranch She had moved the heavy old desk at which she was sitting, the silver tea service, the books and the more comfortable chintz-covered chairs out to Arizona, so that Val, desperately ill after his service in France, might have a place of his own and a few familiar things about him rather than lifelong residence in a sanatorium. His parents were dead; his two brothers and most of his generation had been killed in the war. There had been no one left to him but this matter-of-fact woman; now all his affections were centered in her.

He could feel the hurt of tears back of the eyeballs as he said banteringly: "I suppose next month I'll have to sit up nights to guard the surplus in the safe."

The long oak telephone box on the wall shrilled at them, and Miss Watkins grasped her pad and stubby pencil. This was the business of taking the morning telegrams from the Western Union office in Burton. She scribbled down the pad and around its corner, saying: "Yes. Yes. Yes. Yes."

WHEN she had repeated them to the operator she handed the pad to her nephew, who resumed his seat at the typewriter. With two-fingered expertness he produced:

"Chicago, Ill.—Mrs. Pomeroy Hurd, Bar Flying W, Burton, Arizona.—Mailed children's underwear today. Spoke at City Club luncheon this noon. Made great hit. Love. Pomeroy."

"New York, N. Y.—Miss Fern King, Bar Flying W, Burton, Arizona.—Wire me if you have arrived safely. Have written sending New York Times to your mother. Love. Harvey."

Val folded the two messages, put them in envelopes on the mail table and was just in time to open the screen door for Mrs. King. She only wished, she explained, to inquire when the mail arrived and to leave some letters to go out. Trotting ahead of her on a leash was the active Toofie. He fell at once on Bob's ear.

"There's a telegram for Miss King," said Val, handing it to Mrs. King, who looked archly at him.

"A naughty mother is going to see what this poor boy has to say. Fern has been punishing him and I'm afraid it will break his heart."

She read the message and sighed with enjoyment.

"Such a thoughtful boy. He knows I adore my New York paper. Where is my little wretch, anyway?"

A yelp from Toofie answered her, and indicated that Bob had stood all the ear-chewing he would at the moment. It took some time to soothe wounded feelings all around.

"Where is Fern?" resumed Mrs. King. "The naughty child must relent and send Harvey a telegram."

"She went riding some time ago," answered Miss Watkins.

Mrs. King was politely disturbed. "Not alone, I hope."

"Oh, no," said Val's aunt. "Jim's with her."

"I'M GLAD there's someone to look after her. The child does need a holiday. At home she plays around with these young things day and night, and Fern is not like an ordinary girl. She's very high-strung and unselfish, and never spares herself a bit. Just now she's taking this firm stand with Harvey—and it was simply wearing her out.

"Harvey thinks they could get along in an apartment for a year or two, but Fern has set her heart on a house in Scarsdale and she simply won't be talked into marrying without it. She said to me, almost with tears in her eyes, 'Mamma, I want my own home right from the start.' I think, myself, it's rather sweet of her to feel that way, but Harvey won't give up the idea of marrying this spring and taking an apartment; so Fern decided just to come away for a while and punish him."

"Yes. Yes. Of course," offered Miss Watkins, in the tone in which she took down telegrams.

"I really mustn't keep you any longer," Mrs. King protested. "Come, Toofie."

She stepped out on the porch just in time to see her daughter and Jim arriving.

"Oh, mother!" Fern called out. "Come here and see this darling pony. We've had the most heavenly ride, and what do you think? There's a dance at Burton tomorrow night—just loads of cowboys and everything—and Jim is going to take me."

"Is it safe, Jim?" appealed Mrs. King.

"Yes, ma'am. Safe as a rattlesnake under cover. I'm takin' a whole crowd from here."

"Well," acquiesced Mrs. King indulgently, adding: "Here's a telegram for you, dear. You really ought to send a reply."

Fern's chin tilted.

"There isn't any answer," she announced. "Have the trunks come from the station, mother? Well, then, let's go unpack"—her voice became very smooth—"because we're going to be here a long time."

"Don't forget about the dance, Miss Fern," Jim called, and got a gay wave in reply.

Inside the office Val helped himself to a cigarette. He had won his wager.

At 5:30 on Saturday afternoon a Ford touring car stood rakishly on a rise near the brown adobe office of the Bar Flying W. The owner of the car, in apricot-colored shirt and green kerchief, was completing one of his rare inspections.

"Some boat," he told the world.

THE world consisted, at the moment, of Preston Vallance, seated on an old settle under the blue-framed window and oiling his boots.

The telephone rang.

Val got up, wondering if this were another telegram from that fellow Harvey. There had been two, so far today, but they had remained unanswered until Mrs. King had sent off a discreet reply to the second one an hour ago. It merely said:

"We arrived safely. Thanks for the papers. Alicia King."

"But he wouldn't have that yet," surmised Val. In reply to his "Yes," the Burton telephone operator said:

"Excuse it, please. There was a long-distance call from St. Louis, but the operator's left the wire now."

Val hung up the receiver and went back to his boots.

The forlorn figure of Mr. Potter, emerging from a day in his room, rounded the corner of the office.

"Going to the dance, Jim?" Mr. Potter eased his little body to the settle beside Val. "Well, that's good. When I was younger, I was a great dancer myself. My brother used to say, 'I don't see how you stand it, Fred.' But many's the time I danced till breakfast. How about you, Mr. Val?"

"Never learned," said Val shortly.

"That's too bad. Got a crowd going with you, Jim?"

"Yeah, quite a crowd."

"I like to see young people enjoy themselves," continued Mr. Potter. "This must be Rose coming down now."

Her pinkish-brown coat was far too light a wrap for the night ride down the mountain and back in an open car. The raw green of her cheap silk dress was visible. Above her sallow face a brown satin hat with a matronly crown and much gold lace seemed like a burden on her head.

Val moved along the bench. "Sit down, Rose," he invited.

The girl glanced in Jim's direction, but that young man had unscrewed the radiator cap and was peering wisely into the dark opening.

Rose sat down, grateful and uneasy. Mr. Potter took command of the occasion.

"How nice you look, Rose. If I may say so. Getting ready to enjoy yourself, I suppose. I was just telling Mr. Vallance what a dancer I used to be. My brother used to say to me, 'I don't see how you wear out so many dancing shoes, Fred.'"

UNFORTUNATELY, the retired dancer's audience was seen to have shifted its attention, as of one accord, to a spot in front of the patio house, where a slender, confident figure in a raccoon coat had appeared an instant before. She came toward them gayly, pulling on loose suede gloves. Her small beige felt hat matched the light wool sports dress which showed beneath her coat; around her neck she wore a large string of Persian turquoise. Under one arm was the smart lizard bag which matched her shoes. She included them all in her flashing smile.

"I hope I haven't kept you waiting."

"Where's Lloyd?" asked Mr. Potter.

Rose stood up nervously, as if

By JACK McLAREN
South Seas Traveler

IT WAS in the news the other day that on one of the islands of the Coral Sea, a down-and-out beachcomber, strolling idly along the shore, stumbled upon a huge lump of ambergris—an excrescence deposited by whales and worth $20 an ounce as a basis for scent making—thereby coming into a fortune.

In the course of my wanderings in the wilds I have known many instances of fortunes being thus made by accident, as it were.

To the manager of a sugar mill in Java, an English manufacturing firm once sent by mistake a number of old-fashioned warming pans—those long-handled copper affairs used for heating beds on chilly nights! Warming pans in the sweltering heat of Java! Cursing the manufacturer for his stupidity, the manager was about to he were looking for Lloyd.

"I guess Lloyd's going, ain't he, Jim?"

"Ain't said nothing to me about it if he is."

Jim banged the door shut on Fern's side of the car and came around to his own.

"Then I guess I won't go, either," said Rose, in a flat voice.

Fern leaned toward her with a smile.

"Oh, Rose, do come. We'll all three sit here in front. There's lots of room, won't there be, Jim?"

"Yeah," said Jim, noncommittally.

Rose was flushed and hesitant. She looked at Jim.

"Well, come on if you're going," he instructed her. "This here dance is tonight and not next week."

"I'll ride in back," said Rose faintly, and got in.

"But there's absolutely loads of room here in front," began Fern, but Jim was in his driver's seat. With one final groan the car moved off down the road.

The big crowd had left for the dance.

The week following was one of those which have been specially created to try the souls of all dude-ranch owners. On Monday morning the gasoline pump which furnished the water supply turned cranky; by noon it had stopped completely, with the tanks half-full. Pete, the odd-job man, lapsed into such profanity as it had never been the privilege of Pomeroy Hurd Jr. to hear before. An hour later, over a broken shoestring, he was able to repeat a fair sample for his mother's benefit. Mrs. Hurd sent down word that she would remain in her room, with the children until Pete had been discharged.

The Hurds, booked for the winter, were a steady source of income, but the distrait Miss Watkins could not bring herself to sacrifice the faithful Pete. She sent Jeff up with a noncommittal lunch tray.

A LITTLE later a second tray had to be provided for Mrs. King, who had twisted her ankle, walking about on the rough ground. Jim and Fern had ridden over to Red Rock Canyon, a good half-day away on a horse, and could not be expected home before night. They had taken a lunch. Val scowled. It was expected that Jim would act as a guide for the dudes, but he was also responsible for the pump, and understood it as Pete did not. It was partly Jim's neglect that the pump should get this way. It was time that someone spoke sharply to Jim.

Miss Watkins said to Val: "I feel sleepy. Quite silly—but I believe I'll take a short nap."

Val, remarking suddenly the feverish face and the dull eyes, telephoned for the doctor from Burton.

A week that gets off on such a bad foot is likely to limp along, getting worse.

The doctor from Burton ordered the patient to stay in bed. He would see her again tomorrow. Late that afternoon Val spoke forcefully to Jim, who airily removed a little accumulated rust from a valve. The familiar chug-chug was heard as night fell, but Jim remained sulky with everyone

Val hung up the receiver and went back to his boots.

"Going to the dance, Jim?" Mr. Potter eased his little body to the settle beside Val. "Well, that's good. When I was younger, I was a great dancer myself. My brother used to say, 'I don't see how you stand it, Fred.' But many's the time I danced till breakfast. How about you, Mr. Val?"

"Never learned," said Val shortly.

"That's too bad. Got a crowd going with you, Jim?"

"Yeah, quite a crowd."

"I like to see young people enjoy themselves," continued Mr. Potter. "This must be Rose coming down now."

It was Rose, but Val thought the familiar, rather pretty Rose of the gingham dress and red sweater scarcely recognizable in the nervous, badly-dressed little figure, teetering toward them in stiff, high-heeled slippers.

Her pinkish-brown coat was far too light a wrap for the night ride down the mountain and back in an open car. The raw green of her cheap silk dress was visible. Above her sallow face a brown satin hat with a matronly crown and much gold lace seemed like a burden on her head.

Val moved along the bench. "Sit down, Rose," he invited.

The girl glanced in Jim's direction, but that young man had unscrewed the radiator cap and was peering wisely into the dark opening.

Rose sat down, grateful and uneasy. Mr. Potter took command of the occasion.

"How nice you look, Rose, if I may say so. Getting ready to enjoy yourself, I suppose. I was just telling Mr. Vallance what a dancer I used to be. My brother used to say to me, 'I don't see how you wear out so many dancing shoes, Fred.' "

UNFORTUNATELY, the retired dancer's audience was seen to have shifted its attention, as of one accord, to a spot in front of the patio house, where a slender, confident figure in a raccoon coat had appeared an instant before. She came toward them gayly, pulling on loose suede gloves. Her small beige felt hat matched the light wool sports dress which showed beneath her coat; around her neck she wore a large string of Persian turquoise. Under one arm was the smart lizard bag which matched her shoes. She included them all in her flashing smile.

"I hope I haven't kept you waiting."

"Where's Lloyd?" asked Mr. Potter.

Rose stood up nervously, as if she were looking for Lloyd.

"I guess Lloyd's going, ain't he, Jim?"

"Ain't said nothing to me about it if he is."

Jim banged the door shut on Fern's side of the car and came around to his own.

"Then I guess I won't go, either," said Rose, in a flat voice.

Fern leaned toward her with a smile.

"Oh, Rose, do come. We'll all three sit here in front. There's lots of room, won't there be, Jim?"

"Yeah," said Jim, noncommittally.

Rose was flushed and hesitant. She looked at Jim.

"Well, come on if you're going," he instructed her. "This here dance is tonight and not next week."

"I'll ride in back," said Rose faintly, and got in.

"But there's absolutely loads of room here in front," began Fern, but Jim was in his driver's seat. With one final groan the car moved off down the road.

The big crowd had left for the dance.

The week following was one of those which have been specially created to try the souls of all dude-ranch owners. On Monday morning the gasoline pump which furnished the water supply turned cranky; by noon it had stopped completely, with the tanks half-full. Pete, the odd-job man, lapsed into such profanity as it had never been the privilege of Pomeroy Hurd Jr. to hear before. An hour later, over a broken shoestring, he was able to repeat a fair sample for his mother's benefit. Mrs. Hurd sent down word that she would remain in her room, with the children until Pete had been discharged.

The Hurds, booked for the winter, were a steady source of income, but the distrait Miss Watkins could not bring herself to sacrifice the faithful Pete. She sent Jeff up with a noncommittal lunch tray.

A LITTLE later a second tray had to be provided for Mrs. King, who had twisted her ankle, walking about on the rough ground. Jim and Fern had ridden over to Red Rock Canyon, a good half-day away on a horse, and could not be expected home before night. They had taken a lunch. Val scowled. It was expected that Jim would act as a guide for the dudes, but he was also responsible for the pump, and understood it as Pete did not. It was partly Jim's neglect that the pump should get this way. It was time that someone spoke sharply to Jim.

Miss Watkins said to Val: "I feel sleepy. Quite silly—but I believe I'll take a short nap."

Val, remarking suddenly the feverish face and the dull eyes, telephoned for the doctor from Burton.

A week that gets off on such a bad foot is likely to limp along, getting worse.

The doctor from Burton ordered the patient to stay in bed. He would see her again tomorrow. Late that afternoon Val spoke forcefully to Jim, who airily removed a little accumulated rust from a valve. The familiar chug-chug was heard as night fell, but Jim remained sulky with everyone except Fern, and the next day, and the next, they set off for an all-day ride.

Late in the afternoon Val saw them riding into the corral, Jim boisterous and ready to be spectacular, the girl in swift mood and high color. Val did not see her later, for Jeff fixed a double tray and Fern ate dinner with her mother, whose ankle still kept her in their room. Miss Watkins was not at meals, of course; only Mr. Potter and Val faced the frigid Mrs. Hurd. Val suspected that the special delivery letter dispatched to Mr. Hurd on Tuesday morning dealt in detail with Pete's offense and the failure to punish it, and that only Mr. Hurd's formal assent to his wife's decisions was awaited.

ON FRIDAY morning Val sat alone in the office and Rose knocked at the door.

"Yes, Rose, what can I do for you?"

"It's only this, Mr. Val. I want to leave."

Val was silent for a minute, recalling that he had seen the girl pass Jim on Sunday morning following the dance without speaking. This time Rose was cutting Jim.

"I didn't want to bother Miss Watkins when she's sick," Rose was explaining, "but I thought you might try to get someone, Mr. Val. Of course, I'll stay till you do."

Val said conventionally: "Is the work too hard?"

He thought she might seize the excuse, but she shook her head. "No, it isn't the work; that's all right. It's just—well—you know how it is. A person likes a change.

"A person certainly does," agreed Val, half aloud, after Rose had gone. He went out into the sunshine.

"Oh, Lord!" he thought. "How I'd love a snowstorm!"

A great, wet, heavy snow, falling all day and all night, bending down the trees and bushes. The deep, unspoiled snow of Canada. He thought of the great snowball fights and of Peter, whose bright red head rose out of a rolling white sweater—Peter, who had died with his regiment.

The telephone rang.

"Plan to join you next month. Writing. Love. Pomeroy."

"That's Mrs. Hurd's orders to stay," reflected Val. No telegram for Fern. It was nearly a week since her last, and except for one square envelope that had probably been written before her attitude became manifest to Harvey, there had been no letters, either. Was this the way the Eastern young man was supposed to take punishment?

This week melted away quietly into the next. Miss Watkins began to improve, sat up, and one morning was moving about as usual in shabby leather coat and old hat. She made a dutiful but half-hearted attempt to replace Rose. Mrs. Hurd began to thaw at the table.

MRS. KING, definitely weary of expression, limped down to her meals. Fern either rode with Jim the greater part of the day or sat on the fence when he practiced roping.

But in the evenings she made a quiet fourth at bridge with her mother, Miss Watkins and Mr. Potter. At such times her eyes looked tired and shadowed.

Knowing Jim, Val anticipated a climax in the affair of Fern, and one afternoon, sitting quietly alone in the office, he became conscious of voices beneath the window, on the old settle. A silly laugh was followed by Jim's drawl.

"Oh, I guess when you go away from here you're going to forgit all about me."

The laugh again. "Think so?"

There was the sound of a sudden movement and Val sensed a faint struggle. Then:

"I think you're simply disgusting — absolutely — just beastly! Grabbing at me—and kissing me like that. I loathed it, if you want to know."

A short silence was exploded by Jim's indignation.

"Look here, you've been trying to get me to kiss you for over a week. What you so darn mad about, anyhow?"

Fern's laugh had become edged. "Of all the conceited people! I never encountered such simply tremendous conceit."

"Well, look here," shouted the confused and angry Jim, "what did you mean by leaning toward me and smiling, and smiling, and smiling? What'd you want if it wasn't for me to kiss you? You've been doing that ever since you got here and now you're yelling around like you been hurt!"

"You're absurd. You're perfectly funny."

"I am, am I?" yelled the thoroughly aroused antagonist. "Well, let me tell you something. Your mouth's too red and you better wash it off before you sit around smiling at me again!"

"You're impossible, as well as everything else," said Fern with finality, and departed.

Val settled his conscience. "I should have coughed in the beginning, I suppose. I'm glad I didn't."

THE next day the scowling foreman of Bar Flying W was an exceedingly busy man. In the morning the gasoline pump received a thorough going over and in the afternoon a frightened, panting steer was run down from the pasture by his hard-riding pursuer and killed before he had a chance to cool off.

It was a remarkably busy day all around. Fern was so busy she wasn't coming down to lunch, explained Mrs. King. The child was washing her hair and writing letters. Apparently she finished only one letter, for she came down rather breathlessly at 3 o'clock and left the missive asiant in the top of the slotted box for outgoing mail. Above the edge of the slot appeared, "Mr. Har"——

It was perhaps an hour after that when a car from the Burton garage stopped outside the door and a man in good-looking tweeds got out. He called cheerfully to Val, "Can you keep me overnight?"

At Val's "Yes," he came forward, holding out his hand.

"My name's Harvey Rohl."

"Oh, yes," said Val, and had difficulty in not disclosing more. "Mine's Vallance, Preston Vallance."

"I stopped off on the chance that friends of mine, the Kings, were still here," Harvey Rohl explained easily.

"Yes, they're here. They're staying in that little house just up the rise."

"I'll just run over there and say hello. I'll see you later." Harvey Rohl started off without further preamble.

That evening, while they were waiting for the dinner bell, Harvey Rohl stood beside Val, watching the last deep purple of the mountains and the full moon above them.

"Great country," he commented. "There's something about the cactus I like. I wouldn't mind having a place out here, somewhere to come to for a vacation, but I've just bought a house in Scarsdale and I'll have my hands full paying for that in the next few years."

Val took occasion to look in the office after dinner, and, as he had expected, the letter to "Mr. Har"—— had gone.

ON SATURDAY morning a group of people stood near the big, open car that carried visitors to and from the Bar Flying W. A tall, long-legged young man was piling in the luggage. There was an excited yelping and Preston Vallance handed up a French willow dog basket with a hinged iron door.

"Darling Toofie," murmured Mrs. King.

"You hold him, Harvey," said Fern.

She leaned forward slightly, parting her red lips in a farewell smile.

"I've had a sweet time, Miss Watkins."

"So restful," specified Mrs. King.

Jim was adding a sprawling note of his own on the bottom of the day's shopping list. He entered the driver's seat and the big car rolled away.

But Val stood watching the vanishing car. After a moment a look of satisfaction came on his face. He had seen the memorandum Jim had added to the shopping list.

His aunt appeared at the door to say: "Val, did I tell you that Rose isn't leaving after all? And more people are coming tomorrow, some friends of Mrs. Hurd's."

"A brief era of wholesomeness may be very beneficial," replied her nephew, but she did not hear him. The telephone was ringing.

"Yes. Yes. Yes," said Miss Watkins into the transmitter. Her pencil flew. She was decidedly the person to take down telegrams, reflected Val. On the other hand, Jim was the only person to put down:

"Box of candy for Rose."

STRANGE WINDFALLS of Wealth in the SOUTH SEAS

Men Have Come Upon Fortunes There When They Least Expected It, And in Curious Ways.

By JACK McLAREN
South Seas Traveler

IT WAS in the news the other day that on one of the islands of the Coral Sea, a down-and-out beachcomber, strolling idly along the shore, stumbled upon a huge lump of ambergris—an excrescence deposited by whales and worth $20 an ounce as a basis for scent making—thereby coming into a fortune. In the course of my wanderings in the wilds I have known many instances of fortunes being thus made by accident, as it were.

To the manager of a sugar mill in Java, an English manufacturing firm once sent by mistake a number of old-fashioned warming pans—those long-handled copper affairs used for heating beds on chilly nights! Warming pans in the sweltering heat of Java! Cursing the manufacturer for his stupidity, the manager was about to send them back when it occurred to him that the principle of the pans was exactly what was needed for a long-sought improvement in the process of granulating and drying sugar. He kept the pans, patented the idea and made a fortune larger than he ever dreamed of. His patent is in sugar mills all over the world.

TWO fugitives from the French penal settlement at New Caledonia, in the South Pacific, found that the lagoon of a small and uninhabited atoll upon which the tiny open boat in which they were escaping was wrecked was full of beche-de-mer—a species of sea-slug highly prized by the Chinese as an edible.

Unable to repair their boat and compelled therefore to remain on the atoll, they set to work diving for the slugs and smoke-curing them, living the while chiefly on cocoanuts and fish and every hour dreading the appearance of a gunboat in search of them.

They were there eight months; then a passing trading vessel put in and took them, with their beche-de-mer, to an Australian port. The beche-de-mer sold for $15,000, and I understand that the men are now, under changed names, prosperous citizens of one of the Dutch colonies.

A hard-up and out-of-luck miner on one of the Queensland alluvial goldfields came into riches through his tent blowing down one night in a rain storm. With the great weight of the wet tent pulling on it, the ground end of one of the supporting posts had acted like a lever and lifted and cracked the earth for several feet, revealing that the miner had been camped all unknowingly upon a thickly gold-studded "line" of wash dirt.

The falling of the tent thus gave him a fortune of $20,000. But unfortunately he had a lust for high gambling and within a couple of years the money was gone and he was back on the goldfields. I fear, however, that if he hoped to repeat his lucky strike, he failed; such accidents don't happen to the same man twice as a rule.

In Dutch New Guinea I knew a trader who picked up quite a little fortune by being mistaken by natives for a patrol officer. The natives of the region were a particularly troublesome lot and the administration had been driven to taking the sternest measures against them, with the result that the natives feared them as they feared nothing else.

So it was that when the trader set forth to visit the tribes for the purpose of extending his trade, the natives, hearing that a white man was coming, feared it might be one of the dreaded administration officers and in many instances hurriedly fled from their villages.

IN MOST villages there was little of value, but in one—a large central place—a great tribal festive gathering had been in progress and there, lying where they had been hastily thrown down, were numerous gorgeous headdresses composed of birds of paradise plumage. Many of them contained bluebirds and empress birds, worth $100 each, and there were scores of others, such as regianas, worth only a little less.

Not being particularly scrupulous, the trader gave up his idea of trading in the ordinary way and appropriated the birds, loading his carriers with them and returning forthwith to his station. He told me they brought him $11,000.

About to leave a place called Noble Island, a solitary, pinnacle-like rock in the inner waters of the Great Barrier Reef (Coral Sea), a fisherman, who had been anchored there for some time while he overhauled his vessel, was startled to hear shouts and cries from the native crew-boys who were heaving up the anchor. Wondering what was wrong he ran forward, but the boys had let the anchor drop back into the sea, and were murmuring something about "debil-debil" — a word which in this instance meant that here was something they did not understand and, therefore, to be feared.

At the fisherman's command they reluctantly brought up the anchor again—and every part of the hitherto black iron, even to the tips of the flukes, and also a considerable length of the chain, had turned the color of copper.

The fisherman knew little about metals and mining, but it seemed plain to him there was a deposit of copper somewhere on the island; and he went ashore to look. He found it, a naked "face" of rich ore, a little way up the side of the pinnacle-like rock, and extending down below sea level. It was the highly charged oozings from this beach had given his anchor the coating of copper. He staked out a claim on the spot, and later sold it for a sum which enabled him to give up fishing for the rest of his life.

IF YOU Care for CACTUS

Interesting St. Louisans—William E. Walter

himself to politics, and in those two years he had touched the piano only twice—once in Paris, when he played for Clemenceau, and once in Warsaw, when he played in honor of his wife's birthday. I was trying to persuade him to go back on the concert stage. In the midst of a game of piquet I said to him: 'Just supposing you do decide to go back on the concert stage next year, how long do you think it would take you to get your hands in condition?'

" 'I don't know,' he said, 'but I'll see.'

"With that he jumped up and ran to the piano and rattled off Chopin's 'Butterfly Etude.' I never heard him play it better. He came back smiling.

" 'I THINK six months' work will do,' he said. 'But I won't go back under any circumstances unless I feel I'm worthy of the patronage the public gives me. The severest critic I have is myself. When I started my career as a pianist, over 30 years ago, I made the resolution that when the season came that I did not feel that I showed some improvement over previous seasons I would stop. That is still my resolution. I owe that first to my art and second to my public.'

"There was one incident that revealed Paderewski in a somewhat novel light. It was in Warsaw on the night his Government was overthrown by Pilsudski. I knew he had disliked politics, but had been willing to serve as Premier for the good of Poland. I thought he would take his political defeat very seriously. I expected to see him come in the figure of tragedy itself, as he used to do sometimes on tour when neuritis would attack his arm. But he didn't. He came in beaming.

" 'At last I'm out of prison,' he said."

It was the job with the old National Orchestra that gave Walter his first experience at doctoring run-down symphony organizations. After he had straightened out some of its tangled affairs it was absorbed by the New York Philharmonic and his services were retained by the new society. Then, affairs of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra were getting in bad shape and Ossip Gabrilowitsch asked him to come out to Detroit and see what he could do. He went, and in three years as manager he put the flagging orchestra back on its feet. The Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia was the next patient, and then came an emergency call from St. Louis. The St. Louis orchestra was sinking rapidly and needed a doctor in a hurry. Indeed, it was a case worse even than that in Detroit. "Doctor" Walter came on the run and sat up with his patient late at night. And he pulled the patient through.

WILLIAM WALTER himself is authority for the statement that there is only one way to make an orchestra succeed. And that, he assures you, is not by exercising any magic touch. No orchestra is built up or rejuvenated by a magic touch.

"It is a matter," he says, "of playing the best music possible in the best manner possible. The best music is always available. The best manner depends on how much you can pay the director and the players, because your ability to secure an able director and able instrumentalists hangs on the price you can pay.

"An orchestra's growth always must be slow. It can never hope to pay its own way. It must be regarded as art galleries and public libraries are regarded. It must be largely maintained by the community as a cultural institution. While in one way the symphony orchestra is the most aristocratic of the arts, it is in another way the most democratic, because it appeals to all classes. The price of tickets, therefore, must be kept within the reach of all. A symphony orchestra can't charge musical comedy prices, and it still couldn't pay its own way if it did, because an orchestra can give only two or three performances a week.

"OUR WHOLE effort in the last three years has been to keep away from ballyhoo methods, to get the best conductors possible and give the best performance possible. Many great orchestras have tried sensational methods in an effort to popularize symphony and have always regretted it. Sensationalism doesn't go. That is accepted now as an axiom of the business. But at the same time the orchestra must present variety. It must play not only the classics but must also put modern music before the public in decent doses. As the art of music develops the symphony orchestra must keep up with it. Music changes, just as painting does. Symphony orchestras are becoming numerous now. There are 76 or 77 in the United States at the present time in cities ranging down to a population of 40,000, and they are operating on budgets that range from $20,000 to $950,000 a year. I get a lot of letters asking what this one or that one can do toward building up a better orchestra. There is only one thing to tell them, and I tell it to them: 'Play the best music possible with the best musicians you can hire.' "

Leprosy Death Rate Drops to 2½ Per Cent

mean that the beggar class is more liable to the disease, but that in most countries when an individual has the disease he not only cannot get work, but is thrust out from his family by the insistence of the community.

Leprosy itself is not often a cause of death, but it makes the victim easy prey to other diseases. At Dr. McKenzie's colony, during the first seven years, the death rate was 25 per cent a year. Then came chaulmoogra oil, and though in the first year its use was not applied to everyone, the deaths fell to 16 per cent, then in succeeding years to 9, 7, 6 and 2 1-2 per cent, but in that last year half the deaths were due to typhoid fever. If a patient suffers from alcoholism or tuberculosis the course of leprosy is greatly accelerated.

Much credit must be given to the United States for the work done in Molokai, to Dr. Heiser, now of the Rockefeller Institute, and to the American Mission to Lepers, with headquarters in New York, which, though now separated from the London mission, cooperates with it in sending money for work in colonies scattered all over the world.

Whether curative treatment or isolation, or both, be applied, there is now enough knowledge and avowed purpose so that the objective of the motto, "Ridding the World of Leprosy," may well be achieved within a generation.

MY FRIENDS CONSIDER ME PRETTY

The Latest Developments of the Beauty Contest.

THE beauty contest is very popular these days. There are so many girls winning beauty contests that it is difficult to get all the dirigibles and the cavalry troops in the rotogravure section. There has been a noticeable decline of late in wild animals and unscaled mountains and even in those photos of actresses bringing their knees home from Europe. In fact, the prize beauty is to the picture page what the horse race and the burning oil well are to the news reel.

Alert business houses are quick to hire the good-looking stenographer, as she might always represent the company in some beauty contest, win it and get herself illustrated all over the country. This is very valuable publicity and it is absolutely free. People will write in: "Noted your beauty, Miss Verithik Roof, in yesterday's newspaper and would thank you to send representative around to give me an estimate on roofing the barn," also, "Kindly send me latest price list of your grate bars and boiler castings. Admired Miss National Steel Ingot and Iron Forging in this week's Home and Hamlet. P. S.—What would it cost to put up a new 30-foot smokestack on my brick kiln near the L. & O. tracks here?"

Employers prefer the girl that can combine her pulchritude with a little stage experience. If she wins a beauty contest she will have to make personal appearances at movie theaters, banquets and the like, where she will be expected to do something besides giggle at the master of ceremonies, twist her hands and rub the instep of one foot against the ankle of the other.

Thus, when a stenographer applies for a job, the boss will rock back and forth in his swivel chair, tell her to remove her hat and inspect her critically.

"CAN you sing, dance or tell stories?" he asks. "Maybe play the cornet?"

"Why—why, no," falters the girl, taken aback. "I understood from the large sign over the entrance that this was a lumber plant, not a night club. I'm not musical at all, so I guess I'd better be going. The only thing I can do in that line is span two octaves on the typewriter."

"You don't understand," says the boss patiently. "You're attractive enough to win a place or two in some of the beauty contests now under way and I'm trying to find out whether you have any special talents. We always like to have our girls do something besides pose," he explains gently, "and if you can't entertain I'll have to let you go. I'm sorry, miss, but those are my orders from higher up."

"Oh, I see," murmurs the applicant. She thinks for a moment, then snaps her fingers and exclaims: "By George, I could recite! I just happened to remember that I once played the leading lady in the annual production by our dramatic club at high school. Wouldn't that help?"

"Certainly!" cries the boss, seizing the house phone. "I'll put you to work right away. You ought to do well with us. You have gorgeous Titian hair, clear brown eyes, a nice complexion, and your smile—why, it's the most dazzling I've ever seen! Oh, yes, do you know shorthand?"

A beauty contest is being held at the plant and the girl is promptly crowned "Miss Q. K. Tie and Timber." From this humble beginning she gradually annexes the titles "Miss Fifth Precinct," "Miss Sixth Ward," "Miss Thompsonville," "Miss Thompson County," "Miss Nebraska," "Miss Wheat Belt" and finally "Miss Eighth Judicial Circuit."

Then other companies seek her out to impersonate their brands.

"How about punching the typewriter for the Tasty Products Company?" inquires a scout, stopping her as she leaves the lumber yard. "The hours are short, the pay is good and I'm sure you'd be perfectly crazy about our Mr. Walspflueger, who would be your boss."

"Listen, we want you to be 'Miss Tasty Catsup, Free of Artificial Coloring.'"

"You certainly have your good nerve if you expect me to do typing and take dictation," replies the girl scornfully. "The only way I win my prizes is through incessant training, and I have no time for the labor you mention. I spend each morning in the gymnasium and devote each afternoon to a beauty sleep. If I have any spare time I use it to try out new shampoos and vanishing creams."

"AW, I WAS only kidding about the work," pleads the scout. "Listen, we want you to be 'Miss Tasty Tomato Catsup, Free of Artificial Coloring.' Frankly, we think you are of 'Miss America' caliber. Wouldn't you like to win that honor and see them naming motor boats after you?"

The girl says she will think it over. However, her contest career is abruptly terminated by a wire inviting her out to Hollywood. The screen test is successful and she is cast in a big revue, where she plays the purple pigment in the rainbow number. Thus she attains the supreme goal of all serious prize beauties.

Some people feel that one girl shouldn't be allowed to win so many queenships. They contend that three titles are enough and that a girl should retire after this and give some of the other dolls a chance. Of course, this rule would be difficult to enforce, as some of the unscrupulous beauties would simply work for different companies under different names and nobody would know the difference. Hence demands are beginning to be made for a czar of beauty contests.

The experts have different ideas on how to pick beauties, but it generally resolves into a problem in geometry. Famous theatrical producers outline their methods something like this:

"Generally speaking, a line drawn from the level of the eyebrows to the base of the chin should be half as long as a line drawn from the lobe of the right ear to the tip of the left ear. The square root of the width of the eye is to the circumference of the nose as the diameter of the forehead is to the length of the face; inversely, a line connecting the extremities of the eyes with the tip of the nose should form an equilateral triangle whose base has a perimeter equal to the square root."

If these specifications are present, the girl is a knockout. Try it on yourself some time to see whether you have prize-winning features.

Ages ago, Rocky Mountain volcanoes cast off a whitish powder (Seismotite) which is now used as the base for Old Dutch. This mineral is a natural cleanser. That's why Old Dutch is so efficient.

Mining Seismotite from pure deposits for Old Dutch Cleanser. It is free from scratchy grit.

Old Dutch is a natural cleanser of distinctive character and quality. To the eye Old Dutch looks like a fine powder but the microscope shows that it really consists of flat, flaky particles. These tiny particles remove all uncleanliness without scratching.

Above is a microscopic photograph of Old Dutch Cleanser as it looks highly magnified. Soft, flaky, flat shaped particles. These particles remove all uncleanliness without scratching or marring the surface. Old Dutch is kind to the hands, too, doesn't irritate or roughen the skin.

Old Dutch Cleanser

and gives you the happy assurance of Healthful Cleanliness

Old Dutch cleans with a smooth, easy sweep. It doesn't scratch. It's free from grit.

Safe cleaning . . . that's the important question in present-day homes where lustrous surfaces and colorful equipment are so much in vogue. If beauty is to live, things must be safely cleaned . . . that's why millions of housewives use Old Dutch, the modern, perfect cleanser.

With Old Dutch, safety is inherent . . . an elemental part of its make-up . . . as distinctive of this natural cleanser as Healthful Cleanliness.

The very character of Old Dutch . . . soft, flaky, free from all destructive content . . . assures protection for fine, smooth surfaces, along with cleanliness that safeguards health.

Protects surfaces . . . because it's free from scratchy grit, acid and caustic. Safeguards health . . . because it cleans thoroughly; removes dangerous impurities you cannot see along with those you can see.

You can use Old Dutch with absolute safety for all household cleaning—for porcelain, enamel, tile, floors, windows, on any surface where water may be used. The ease with which it cleans will please you; so will the amount of work a little Old Dutch does. Keep a package in the bathroom, as well as in the kitchen and laundry. Old Dutch is your assurance of Healthful Cleanliness and the continued loveliness of lovely things.

Old Dutch Cleanser is economical because it goes further and lasts longer

1905 Old Dutch Cleanser on its 25th Anniversary celebrates the greatest achievement in modern cleaning efficiency - Healthful Cleanliness 1930

Old Dutch contains no scratchy grit or crude abrasives. Try this simple test. Sprinkle a little Old Dutch on the porcelain drain board of your sink; take a smooth coin, lay it on top of the cleanser and rub gently. You won't feel or hear the scratching of harsh, gritty particles. Avoid gritty cleansers.

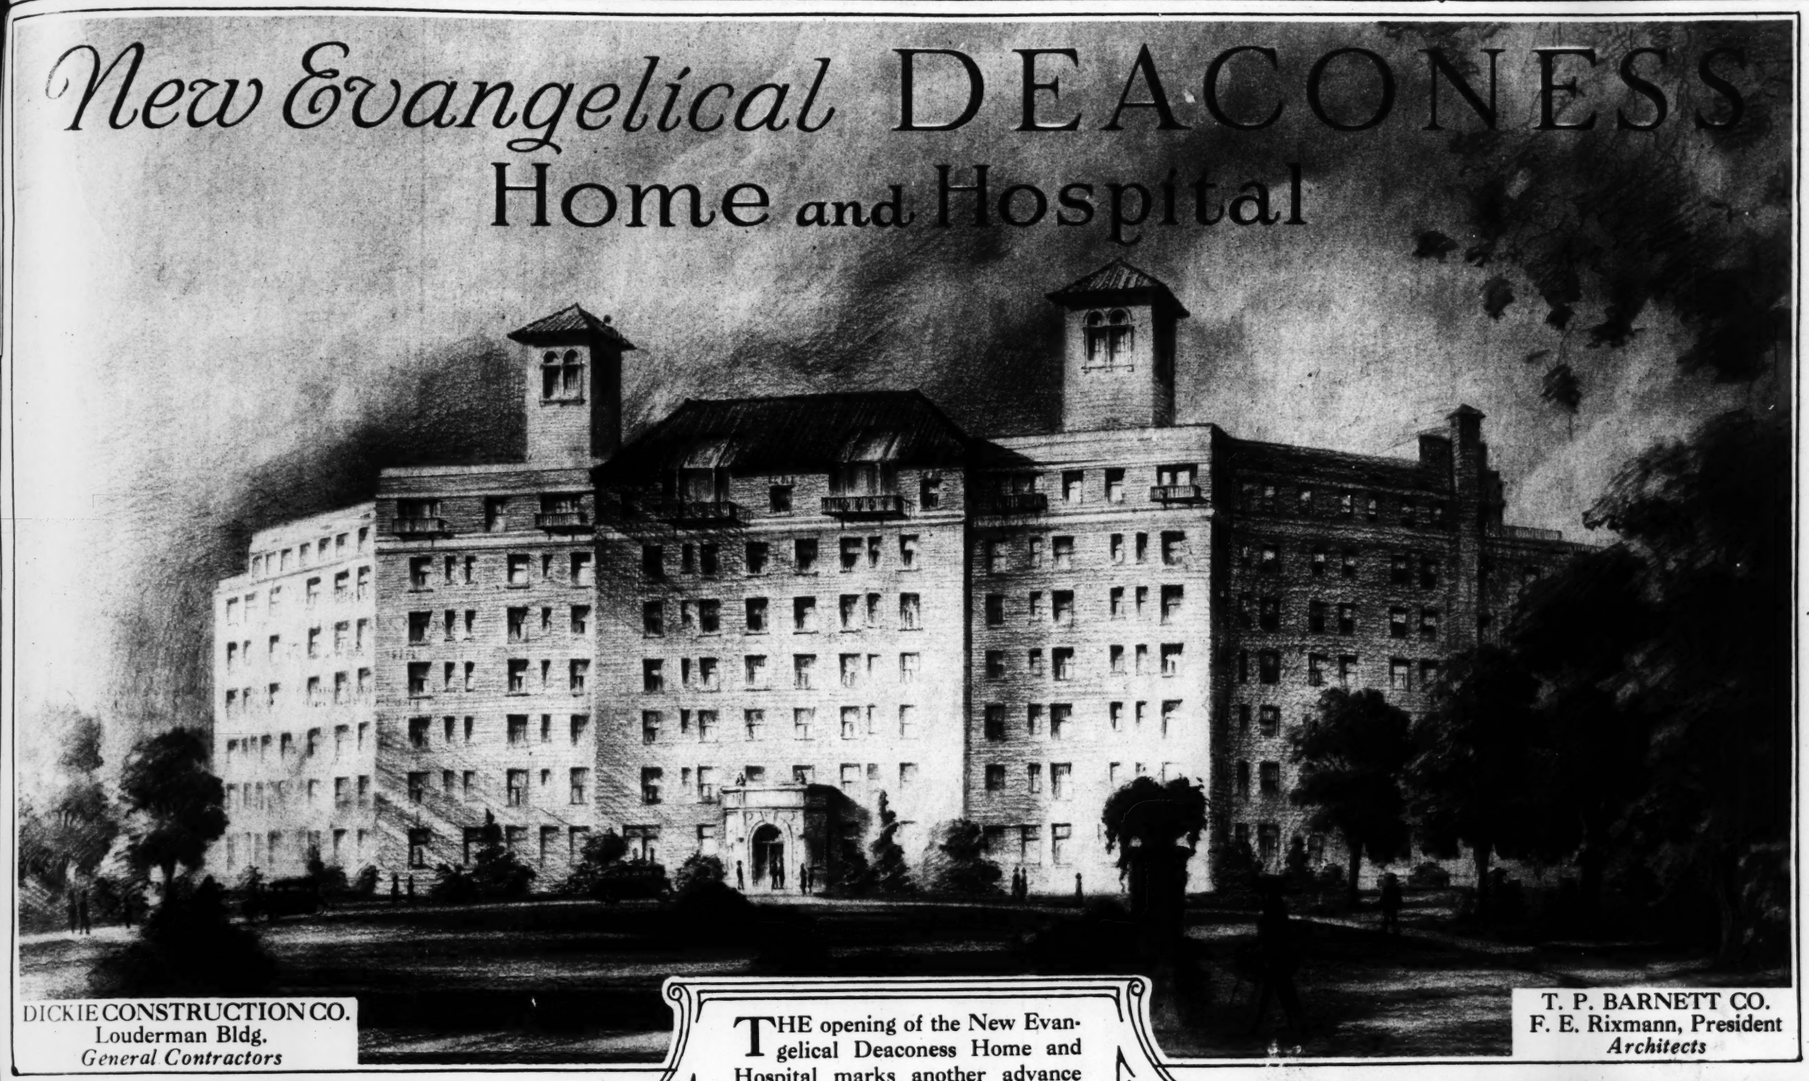
New Evangelical DEACONESS Home and Hospital



DICKIE CONSTRUCTION CO.
Louderman Bldg.

T. P. BARNETT CO.
F. E. Rixmann, President
Architects

THE opening of the New Evangelical Deaconess Home and Hospital marks another advance step in the service the Evangelical societies started with the first small structure of this character, erected in 1889. History pictures this as the fourth in the Evangelical building program in St. Louis.

The new million dollar, seven-story, modern "U" shaped building shown above overlooks Forest Park, facing Oakland Avenue at Clayton Avenue, on a tract of nearly five acres, has rooms for 230 patients. 70 rooms are to be used temporarily by deaconesses. The plant includes separate power house and laundry, with quarters for help.

In presenting these interior and exterior glimpses, showing the substantial construction, the well-planned appointments and the modern equipment, it is hoped that St. Louis may better understand what is being done to carry out the injunction to relieve suffering and care for the sick, the poor and the aged.

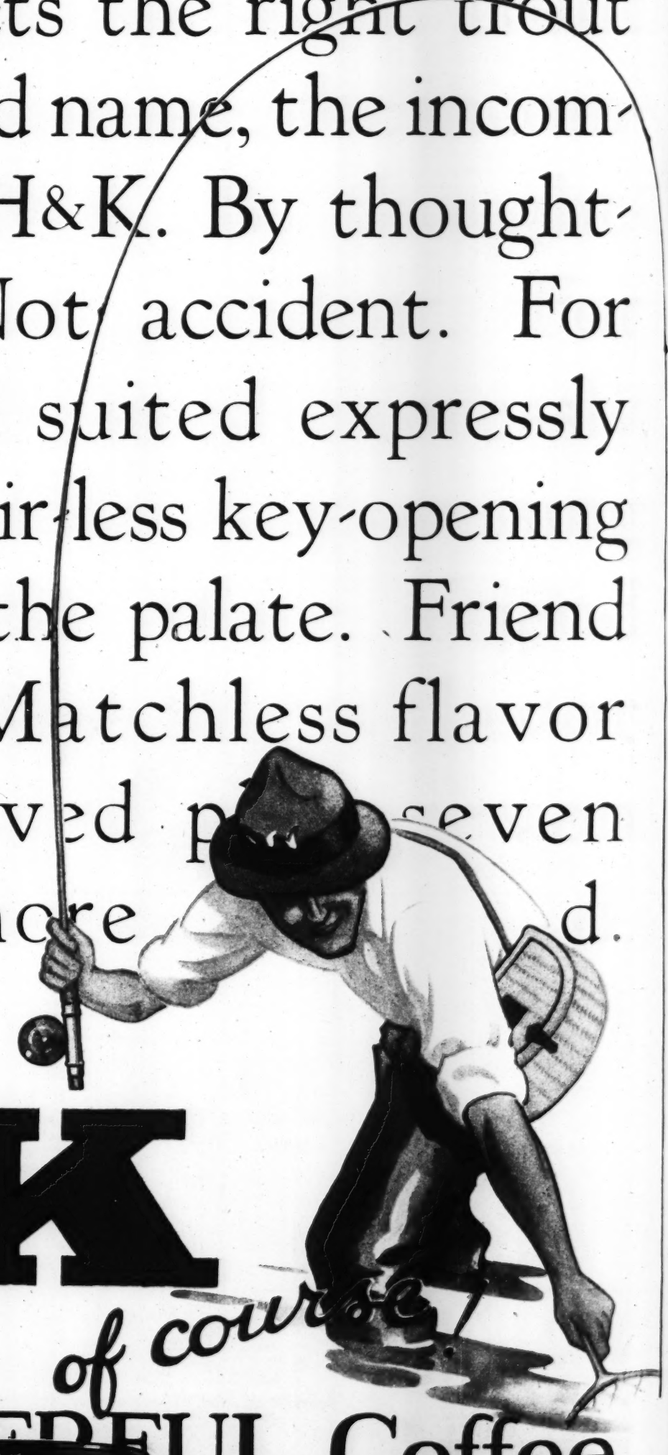
Cause and effect. Simple words that encompass all achievement. The right fly gets the right trout ...the right brand name, the incomparable coffee...H&K. By thoughtful selection. Not accident. For here is a blend suited expressly to the Kinsella air-less key-opening can. Friend to the palate. Friend to the purse. Matchless flavor wholly preserved p seven to ten cups mo d.



H&K of course!

ARCHIE - YOU'RE ENTITLED TO A RAISE IN SALARY - YOU ASK FOR ONE - THAT FIRM NEEDS YOU - THEY COULDN'T GET ALONG WITHOUT YOU.

WELL, I KNOW I'M VALUABLE.

ROSIE IS RIGHT - I'M ENTITLED TO A RAISE.

WHEN I THINK OF ALL THE WORK I DO I OUGHT TO BE GETTING TWICE AS MUCH AS I GET NOW.

BY JOVE - I'M GOING RIGHT IN AND DEMAND AN INCREASE IN SALARY.

IS THAT SO? WELL - YOU'RE FIRED - I DON'T NEED YOU - BESIDES I'M CUTTING DOWN MY FORCE - GOOD-BYE.

WELL - WHAT DO YOU WANT?

I JUST CAME IN TO SEE IF YOU WANTED ME TO FILL YOUR INK-WELL OR ANY-THING?

DEAR ME - I CAN'T GO TO THE OPERA TO-NIGHT - I FORGOT THAT I PROMISED MRS - WHIFFLEBERRY I WOULD CALL ON HER THIS EVENING.

NOW AIN'T THAT TOO BAD?

BUT THAT ISN'T GOING TO KEEP YOU FROM GOING - YOU GO AND I WANT YOU TO TELL ME ALL ABOUT IT - SO THAT I'LL KNOW YOU WERE THERE.

BUT - MAGGIE -

RATS - EVERYTHING SEEMS TO BE GITTIN' WORSE IN EVERY WAY FER ME.

BY GOLLY - THERE'S THAT OLD MAN - WHO SITS OUT IN FRONT OF HIS STORE ALL THE TIME - I'VE GOT AN IDEA.

HERE'S TWO TICKETS TO THE OPERA - TAKE SOME GUY WITH YOU - I'LL SEE YOU WHEN YOU GIT BACK.

ALL I WANT YOU TO DO IS TO TELL ME ABOUT IT.

TA-TA! AN' REMEMBER - THERE'S TEN BUCKS ALSO IN IT FOR YOU.

WELL - IT'S GITTIN' NEAR TIME FER THE OPERA TO BE LETTIN' OUT - SO I'LL HAVE TO BE GITTIN' ON ME WAY.

HE'S ALL IN.

THESE CARDS ARE SO DIRTY - I CAN'T TELL A HEART FROM A SPADE.

BUT YOU KNOW A SHOVEL WHEN YOU SEE ONE

WELL - NOW TO GIT A LINE ON THAT OPERA
